Source Note Information

A source note shows the legislative history of a C.R.S. section and is located immediately after the text of the section. The source note for each section indicates the year the section was added, each year it was amended, and the page of the Session Laws and the section of the bill where the amendment can be found. The source note includes the number of the section in prior codifications when applicable. For amendments made after 1973, information on each specific provision of the section that has been changed by a bill, the specific change to the provision (i.e. added, added with relocations, amended, amended with relocations, repealed, repealed and reenacted, or recreated and reenacted), and the effective date of the bill are shown.

The legislative history is arranged by year of passage; if the section was amended by two or more acts in the same year, the order of the information for that year is determined by the effective dates of the acts. The effective date in the source note indicates the date the act or portion of the act takes effect even if the text of the amendment indicates a different date. If the year is not included with the month and day, the provision is effective the year of passage. Additional information to assist the user in researching C.R.S. sections can be found beginning on page vii.

The following provides a further explanation of the information found in a source note:

“L.” is the symbol for “Session Laws” and will be followed by a number indicating the year when the C.R.S. section was changed by an act generally either creating new law, amending existing law, or repealing existing law; except that, in the constitution, “L.” also means constitutional measures referred by the General Assembly and voted on by the people of Colorado at a general or an odd-year election.

“Ex. Sess.” is the symbol for “Extraordinary Session”. If this symbol follows the year, the amended provision can be found in the Session Laws for an extraordinary session for that year and not in the Session Laws for the regular session of the General Assembly for that year (S, S2 in the Red Book).

“p.” is the symbol for “page” and will be followed by a number indicating the page of the Session Laws where the amendment to the C.R.S. section can be found.

“§” is the symbol for “section” and will be followed by a number indicating the section of the act where the amendment to the C.R.S. section can be found.

“IP” is the symbol for the “introductory portion” to a section, subsection, paragraph, or subparagraph.

“Added” means the provision was newly enacted by the act (N in the Red Book).

“Added with relocations” means the provision in existing law was relocated from one title, article, part, or section to another title, article, part, or section with amendments by the act.

“Amended” means the provision in existing law was amended by the act (A in the Red Book).

“Amended with relocations” means the provision in existing law was amended to reorganize an entire title, article, part, or section by the act.

“Repealed” means the provision was deleted from the existing law by the act through the use of a repeal provision (R in the Red Book).

“R&RE” is the symbol for “Repealed and Reenacted” and means the provision in existing law was repealed and reenacted by the act (RE in the Red Book).

“RC&RE” is the symbol for “Recreated and Reenacted” and means a previously repealed provision has been recreated by the act (RC in the Red Book).

“Added by revision” means a provision providing for the repeal of a statutory provision on a specified date has been added by the Revisor of Statutes as a C.R.S. provision. Adding the provision is necessary because a separate section of the act provided for the repeal of the provision with a future effective date.

“Initiated” means a provision that was amended by means of an initiated petition approved by a vote of the people of Colorado at a general or an odd-year election.

“Referred” means a provision that was amended by a measure referred by the General Assembly and voted on by the people of Colorado at a general or an odd-year election; except that, in the constitution, a referred measure is indicated by “L.” and also means constitutional measures referred by the General Assembly and voted on by the people of Colorado at a general or an odd-year election.

Starting in 2009, references to the bill number and chapter number have been included in the source note. If you are conducting a search on-line, the bill number reference within the source note links directly to the bill itself.

Colorado Statutory Research

Legislative history is not already written. It must be compiled by the researcher from many different sources and materials. The following information is a helpful starting point in identifying information you wish to research. Consult the red book table distributed with the session laws, the softbound editions of Colorado Revised Statutes beginning in 1997, the comparative tables located in the back of the C.R.S. index, C.R.S. 1963 and subsequent cumulative supplements thereto through 1971, and C.R.S. 1973 and annual cumulative supplements thereto through 1996.

Prior to 1921, enacted laws were not compiled into a comparative table, thereby making it more difficult to track the legislative history. Determining the subject matter in the statutory index is the only choice for tracking the history of a statute since a statute did not retain its original number. The General Statutes of 1883 arranged laws into numbered chapters, alphabetically entitled, collated, and arranged by sections. This became the foundation and model for compiling the statutes until the codification of C.R.S. 1973. (See Revised Statutes of Colorado 1908, An Act Providing For the Compilation, Publication, and Distribution of all the general statutes of the state.)

References in some source notes throughout the Colorado Revised Statutes to “Code 08”, “Code 21”, and “Code 35” are to the Revised Statutes of Colorado 1908, the Compiled Laws of Colorado 1921, and the Colorado Statutes Annotated 1935, respectively. Each of these volumes set forth the general statutes of the state of Colorado, including the Code of Civil Procedure and, in 1935, the Colorado Supreme Court Rules. On January 6, 1941, the Colorado Supreme Court adopted the new Rules of Civil Procedure, which became effective on April 6, 1941, resulting in the publication of a replacement volume. Thereafter, the publication of the Colorado Court Rules, although a continuing part of the Colorado Revised Statutes, contained a combination of the Federal Rules and the Colorado Code of Civil Procedure and, in addition, included some provisions that were entirely distinct from both the Federal Rules and the Colorado Code of Civil Procedure, as adopted or amended by the Supreme Court of Colorado.

To research a statute as it existed in previous years, the following is a chronological list of C.R.S. publications and the correct citation for each publication.

- 1969 hardbound supplement containing laws enacted in 1968 and 1969
- 1971 hardbound supplement containing laws enacted in 1970 and 1971

The softbound publication of the “Official Report of the Committee on Legal Services” was not intended as an official publication of our office. Copies were distributed to the members of the General Assembly for the purpose of certifying the laws enacted in the 1972 and 1973 Sessions for inclusion in the compilation of the 1973 C.R.S., which was not available until 1974. To find the 1972 or 1973 amended language, refer to the session laws of either 1972 or 1973.

Bills Enacted Without A Safety Clause
Explanation of Effective Date

If a bill is enacted without a safety clause and an effective date is not indicated in the bill, the effective date is the day following the expiration of the ninety-day period after final adjournment of the General Assembly that is allowed for submitting a referendum petition pursuant to article V, section 1 (3) of the state Constitution unless a referendum petition is filed against the act within such time period. If a referendum petition is filed, the act, if approved by the people, will take effect on the date of the official declaration of the vote thereon by proclamation of the Governor or the date indicated in the act if it is later than the Governor’s proclamation. The source note for a provision contained in such an act will indicate the actual date following the ninety-day period or the date set out in the act. If a referendum petition is filed, the date in the source note will be adjusted accordingly in the next publication following the election where the referendum petition is considered.

Annotations

Beginning in 2012, the annotations for Colorado state appellate court decisions include both public domain and regional reporter case cites. In preparing annotations to court decisions, we endeavor to include the most recent decisions. Occasionally, this may result in the inclusion of a decision before it becomes finalized and published in an official reporter. In such instances, the case cite will contain blank spaces for the volume and page number of the reporter. The volume and page number will be substituted for the blank spaces in subsequent publications of the statutes.

ANNOTATION

Books of court are admissible as evidence. If the county court permits one of the books of its office to be taken into another court as evidence, the objection that the original, and not a certified copy, is produced is not tenable. McAllister v. People ex rel. Brisbane, 28 Colo. 156, 63 P. 308 (1900).

13-1-102. Entries in records. In said indexes, the clerks shall properly enter the title of each cause or matter instituted in said courts and the case number references to the various orders, rulings, judgments, papers, and other proceedings of the court in such cause or matter. Any case number reference may be to a file jacket, page in a record book, microfilm record, or computer record.

13-1-103. Lost or destroyed records. When the record of any judgment, or decree, or other proceeding of any judicial court of this state, or any part of the record of any judicial proceeding has been lost or destroyed, any party or person interested therein, on application by complaint in writing under oath to such court and on showing to the satisfaction of such court that the same has been lost or destroyed without fault or negligence of the party or person making such application, may obtain an order from such court authorizing the defect to be supplied by a duly certified copy of the original record, where the same can be obtained, which certificate shall thereafter have the same effect as the original record would have had in all respects.

13-1-104. Application for new order or record. When the loss or destruction of any record or part thereof has happened, and such defects cannot be supplied as provided in section 13-1-103, any party or person interested therein may make a written application to the court to which such record belonged, verified by affidavit, showing the loss or destruction thereof, and that certified copies thereof cannot be obtained by the party or person making such application, and the substance of the record so lost or destroyed, and that the loss or destruction occurred without the fault or negligence of the party or person making such application, and that the loss or destruction of the record, unless supplied, will or may result in damage to the party or person making such application. The court shall cause said application to be entered of record in said court, and due notice of said application shall be given by personal service of summons or by publication as in other cases; except that, in cases in which publication is required, the court may direct by order, to be entered of record, the form of the notice, and designate the newspaper in which the same shall be published. If, upon such hearing, said court is satisfied that the statements contained in said application are true, the court shall make an order embracing the substance and effect of the lost or destroyed record, which order shall be entered of record in said court and have the same effect which the original record would have had if the same had not been lost or destroyed insofar as concerns the party or person making such application and the persons who had been notified, as provided for in this section. The record in all cases where the proceeding was in rem and no personal service was had may be supplied upon like notice, as nearly as may be, as in the original proceeding.

13-1-105. Procedure where probate records destroyed. In case of the destruction by fire or otherwise of the records, or a part thereof, of any court having probate jurisdiction, the court may proceed, upon its own motion or upon the application in writing of any party in interest, to restore the records, papers, and proceedings of the court relating to the estate of deceased persons, including recorded wills and wills probated or filed for probate in said court. The power of restoration granted in this section shall also extend to the records, papers, proceedings, and documents of any previous court of probate which are or should be in the custody of a probate or district court. For the purpose of restoring said records, wills, papers, or proceedings, or any part thereof, the court may cause citations to be issued to all parties to be designated by it and may compel the attendance in court of any witness whose testimony may be necessary to establish any such record, or part thereof, and the production of any and all written and documentary evidence which it deems necessary in determining the true import and effect of the original record, will, paper, or other document belonging to the files of the court, and may make such orders and decrees establishing such original record, will, paper, document, or proceeding, or the substance thereof, as to it seems just and proper. The court may make all such rules and regulations governing the proceedings for the restoration of the record, will, paper, document, and proceeding pertaining to the court as in its judgment will best secure the rights and protect the interests of all parties concerned.

13-1-106. Certified copy of record in supreme court or court of appeals. In all causes which have been removed to the supreme court of this state or to the court of appeals, a duly certified copy of the record of such cause remaining in the supreme court or the court of appeals may be filed in the court from which said cause was removed, on motion of any party or person claiming to be interested therein, and the copy so filed shall have the same effect as the original record would have had if the same had not been lost or destroyed.

13-1-108. Judge may order adjournment. When in the opinion of the judge of any district or county court it is unnecessary or inadvisable to hold or convene any term of court fixed by statute, he may by an order in writing signed by him and filed with the clerk of such court adjourn the same sine die, or to a day certain, and the judges of said courts respectively have power to adjourn said courts, from time to time as may seem advisable, by written order signed and filed with the clerk of the court which may be so adjourned.

13-1-109. Court may appoint trustee. In all actions in any court of record of this state wherein any defendant is not found within the jurisdiction of the court and constructive service alone is had, and which is brought for the enforcement of an express, implied, or resulting trust, or for the removal of cloud from title to real estate, or for specific performance, or for the establishment of a lost or destroyed deed, conveyance, or instrument in writing, or for the establishment and proof of any conveyance, deed, or instrument in writing not properly proved and acknowledged, or in any other proceeding in rem, or affecting only specific property, where, according to the usual practice in courts of chancery, the court, if the defendant had been personally served, might direct or decree any act to be done or performed by the defendant in favor of plaintiff, the court may appoint a trustee for such defendant to do and perform in the place and stead of and for such defendant the acts required by the decree rendered in any such cause. Any act lawfully done by such trustee, under and in pursuance of any such decree, shall be as binding and effectual for all purposes as if done and performed by the defendant in pursuance of such decree.

13-1-110. Appeal bond defective or insufficient. If, at any time pending an appeal in any action, suit, or other proceeding, it appears to the appellate court that the appeal bond or undertaking is defective or insufficient or that any surety thereon has died, or has removed or is about to remove from this state, or has become or is likely to become insolvent, such appellate court shall order another appeal bond or undertaking, or such other and further security as to the appellate court seems proper, if the appellant or his attorney of record has been served with at least twenty-four hours' written notice of an application of the appellee for such order. If the appellant fails to comply with said order within ten days after the making of the same, the appeal shall be dismissed.

ANNOTATION

The appellate court has full powers of determining the sufficiency of appeal bonds. Brown v. Ohman, 93 Colo. 561, 27 P.2d 588 (1933).

An objection to the sufficiency of an appeal bond in a lower court cannot be raised for first time on review. Brown v. Ohman, 93 Colo. 561, 27 P.2d 588 (1933).

In effect this section abolishes motions to dismiss appeals for insufficient bond, and substitutes a motion for new bond, and where no such motion is filed, a motion to dismiss for defective bond is properly overruled. Peters v. Peters, 82 Colo. 503, 261 P. 874 (1927).

Powers of appellate court. The appellate court can set the amount of an appeal bond, order an additional surety, or approve the signature of a new surety on an old bond. Brown v. Ohman, 93 Colo. 561, 27 P.2d 588 (1933).

Court can provide for addition of new sureties. If, after the approval of an appeal bond, it is found that a surety is insufficient, this section provides for the addition of new sureties, even after appeal. Zimmerman v. Combs, 91 Colo. 313, 14 P.2d 693 (1932).

The fact that a new surety signed the first bond instead of new one is immaterial. Where on appeal the surety on the bond died and another was procured, the fact that the latter, through inadvertence, signed the first instead of the new bond, was held immaterial, where the bond signed had endorsed thereon the approval of the court clerk. Brown v. Ohman, 93 Colo. 561, 27 P.2d 588 (1933).

Filing appeal bond without order fixing amount does not nullify appeal. Where on appeal from county to district court, the county judge entered an order reciting the filing of an appeal bond and its approval, the mere fact that there was no order fixing the amount of the bond did not nullify the appeal. Brown v. Ohman, 93 Colo. 561, 27 P.2d 588 (1933).

Appeal bond as used in this statute means the cost bond described by C.A.R. 7 and not a supersedeas bond. Hart v. Schwab, 990 P. 2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1999).

13-1-111. Courts of record. (1) Each of the following courts shall have a seal and shall be a court of record:

- (a) The supreme court;
- (b) The district courts;
- (c) The county courts;
- (d) The juvenile court in the city and county of Denver;
- (e) The probate court in the city and county of Denver;

ANNOTATION

The acts of a court of record are known by its records. Judicial records are not only necessary but indispensable to the administration of justice. The court judgments can be evidenced only by its records. The acts of a court of record are known by its records alone and cannot be established by parol testimony. The court speaks only through its records, and the judge speaks only through the court. Herren v. People, 147 Colo. 442, 363 P.2d 1044 (1961).

13-1-112. Clerk to keep seal. The clerk of each court of record shall keep the seal thereof.

13-1-113. Seal - how attached. (1) A seal of a court or public officer, when required on any writ, process, or proceeding or to authenticate a copy of any record or document, may be impressed with wax, wafer, or any other substance and then attached to the writ, process, or proceeding or to the copy of the record or document, or it may be impressed on the paper alone or electronically attached to or logically associated with an electronic record or document. When jury summonses, subpoenas, or subpoenas duces tecum are prepared by means of mechanical reproduction, the seal of the summoning court may be printed thereon instead of being impressed.

(2) A seal may also consist of a rubber stamp with a facsimile affixed thereon of the seal required to be used and may be placed or stamped upon the document requiring the seal with indelible ink.

13-1-114. Powers of court. (1) Every court has power:

- (a) To preserve and enforce order in its immediate presence;
- (b) To enforce order in the proceedings before it or before a person empowered to conduct a judicial investigation under its authority;
- (c) To compel obedience to its lawful judgments, orders, and process and to the lawful orders of its judge out of court in action or proceeding pending therein;
- (d) To control, in furtherance of justice, the conduct of its ministerial officers.

(2) Any judge of any court, when he reasonably believes that there is a risk of violence in the court, shall immediately advise the law enforcement agency designated to provide security for the court, and the law enforcement agency shall determine and provide appropriate security measures consistent with the degree of risk present. For the purpose of this subsection (2), a district or county judge shall have the assistance of the county sheriff, and a municipal judge shall have the assistance of the municipal police department. The court shall have discretion to assess all or part of the expense incurred in implementing such security measures as costs to be paid by the party or parties or other person or persons determined by the court to have necessitated such security measures.

(3) Any county sheriff or municipal peace officer providing security for persons involved in judicial proceedings in courts pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall be immune from civil liability for damages except for gross negligence or reckless, wanton, or intentional misconduct.

ANNOTATION

A county's duties under subsection (2) may not be reduced or ended pursuant to art. X, § 20(9) of the state constitution. State v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, Mesa County, 897 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1995).

Applied in Campbell v. District Court, 304 Colo. 195, 577 P.2d 1096 (1978).

13-1-115. Courts may issue proper writs. The courts have power to issue all writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of the power conferred on them by the constitution and laws of this state. The district courts have authority in ne exeat proceedings according to the usual practice in such cases in courts of chancery.

Source: L. 1887: p. 217, § 434. L. 1891: p. 85, § 1. Code 08: § 469. Code 21: § 470. Code 35: § 470. CRS 53: § 37-1-16. C.R.S. 1963: § 37-1-16.

ANNOTATION

The court, in a civil action, has authority to issue a writ of ne exeat to protect the interests of a litigant. Struble v. Hicks, 123 Colo. 16, 224 P.2d 932 (1950) (decided under repealed § 31 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935, which was similar to this section).

C.R.C.P. 106 merely abolished the form and not the substance of the remedial writs such as the writ of ne exeat. A district court still possesses the authority to issue a writ in the nature of ne exeat, which is designed to prevent a person from leaving the court's jurisdiction. In re People ex rel. B.C., 981 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

13-1-116. Courts sit at county seat. Every court of record shall sit at the county seat of the county in which it is held, except as may be otherwise provided by law.

ANNOTATION

A district court can be in session only in its own county. State Bank v. Plummer, 46 Colo. 71, 102 P. 1082 (1909) (decided under repealed provisions antecedent to § 25 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935).

Moving trial to hospital to hear closing arguments, give instructions to jury, and allow jury to deliberate because of a seriously ill juror did not deprive court of jurisdiction and retrial will not constitute double jeopardy. People v. Higa, 735 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1987).

Section 13-5-119 (2) is an exception to the county seat requirement in this section. City of Littleton v. County Comm'rs, 787 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1990).

13-1-117. Juridical days. The courts of justice may be held and judicial business may be transacted on any day except as provided in section 13-1-118.

Source: L. 1887: p. 213, § 415. Code 08: § 450. Code 21: § 452. Code 35: § 452. CRS 53: § 37-1-19. C.R.S. 1963: § 37-1-19.

ANNOTATION

There can be no exceptions to statutory days of judicial business. When the law has prescribed a time and place at which the judicial business of the county must be transacted, there can be no exception to the provision, unless it is expressly made by statute. State Bank v.

Plummer, 46 Colo. 71, 102 P. 1082 (1909); Scott v. Stutheit, 21 Colo. App. 28, 121 P. 151 (1912) (decided under repealed provisions antecedent to § 25 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935).

13-1-118. Judicial holidays. (1) No court shall be opened nor shall any judicial business be transacted on Sunday or any legal holiday except for the following purposes:

- (a) To give, upon their request, instruction to a jury then deliberating on their verdict;
- (b) To receive a verdict or discharge a jury;
- (c) For the exercise of the powers of a judge in a criminal action or in a proceeding of a criminal nature;
- (d) When it appears by the affidavit of the plaintiff, or someone in his behalf, in cases for the recovery of specific personal property, that the defendant is about to conceal, dispose of, or remove such property out of the jurisdiction of the court, an order for taking possession of the same may be issued and the writ or process executed on any day;
- (e) When an application for writ of attachment is made, if it shall appear by the affidavit of the plaintiff, or someone in his behalf, that the defendant is about to dispose of, conceal, or remove property subject to execution or attachment out of the jurisdiction of the court, a writ of attachment may be issued and executed on any day.
- (2) When the day fixed for the opening of a court falls on any of the days mentioned in this section, the court shall stand adjourned until the next succeeding day.

Source: L. 1887: p. 213, § 416. Code 08: § 451. Code 21: §§ 451, 453. Code 35: § 453. CRS 53: § 37-1-20. C.R.S. 1963: § 37-1-20.

ANNOTATION

Verdicts may be received on a judicial holiday. Receiving a verdict is a ministerial act performed for the jury in a judicial proceeding. The weight of authority is to the end that verdicts, the result of trials started and concluded before Sunday, may be received on Sunday and statutory holidays. Carr v. People, 99 Colo. 477, 63 P.2d 1221 (1936) (decided under repealed § 23 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935, which was similar to this section).

Judgment entered on legal holiday not void and becomes effective next business day. Subsection (1) does not provide that any judicial business transacted in violation of its provisions is void. Rather, the statute is silent as to the effect of any order entered or other judicial business transacted in violation of its prohibitions. Subsection (2) provides that the effect of having a day fixed for the opening of a court that falls on a prohibited day is that "the court shall stand adjourned until the next succeeding day.” Thus, the effect of the trial court’s entry of an order reviving judgment on a legal holiday was not to invalidate the order but, rather, merely to postpone its effective date until the next day the courts were open. Arvada 1st Indus. Bank v. Hutchison, 15 P.3d 292 (Colo. App. 2000).

13-1-119. Judgment record and register of actions open for inspection. The judgment record and register of actions shall be open at all times during office hours for the inspection of the public without charge, and it is the duty of the clerk to arrange the several records kept by him in such manner as to facilitate their inspection. In addition to paper records, such information may also be presented on microfilm or computer terminal.

Source: L. 1887: p. 166, § 231. Code 08: § 250. Code 21: § 251. Code 35: § 251. CRS 53: § 37-1-21. C.R.S. 1963: § 37-1-21. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 596, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

The court did not err by taking judicial notice of defendant’s probation status after determining the status from the state computer system. Since this section and Crim. P. 55 expressly approve of records kept and maintained in a state computer system, the court may take judicial notice of the court records contained in the system. People v. Linares-Guzman, 195 P.3d 1130 (Colo. App. 2008).

13-1-119.5. Electronic access to name index and register of actions. (1) Statewide electronic read-only access to the name index and register of actions of public case types shall be made available to the following agencies or attorneys appointed by the court:

(a) County departments as defined in section 19-1-103 (32), C.R.S., and attorneys who represent the county departments as county attorneys, as defined in section 19-1-103 (31.5), C.R.S., as it relates to the attorneys’ work representing the county;

(b) The office of the state public defender, created in section 21-1-101, C.R.S.;

(c) Guardians ad litem under contract with the office of the child’s representative, created in section 13-91-104, or authorized by the office of the child’s representative to act as a guardian ad litem, as it relates to a case in which they are appointed by the court;

(d) Attorneys under contract with the office of the alternate defense counsel, created in section 21-2-101, C.R.S., as it relates to a case in which they are appointed by the court;

(e) Respondent parent counsel appointed by the court and paid by the judicial department as it relates to a case in which they are appointed by the court; and

(f) Criminal justice agencies as described in section 24-72-302 (3), C.R.S.

(2) The supreme court may adopt rules regarding access to the name index and register of actions, including rules identifying confidential information maintained in the system and state requirements for using the confidential information. All agencies with access pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall ensure that individuals who use the system receive training on appropriate usage and confidentiality of register of action information. Additionally, the state court administrator may monitor the use of the system and information through audits and the review of ad hoc queries or reports.

13-1-120. Proceedings in English - abbreviations. Every written proceeding in a court of justice in this state, or before a judicial officer, shall be in the English language, but such abbreviations as are now commonly used in that language may be used, and numbers expressed by figures or numerals in the customary manner.

ANNOTATION

The translation of instructions into Spanish for the use and instruction of a juror understanding that language alone would not be inhibited by the spirit of this section. The object of the provision is to secure a record in English, and this would in nowise be defeated. Trinidad v. Simpson, 5 Colo. 65 (1879) (decided under repealed provisions antecedent to § 18 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935).

13-1-121. Action not affected by vacancy. No action or proceeding in a court of justice in this state shall be affected by a vacancy in the office of any of the judges, or by failure of a term thereof.

13-1-122. When judge shall not act unless by consent. A judge shall not act as such in any of the following cases: In an action or proceeding to which he is a party, or in which he is interested; when he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity in the third degree; or when he has been attorney or counsel for either party in the action or proceeding, unless by consent of all parties to the action.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-1-122 is similar to repealed provisions antecedent to § 28 of appendix B, R.C.P. Colo., CSA, 1935, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

A judge must disqualify himself if he has a private interest. Any personal or private interest within this statute or rule would disqualify the county judge as the trial judge, and his refusal to remove himself as the trial judge would be grounds for reversal. Any action involving a situation where the trial judge may benefit in a pecuniary way depending upon his decision would be a prime example of a situation in which a trial judge would have no alternative other than to disqualify himself. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

Generally, a judge has a discretionary prerogative in the area of public interest. In the area of public interest, a judge upon being challenged, may in his discretionary prerogative remove himself, but if he refuses, his decision will not be reversed unless it is shown convincingly that his interest was so intense that a probability existed that his decision would be tainted. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

A differentiation must be made between a judge's private and public interest. In considering the trial court's purported interest in the subject and outcome of the school bond election contest, it is necessary to differentiate between a "private" interest and a "public" interest in the controversy and the outcome. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

Public interest as a citizen is not grounds for disqualification. An interest which a judge may have as a citizen in a public question or issue is no basis per se for his removal as the trial judge in an action contesting an election determinative of the public question or issue. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

A public interest is an interest shared by citizens generally in the affairs of local, state, or national government, and is not the same character of interest which compels disqualification as would a private interest. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

Interest in bond election may be so great so as to make it private interest. The attached affidavits and exhibits are insufficient to show that the county judge who was a qualified tax-paying elector, and who voted for and publicly approved the new school and bond issue, had such an interest in the bond election contest, or that he was so prejudiced against the contest action that he should have as a matter of law disqualified himself. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

Generally, obligations as taxpayer are not grounds for disqualification. The personal effect upon the trial judge, who as the owner of property would be charged with the obligation of the school bonds, is a pecuniary advantage or disadvantage so contingent, speculative, and remote as to be of no consequence. Public improvements, like new school buildings, may have the effect of increasing the tax obligation on real property but they also result in increasing the value of the property so that it is therefore next to impossible to state as a matter of certainty that a public improvement will be a disadvantage or advantage to any given piece of property. Russell v. Wheeler, 165 Colo. 296, 439 P.2d 43 (1968).

Whether to disqualify himself in a civil case is a question within the discretion of the trial judge, and the judge's ruling on that issue will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion. Colo. State Bd. of Agriculture v. First Nat'l Bank, 671 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1983).

A judge, having been of counsel for either party in the previous trial of the action, is under this section clearly disqualified from acting as judge in the trial of the case, and, where the disqualification is not waived by consent of the party he represented as counsel, has no authority to act judicially therein. O'Connell v. Gavett, 7 Colo. 40, 1 P. 902 (1883).

He must by his own motion certify this to the district court. Under this section, a county judge who has acted as counsel in behalf of either litigant is not only disqualified from hearing motions to set aside judgments, but it is his duty on his own motion to certify the matters to the district court. People ex rel. Brown v. District Court, 26 Colo. 226, 56 P. 1115 (1899).

Applied in Zoline v. Telluride Lodge Ass'n, 732 P.2d 635 (Colo. 1987).

13-1-123. Transfer of civil actions. When in any civil action pending in any court of record, whether filed as a special statutory proceeding, or otherwise, if for any reason the proceedings could be more expeditiously continued in another county, with the express consent of all parties, the court may order the cause transferred to any other county wherein the court finds the proceedings could be more expeditiously continued. No additional docket fee shall be required. Upon such a transfer being ordered, the clerk shall transfer all files, books, and records of the cause, or, if that is not practicable, he shall make, at the expense of the parties, and send to the clerk of the court to which the cause is transferred a certified copy of all records in the cause which are necessary for the continuation of the proceedings in the court to which such cause is transferred, and the cause shall continue in the court to which it is transferred with the same effect and force as though such cause were originally docketed in such court.

13-1-123.5. Transfer of venue - actions involving related persons. In addition to the authority to change venue granted by sections 19-2-105 and 19-3-201, C.R.S., for good cause shown, a court, on its own motion, on the motion of another court in this state, or on the motion of a party or guardian ad litem, may order the transfer of a pending action brought under title 14 or title 19, C.R.S., or rule 365 of the Colorado rules of county court civil procedure to a court in another county when there is an action pending in the other county that names the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child who is the subject of the action brought under title 14 or title 19, C.R.S. The county to which the action is being transferred must be one in which venue is proper. Upon an order for such transfer, the transferring court shall notify all parties of the transfer and transmit all documents to the receiving court. The transferred action shall continue in the court to which it is transferred with the same force and effect as though originally docketed in the receiving court.

13-1-124. Jurisdiction of courts. (1) Engaging in any act enumerated in this section by any person, whether or not a resident of the state of Colorado, either in person or by an agent, submits such person and, if a natural person, such person's personal representative to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state concerning any cause of action arising from:

- (a) The transaction of any business within this state;
- (b) The commission of a tortious act within this state;
- (c) The ownership, use, or possession of any real property situated in this state;

(d) Contracting to insure any person, property, or risk residing or located within this state at the time of contracting;

(e) The maintenance of a matrimonial domicile within this state with respect to all issues relating to obligations for support to children and spouse in any action for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, declaration of invalidity of marriage, or support of children if one of the parties of the marriage continues without interruption to be domiciled within the state;

(f) The engaging of sexual intercourse in this state as to an action brought under article 4 or article 6 of title 19, C.R.S., with respect to a child who may have been conceived by that act of intercourse, as set forth in verified petition; or

(g) The entering into of an agreement pursuant to part 2 or 5 of article 22 of this title.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For note, "One Year Review of Colorado Law — 1964", see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965). For comment discussing the impact of Shaffer v. Heitner (433 U.S. 186, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed.2d 683 (1977)) on state long arm statute, see 55 Den. L.J. 365 (1978). For article, "Federal Practice and Procedure", see 56 Den. L.J. 491 (1979). For article, "Jurisdiction and Service of Process Beyond Colorado Boundaries", see 11 Colo. Law. 648 (1982). For article, "Legislative Activities in Family Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 1560 (1982). For article, "Federal Practice and Procedure", which discusses a recent Tenth Circuit decision dealing with in personam jurisdiction, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 219 (1985).

This section and § 13-1-125 are sometimes referred to as the "long arm" or "single act" statute. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966); Cox v. District Court, 160 Colo. 437, 417 P.2d 792 (1966); Geer Co. v. District Court, 172 Colo. 48, 469 P.2d 734 (1970).

Section is procedural, not substantive. This statute, an example of "long arm" statutes, is "procedural" rather than "substantive" and may operate retrospectively. Its effect is not to create a right or liability where none existed before; its only effect is to broaden the procedure whereby one seeking redress against an alleged tortfeasor may compel him to answer in the forum initially determined by the plaintiff to be the most convenient. Smith v. Putnam, 250 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1965).

Section merely establishes a new mode of obtaining jurisdiction of the person of the defendant in order to secure existing rights. Smith v. Putnam, 250 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1965).

Section was passed by the general assembly in order to extend rather than to limit the jurisdiction of the courts of the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Due process inquiry is all that is necessary. By extending jurisdiction to the maximum limits permissible under the United States and Colorado Constitutions, the general assembly obviated the need for further statutory analysis. New Frontier Media, Inc. v. Freeman, 85 P.3d 611 (Colo. App. 2003).

Federal court's jurisdiction in diversity cases. In diversity cases, the federal district court's jurisdiction is coextensive with the state court's. Ruggieri v. Gen. Well Serv., Inc., 535 F. Supp. 525 (D. Colo. 1982).

Jurisdiction based on facts at time of complaint. An amendment of a pleading to justify long arm jurisdiction must be based on facts existing at the time the complaint was filed. Jenkins v. Glen & Helen Aircraft, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 118, 590 P.2d 983 (1979).

Personal jurisdiction and venue distinguished. Personal jurisdiction is a question of the court's power to exercise control over defendants while venue is primarily a matter of choosing a convenient forum. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Resolution of personal jurisdiction generally takes precedence over the determination of the propriety of venue. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Resolution of jurisdictional issues under section frequently involves an ad hoc analysis of the facts. Waterval v. District Court, 620 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 960, 101 S. Ct. 3108, 69 L. Ed.2d 971 (1981).

Privilege defenses such as lack of personal jurisdiction or improper venue may be lost by failure to assert them seasonably, by formal submission in a cause, or by submission through conduct. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Mere filing of or participation in motion does not necessarily entail waiver to defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction or improper venue. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Request for award of attorney fees, as part of motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, does not constitute a general appearance and does not waive defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. Defendants did not seek affirmative relief; rather, they only defended against plaintiff's claims. Gognat v. Ellsworth, 224 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 259 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2011).

For discussion of conspiracy theory of personal jurisdiction, see Bennett Waites Corp. v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 810 (D. Colo. 1983).

Section need not be relied on when service is made inside Colorado. It is not necessary to rely on "long arm" statute to sustain jurisdiction of district court over foreign corporation where service of process was not made outside of state, but was made upon agent of foreign corporation in the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Jurisdiction over foreign corporation where personal service effected in state. Colorado state courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation qualified to do business in the state where personal service on the foreign corporation is effected within the state, regardless of the fact that the cause of action does not arise out of the foreign corporation's business activity within the state, but, to the contrary, arises out of a transaction occurring in another state. Budde v. Kentron Hawaii, Ltd., 565 F.2d 1145 (10th Cir. 1977).

Burden imposed upon one who seeks remedy under long arm statute is to allege in complaint sufficient facts to support reasonable inference that defendants engaged in conduct described in statute which subjects them to in personam jurisdiction. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. Dis- trict Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973); Jenkins v. Glen & Helen Aircraft, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 118, 590 P.2d 983 (1979); Shon v. District Court, 199 Colo. 90, 605 P.2d 472 (1980).

This section requires purposeful acts performed within forum state by defendant in relation to the contract. Weyrich v. Lively, 361 F. Supp. 1147 (D. Colo. 1973).

Prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction is sufficient and may be determined from allegations of complaint. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

A plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction, which may be determined from the allegations of the complaint, to withstand defendant's motion to dismiss under, C.R.C.P. 12(b)(2). Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 409, 566 P.2d 1067 (1977).

In determining whether a prima facie showing has been established, it is appropriate to consider the allegations of the complaint as well as any other evidence adduced at the hearing on the motion to dismiss. Fleet Leasing, Inc. v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982).

A party may make the required prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction by alleging jurisdictional facts in the complaint, by submitting affidavits, or presenting evidence at the hearing on the motion to dismiss or to quash service of process. Panos Inv. Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 180 (Colo. 1983).

The allegations of the complaint, as well as any evidence introduced by the parties at any hearing conducted to determine the jurisdictional issue, may be considered to determine whether the plaintiff has established such prima facie showing of jurisdiction. Scheuer v. District Court, 684 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1984).

Prima facie showing required. A party asserting personal jurisdiction over a defendant under the long arm statute must make a prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction. Fleet Leasing, Inc. v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982).

When defendant asserts permissive claim, long arm jurisdiction becomes general in personam. By the assertion of a permissive counter-claim and a cross-claim, claimant was invoking of the jurisdiction of the court in its own behalf, and expanded the limited in personam jurisdiction originally acquired under the long arm statute into general in personam jurisdiction. T.L. Smith Co. v. District Court, 163 Colo. 444, 431 P.2d 454 (1967).

Where a defendant in a civil action files various cross-claims and third-party claims, the jurisdiction of the court is invoked and the defendant waives any objection to the issue of a personam jurisdiction. Fagerberg v. Webb, 678 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1983).

Finding that long-arm statute cannot be properly invoked is a final determination that defendants are not subject to the court's jurisdiction and an appeal can be taken therefrom. Wilbourn v. Hagan, 716 P.2d 485 (Colo. App. 1986).

In general, the activities of a non-resident subject him to long-arm jurisdiction if the quality, nature, and frequency of his conduct in Colorado is such that the non-resident should reasonably anticipate being haled into the Colorado courts. Von Palffy-Erdoed v. Bugescu, 708 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1985); Pub. Warranty Corp. v. Mullins, 757 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1988).

Trial court had personal jurisdiction over estate after plaintiffs amended complaint to name estate and estate's special administrator as defendants instead of deceased, non-existent defendant before any answer had been filed in the case. This cured the defect in personal jurisdiction contained in the original complaint. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

Distinction between subject-matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction. This section, together with defendant's note submitting to jurisdiction of Colorado courts for purposes of enforcement, conferred subject-matter jurisdiction. However, in absence of valid service of process under § 13-1-125 and C.R.C.P. 4 court lacked personal jurisdiction and judgment was void. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

A party's lack of capacity to sue or be sued has no bearing upon a court's subject matter jurisdiction over the case. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

A deceased defendant's lack of capacity to be sued does not divest a court of subject matter jurisdiction over the case. Subject matter jurisdiction involves a court's power to hear a particular type of case or grant a specific type of relief. Currier v. Sutherland, 218 P.3d 709 (Colo. 2009).

Applied in Nations Enters., Inc. v. Process Equip. Co., 40 Colo. App. 390, 579 P.2d 655 (1978); Adolph Coors Co. v. A. Genderson & Sons, 486 F. Supp. 131 (D. Colo. 1980); Goldenhersh v. Febrey, 711 P.2d 717 (Colo. App. 1985); Rogers v. Clipper Cruise Lines, Inc., 650 F. Supp. 143 (D. Colo. 1986); In re Ness, 759 P.2d 844 (Colo. App. 1988).

B. Constitutionality.

Jurisdiction to extend to constitutional limits. The Colorado general assembly, in enacting this section, intended to extend the jurisdiction of the courts to the fullest extent permitted by the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution. Jenner & Block v. District Court, 197 Colo. 184, 590 P.2d 964 (1979); Halliburton Co. v. Texana Oil Co., 471 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1979); Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980); Waterval v. District Court, 620 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 960, 101 S. Ct. 3108, 69 L. Ed.2d 971 (1981); Fleet Leasing, Inc. v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982); Panos Inv. Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 180 (Colo. 1983); Beckman v. Carlson, 553 F. Supp. 1049 (D. Colo. 1983); Scheuer v. District Court, 684 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1984); Pub. Warranty Corp. v. Mullins, 757 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1988).

This statute confers jurisdiction, limited only by the bounds of the fourteenth amendment, consistent with the standards of due process enunciated in Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington and subsequent cases. Cleverock Energy Corp. v. Trepel, 609 F.2d 1358 (10th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 909, 100 S. Ct. 1836, 64 L. Ed.2d 261 (1980).

The general assembly did not intend that this section be construed to permit jurisdiction to be asserted where to do so would violate due process of law. Le Manufacture Francaise Des Pneumatiques Michelin v. District Court, 620 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1980).

Constitutionality depends upon its application to the facts. The constitutionality of any state long arm statute depends on the manner of its particular application to the facts presented. Circle A Drilling Co. v. Sheehan, 251 F. Supp. 242 (D. Colo. 1966).

This section meets the due process test of Int'l Shoe Co. v. State of Washington (326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945)), i.e., that the activity of the defendant "establish sufficient contacts or ties with the state of the forum to make it reasonable and just according to our traditional conception of fair play and substantial justice to permit the state to enforce the obligation which appellant has incurred there". Zerr v. Norwood, 250 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1966).

It does not offend notions of fair play and substantial justice. Due process requires only that in order to subject a defendant to a judgment in personam, if he is not present within the territory of the forum, he must have certain minimum contacts such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966); Safari Outfitters, Inc. v. Superior Court, 167 Colo. 456, 448 P.2d 783 (1968); People ex rel. Jeffers v. Gibson, 181 Colo. 4, 508 P.2d 374 (1973).

Quality and nature of activity must be considered in determining jurisdiction. In order to assure fairness and justice, the trial court must look at the quality and nature of the defendant's activity in determining whether the assertion of jurisdiction complies with due process.

Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

The unilateral activity of those who claim some relationship with a nonresident defendant cannot satisfy the requirement of contact with a forum state. It is essential in each case that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws. Safari Outfitters, Inc. v. Superior Court, 167 Colo. 456, 448 P.2d 783 (1968).

Convenience alone insufficient for judgment against nonresident. Due process of law does not contemplate that a state may make a binding judgment in personam against a nonresident defendant merely out of considerations of convenience. Fleet Leasing, Inc. v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982).

An assertion of personal jurisdiction over an out-of-state defendant must satisfy both the requirements of the Colorado long-arm statute and the requirements of due process of law. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Daniel, McKee & Co., 791 P.2d 14 (Colo. App. 1990).

Determination of jurisdiction involves a two-tiered inquiry. Court must first determine whether the statute provides a basis for the exercise of jurisdiction, and then must consider whether exercise of jurisdiction would violate federal due process principles. Schocket v. Classic Auto Sales, Inc., 817 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

C. Procedure.

When evidentiary hearing appropriate. In its discretion, a court may address a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction on documentary evidence alone or by holding an evidentiary hearing. An evidentiary hearing may be appropriate when the proffered evidence is conflicting or when the plaintiff's affidavits are incredible. However, if the jurisdictional facts are inextricably intertwined with the merits of the case, caution is advised to avoid endangering the substantive right to a jury trial. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

If the issue is to be resolved on documentary evidence alone, plaintiff needs only make a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction to defeat the motion to dismiss. Allegations in the complaint must be accepted as true to the extent they are not contradicted by defendant's competent evidence. Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

The court may not resolve disputed material issues of jurisdictional fact without a hearing. Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

Purpose of inquiry is to screen out cases in which personal jurisdiction is obviously lacking and those in which the jurisdictional challenge is patently bogus. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

II. TRANSACTING BUSINESS.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For comment on White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, appearing below, see 39 U. Colo. L. Rev. 443 (1967). For note, "Doing Business in Colorado for Foreign Corporations: Service of Process, Qualification, Taxation", see 49 Den. L.J. 529 (1973). For article, "Constitutional Law", which discusses a recent Tenth Circuit decision dealing with minimum contacts, see 64 Den. U. L. Rev. 209 (1987). For article, "Civil Procedure", which discusses recent Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with jurisdiction, see 65 Den. U. L. Rev. 405 (1988).

No jurisdiction unless defendant "present" in state. Unless the level of a defendant's activity is sufficient to make him "present" in the forum state, there is no jurisdiction where the cause of action is unrelated to the forum state activities. Automated Quill, Inc. v. Chernow, 455 F. Supp. 428 (D. Colo. 1978).

Substantial connection rather than physical presence required. Although it is not necessary that the defendant be physically present in the state for purposes of transacting business, there must be a substantial connection between the business transacted and the forum state. Weyrich v. Lively, 361 F. Supp. 1147 (D. Colo. 1973); Custom Vinyl Compounding v. Bushart & Assoc., 810 F. Supp. 285 (D. Colo. 1992).

"Substantial contacts" with Colorado held not present. Beckman v. Carlson, 553 F. Supp. 1049 (D. Colo. 1983); Vickery v. Amarillo Freightliner Sales, Inc., 695 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1984); Behagen v. Amateur Basketball Assn. of U.S.A., 744 F.2d 731 (10th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1010, 105 S. Ct. 1879, 85 L. Ed.2d 171 (1985); Sands v. Victor Equip. Co., 616 F. Supp. 1532 (D. Colo. 1985); GCI 1985-1 LTD. v. Murray Props. P'ship, 770 F. Supp. 585 (D. Colo. 1991).

B. Minimum Contacts Principle.

Law reviews. For article, "A New Litany of Personal Jurisdiction", see 60 U. Colo. L. Rev. 5 (1989).

This section codifies minimum contacts principles. The question of when a state can obtain in personam jurisdiction over a nonresident by service of process outside the state is basically governed by the "minimum contacts" test enunciated in Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945).

In order for the nonresident defendant to be subject to the state's personal jurisdiction, "he has certain minimum contacts with it such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice'". The Colorado "long arm" statute was designed to codify the "minimum contacts" principle. Lichina v. Futura, Inc., 260 F. Supp. 252 (D. Colo. 1966); Jenner & Block v. District Court, 197 Colo. 184, 590 P.2d 964 (1979); Premier Corp. v. Newsom, 620 F.2d 219 (10th Cir. 1980); Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Minimal contacts are necessary for the operation of this section. Cox v. District Court, 160 Colo. 437, 417 P.2d 792 (1966).

Minimal contacts are necessary to satisfy due process requirements. It is clear that this section is based on certain minimum contacts which must satisfy requisites of due process in accord with the test of Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington. Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J Mfg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1971).

For jurisdiction to attach under subsection (1)(b), certain "minimum contacts" between the forum state and the defendant are necessary in order not to offend traditional notions of due process, fair play, and substantial justice. E.R. Callender Printing Co. v. District Court, 182 Colo. 25, 510 P.2d 889 (1973).

The essential requirement of the "minimum contacts" rule is that "the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws". Lichina v. Futura, Inc., 260 F. Supp. 252 (D. Colo. 1966).

The minimum amount of contacts required to exercise personal jurisdiction depends on whether the plaintiff has alleged general or specific jurisdiction. A court has general jurisdiction over a defendant if the defendant conducted continuous and systematic activities that are of a general business nature in the forum state. A court has specific jurisdiction over a defendant if the injuries triggering the litigation arise out of and are related to activities that are significant and purposefully directed by the defendant at the residents of the forum state. Found. for Knowledge in Dev. v. Interactive Design Consultants, 234 P.3d 673 (Colo. 2010).

Test for determining if courts may exercise jurisdiction over a non-resident is whether the exercise of extra-territorial jurisdiction is authorized by statute, and, if so, whether such exercise is consistent with constitutional requirements of due process. Vickery v. Amarillo Freightliner Sales, Inc., 695 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1984).

The test to determine whether the exercise of personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant would offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice requires that (1) the defendant must purposely avail himself of the privilege of acting in Colorado or of causing important consequences here; (2) the cause of action must arise from the consequences in Colorado of the defendant's activities; (3) the activities of the defendant or the consequences of those activities must have a substantial enough connection with Colorado to make the exercise of jurisdiction over the defendant reasonable. Duckworth v. M.M. Cole Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 33, 552 P.2d 520 (1976); Automated Quill, Inc. v. Chernow, 455 F. Supp. 428 (D. Colo. 1978); Associated Inns & Restaurant Co. of Am. v. Dev. Assocs., 516 F. Supp. 1023 (D. Colo. 1981); H2O Eng'g, Inc. v. Leidy's, Inc., 799 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 811 P.2d 38 (Colo. 1991); RAF Fin. v. Resurgens, 127 Bankr. 458 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1991); Alameda Nat. Bank v. Kanchanapoom, 752 F. Supp. 367 (D. Colo. 1990); Plus Sys., Inc. v. New England Network, Inc., 804 F. Supp. 111 (D. Colo. 1992); F.D.I.C. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, N.A., 937 F. Supp. 1461 (D. Colo. 1996); Gwynn v. Transcor Am., Inc., 26 F. Supp.2d 1256 (D. Colo. 1998).

Unfairness factor in determining sufficient contacts. While fairness is not an affirmative basis for granting jurisdiction, unfairness may become a factor in determining whether certain contacts are sufficient. Cleverock Energy Corp. v. Trepel, 609 F.2d 1358 (10th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 909, 100 S. Ct. 1836, 64 L. Ed.2d 261 (1980).

Court applied the U.S. supreme court "stream of commerce plus" test articulated in Asahi Metal Indus. Co. v. Superior Court, 480 U.S. 102, 107 S. Ct. 1026, 94 L. Ed. 2d 92 (1987), to conclude minimum contacts established. Etchieson v. Cent. Purchasing LLC, 232 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2010).

Each case must be decided on its own facts. On the question of "doing business" every case must be decided solely on its own facts. The complete test is one of total impact. The corporation must have certain minimum contacts with the state such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Elliot v. Edwards Eng'g Corp., 257 F. Supp. 537 (D. Colo. 1965).

Whether in a particular case a nonresident defendant, who is served outside the forum state, has sufficient minimum contacts with the forum state to warrant the latter in exercising in personam jurisdiction over the person of such nonresident necessarily depends on the facts of the case at hand. Premier Corp. v. Newsom, 620 F.2d 219 (10th Cir. 1980).

Even single contact is sufficient to sustain jurisdiction where the cause of action arose out of that contact. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Single act does not uniformly result in the exercise of jurisdiction when that act is not substantial enough to make the defendant "present". Trans-Continent Refrigerator Co. v. A Little Bit of Swed., Inc., 658 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1982).

One meeting constituting sole contact insufficient. Where the only contact the defendant had with Colorado was an initial meeting with the plaintiff, this one meeting did not constitute the minimum contacts requirement. Weyrich v. Lively, 361 F. Supp. 1147 (D. Colo. 1973).

Quantity of contact cannot be measured by dollar value alone. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

No minimal contact if cause arose outside state and no control over representative. Plaintiff's claim did not arise out of any dealing the company had in Colorado. This important factor, combined with almost a complete absence of control over representative, requires that the motion to quash the summons be granted. Elliott v. Edwards Eng'g Corp., 257 F. Supp. 537 (D. Colo. 1965).

The unilateral activity of those who claim some relationship with a nonresident defendant cannot satisfy the requirement of contact with the forum state. Circle A Drilling Co. v. Sheehan, 251 F. Supp. 242 (D. Colo. 1966); Knight v. District Court, 162 Colo. 14, 424 P.2d 110 (1967).

The mere existence of a contract executed by a Colorado resident, is not sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction over an absent nonresident defendant. To hold otherwise would offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J Mfg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1971).

Nonresident attorney's relationship with client provided sufficient connection for jurisdiction. A professional relationship of substantial duration and a client's claimed reliance upon her nonresident attorney's advice with respect to the client's financial interests, the attorney's failure to communicate with the client or to take any action in regard to the client's interests may be productive of adverse consequences to the client in this state so as to provide a sufficient connection and render reasonable the exercise of in personam jurisdiction over the nonresident. Waterval v. District Court, 620 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 960, 101 S. Ct. 3108, 69 L. Ed.2d 971 (1981); Keefe v. Kirschenbaum & Kirschenbaum, P.C., 40 P.3d 1267 (Colo. 2002).

Agreement by nonresident defendant attorney to represent a Colorado corporation and the attorney's subsequent conduct were acts by which the defendant purposefully availed himself of the privilege of conducting activities in Colorado and thus was reasonably subject to Colorado's long arm statute jurisdiction. Scheuer v. District Court, 684 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1984).

Sales, promotional and distributional channels reveal minimal contacts. The affidavit does reveal "minimal contact" in Colorado as required by due process because it clearly reflects that defendant set up channels of sales promotion and distribution in Colorado for the purpose of selling its products in Colorado. Vandermece v. District Court, 164 Colo. 117, 433 P.2d 335 (1967).

Manufacturer's promotional activities and solicitation of customers while in Colorado, together with actual sales, was sufficient to invoke long-arm jurisdiction. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Contacts were sufficient to find jurisdiction over manufacturer of medical syringe. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Contacts found insufficient where sale took place outside of Colorado and issues of tort concerned creation of contract and terms. Vickery v. Amarillo Freightliner Sales, Inc., 695 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1984).

Jurisdiction not proper. Jurisdiction is not proper merely because the defendants received a check drawn on a Colorado bank or because the defendants wrote several letters regarding the contract to the plaintiff in Colorado. Ruggieri v. Gen. Well Serv., Inc., 535 F. Supp. 525 (D. Colo. 1982).

Jurisdiction is not proper in Colorado merely because one of the parties to a contract is a Colorado resident. Ruggieri v. Gen. Well Serv., Inc., 535 F. Supp. 525 (D. Colo. 1982); SGI Air Holdings II LLC v. Novartis Int'l, AG, 192 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 2002).

Minimum contacts sufficient. In executing a contract of guarantee in another state of payment of rent and performance of lease covenants, where petitioner induced lessors to furnish their consent for the assignment of a lease of Colorado real property, the facts amply justify long-arm jurisdiction over the person of petitioner. Giger v. District Court, 189 Colo. 305, 540 P.2d 329 (1975).

An out-of-state bank, which issued letter of credit in connection with Colorado real estate transaction, inducing reliance by purchaser's agent, had sufficient connection with Colorado to permit exercise of jurisdiction under this section in agent's action against bank for consequences resulting from cancellation of letter. Van Schaack & Co. v. District Court, 189 Colo. 145, 538 P.2d 425 (1975).

Nonresident publishing company had sufficient contacts with the state of Colorado for the assumption of in personam jurisdiction where it initiated the contract with the plaintiff at his residence in Colorado and solicited the resultant contract, and the parties intended the plaintiff prepare the manuscripts at home in Colorado and submit them to the company's offices in Chicago for publication. Duckworth v. M.M. Cole Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 33, 552 P.2d 520 (1976).

Where a New York resident contracted to have brochures mailed throughout the United States, including Colorado, and where said New York resident opened a checking account in Colorado to receive the money generated by the mailing, there were sufficient contacts to allow in personam jurisdiction by Colorado courts. At Home Magazine v. District Court, 194 Colo. 331, 572 P.2d 476 (1977).

It is not unreasonable to subject a guarantor to the jurisdiction of courts in the very state where an obligation is specifically payable when the makers fail to perform their obligations and the guarantee becomes operable. Panos Inv. Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 180 (Colo. 1983).

Negotiating and signing an agreement in this state to personally guarantee a portion of a corporation's debts constitutes sufficient contacts for a court of this state to exercise personal jurisdiction over such a person. Mr. Steak, Inc. v. District Court, 194 Colo. 519, 574 P.2d 95 (1978).

Execution of promissory notes, given in conjunction with and as part and parcel of the contract for purchase of Colorado real property, constituted sufficient acts to meet the minimum contacts test. Brownlow v. Aman, 740 F.2d 1476 (10th Cir. 1984).

Where president of defendant corporation came to Colorado and, in the course of various business negotiations, orally agreed to the terms of an oil development contract under which the defendant corporation was obligated to send payment to plaintiff corporation in Colorado for the performance of supervisory and managerial functions under the contract and defendant corporation reasonably could have anticipated that plaintiff corporation's duties under the contract would be largely performed at their headquarters in Colorado, defendant corporation had sufficient contacts with Colorado to meet the test of due process. Cleverock Energy Corp. v. Trepel, 609 F.2d 1358 (10th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 909, 100 S. Ct. 1836, 64 L. Ed.2d 261 (1980).

Communication with buyer, acceptance of payments, and attempted repossession in Colorado by agent constitute minimum contacts for personal jurisdiction. Von Palffy-Erdoed v. Bugescu, 708 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1985).

Phone calls, letters, facsimiles, and e-mails in addition to a contract, although unsigned, provide evidence that foreign defendant pursued a continuing business relationship sufficient to meet the minimum contacts requirement. AST Sports Science, Inc. v. CLF Distribution Ltd., 514 F.3d 1054 (10th Cir. 2008).

For other examples of satisfaction of minimum contacts requirements, see Lichina v. Futura, Inc., 260 F. Supp. 252 (D. Colo. 1966).

Contact with Colorado through actions of agent may be sufficient to bring defendant within jurisdiction. H2O Eng'g, Inc. v. Leidy's, Inc., 799 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1990), rev'd on other grounds, 811 P.2d 38 (Colo. 1991).

Minimum contacts insufficient. Requisite minimum contacts did not exist as between foreign manufacturer and Colorado. Ferrari, S.p.A. SEFAC v. District Court, 185 Colo. 136, 522 P.2d 105 (1974), overruled in part in Classic Auto Sales, Inc. v. Schocket, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

Where corporate buyer's only contact with Colorado was to place an order in Kansas City for the purchase of goods and merchandise from a Colorado seller, the minimum contacts necessary to satisfy the requirements of due process are absent, and, therefore, in personam jurisdiction over the corporate buyer cannot be obtained by means of the long-arm statute. E.R. Callender Printing Co. v. District Court, 185 Colo. 25, 510 P.2d 889 (1973).

Execution, in California, of contract executed in Colorado by another, by guarantor, who was California resident, does not provide that quantum of minimum contact with Colorado such that the maintenance of a suit against the guarantor to recover on the contract would not offend traditional notions of due process. D.E.B. Adjustment Co. v. Dillard, 32 Colo. App. 184, 508 P.2d 420 (1973).

The mere planting of fish in Utah, which fish "entered" Colorado and caused injury, did not constitute sufficient contacts with Colorado to subject those planting the fish to personal jurisdiction in Colorado. Colo. River Water Conservation v. Andrus, 476 F. Supp. 966 (D. Colo. 1979).

Where an out-of-state bank's only connection to Colorado was its probable knowledge that the letter of credit it issued was going to be used in the sale of Colorado property to a Colorado corporation, this slight connection does not meet the "minimum contacts" standard, and the assertion of jurisdiction in a Colorado forum violates the out-of-state bank's right to due process. Leney v. Plum Grove Bank, 670 F.2d 878 (10th Cir. 1982).

Since British asbestos manufacturer did not distribute or market its product in Colorado, there was not sufficient contact between the manufacturer and Colorado to establish personal jurisdiction. Ward v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 677 F. Supp. 1092 (D. Colo. 1988).

Individuals who transported an inmate from Oregon to Colorado under a contract for extradition transportation between their employer and the Colorado department of corrections availed themselves of the privilege of acting in Colorado, committed tortious acts in Colorado, and caused important consequences in Colorado, making the exercise of jurisdiction over them reasonable, where one individual allegedly sexually assaulted the inmate and the other failed to report the assaults. Gwynn v. Transcor Am., Inc., 26 F. Supp.2d 1256 (D. Colo. 1998).

Alleged patent infringer's activities in Colorado were too tenuous to establish that it purposely availed itself of the forum. Although the company advertised its product in national magazines that reach Colorado, no evidence was presented demonstrating that the company made deliberative efforts, either direct or indirect, to serve the Colorado market. The fact that the advertisements resulted in telephone inquiries about the product was insufficient to establish that the company took advantage of the Colorado market or its laws. Also, no sales of the product occurred in Colorado. Therefore, the company did not have sufficient contact with the state to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction. Dart Intern., Inc. v. Interactive Target Sys., 877 F. Supp. 541 (D. Colo. 1995).

Defendant lacks sufficient contacts with Colorado for Colorado courts to exercise jurisdiction over defendant where contracts regarding purchase of defendant's interest were signed out of state, defendant did not travel to Colorado regarding the purchase or the interest, and did not conduct any business in Colorado. Sender v. Powell, 902 P.2d 947 (Colo. App. 1995).

Activities of the partnership satisfy the minimum-contacts test as to individual partners. Through the instrumentality of the partnership, individual partners purposely availed themselves of the privilege of conducting business activities and invoked the benefits and protections of the law. Intercontinental Leasing, Inc. v. Anderson, 410 F.2d 303 (10th Cir. 1969); Resolution Trust Corp. v. Deloitte & Touche, 822 F. Supp 1512 (D. Colo. 1993).

Where damaged product was brought into Colorado by purchaser from another state, and defendant's only contact amounted to less than one-half of one percent of annual sales, (which did not include this particular damaged item), there was not sufficient business contact to warrant exercise of personal jurisdiction. Day v. Snowmass Stables, Inc., 810 F. Supp. 289 (D. Colo. 1993).

Rigid "last event" test rejected. While appropriate in conflict-of-laws analysis, for purposes of application of long-arm statute it is not flexible enough to give Colorado courts jurisdiction to the fullest extent permitted by the due process clause. Classic Auto Sales, Inc. v. Schocket, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

C. What Constitutes Transacting Business.

What constitutes doing business is a matter of state law. So long as the dictates of federal due process are met, what constitutes doing business within a state is a matter of state law. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Whether claim arose out of business transacted in Colorado is a factor. While whether a claim arose out of business done in this state is one factor that may be considered, the supreme court has, in promulgating state law on this subject, clearly indicated that this is not necessarily the controlling element in determining whether the corporation has sufficient contacts in this state to subject it to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state when service is made within the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Transaction of business test is a case by case determination. The standards for considering whether or not jurisdiction attaches under the statute on the basis of transaction of business within the state are those of a case by case analysis considering, among other things, regular and systematic activity, continuity of contacts, promotion and utilization of channels of interstate commerce, benefits and protections afforded by the state, casualness of presence, and an estimate of inconveniences. People ex rel. Jeffers v. Gibson, 181 Colo. 4, 508 P.2d 374 (1973).

Ongoing and continuous business relationship. Where defendants actively solicited plaintiff's business in Colorado and had an ongoing and continuous business relationship for a period of close to two years, defendants have purposely availed themselves of the privilege of conducting business in Colorado. Combs Airways, Inc. v. Trans-Air Supply Co., 560 F. Supp. 865 (D. Colo. 1983).

Execution of contract within state. If a non-resident comes to Colorado and, within the boundaries of this state, executes a contract and receives earnest money, the defendant is within the purview of the Colorado long arm statute, and it does not offend traditional notions of fair play to require the defendant to appear in a federal district court in Colorado when a dispute arises over the return of the earnest money. East Vail Townhomes, Inc. v. Eurasian Dev. D.A., Inc., 716 F.2d 1346 (10th Cir. 1983).

Contract negotiations, plus Colorado is place of "entering into", are sufficient. Where negotiations leading to the contract upon which this action is brought were conducted in Colorado, and the contract itself provided that Colorado is the place of "entering into" the agreement, nondomiciliary defendant's contracts were constitutionally sufficient to support service under long arm statute. Clinic Masters, Inc. v. McCollar, 269 F. Supp. 395 (D. Colo. 1967).

Even though the “last act”, such as the signing of a contract, may have occurred outside the geographical confines of the forum state, nevertheless, the statutory test of a claim arising out of the transaction of any business within the state may still be met by the showing of other “purposeful acts”, performed within the forum state by the defendant in relation to the contract, even though such acts were preliminary, or even subsequent, to the execution of the contract itself. Knight v. District Court, 162 Colo. 14, 424 P.2d 110 (1967); Classic Auto Sales, Inc. v. Schocket, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

Contract for the transport of inmates from other states to Colorado constitutes the transaction of business within the state and establishes the general jurisdiction requirement that contacts with the forum state are systematic and continuous. Gwynn v. Transcor Am., Inc., 26 F. Supp.2d 1256 (D. Colo. 1998).

Activity in furtherance of a contract is sufficient to give the court long arm jurisdiction. If the defendant purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting business in the forum state, this is enough to give the court jurisdiction. It is not even necessary that defendant or his agent be physically present in the state for the purpose of transacting business. Colorado-Florida Living, Inc. v. Deltona Corp., 338 F. Supp. 880 (D. Colo. 1972).

A conditional sales interest indicates business transaction. The fact that defendant retained a conditional sale interest and could have enforced its right to repossess the ski lift in the Colorado courts was a sufficient contact. Defendant was enjoying the benefits and protections of Colorado law, and was willing to service the lift. This is a further indication of the continuing nature of the defendant’s business transactions in Colorado. Lichina v. Futura, Inc., 260 F. Supp. 252 (D. Colo. 1966).

Contract negotiations by mail do not constitute transacting business. Major negotiations and execution of the agreement were conducted by an exchange of correspondence and documents between the parties or their representatives in Kansas and Colorado respectively. None of the crucial steps took place wholly within the state of Colorado. Plaintiff’s contention that a one-day trip to Colorado and defendants’ tour of its plant in Eaton, Colorado, are sufficient business contacts to confer in personam jurisdiction on this court is erroneous. Since neither defendant came to Colorado to “sell” plaintiff a license agreement and since no negotiations were conducted here, their obvious purpose was not to avail themselves of the privilege of conducting business here. In these circumstances, the minimum contacts necessary for an exercise of personal jurisdiction do not exist. Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J

Mfg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo.), aff’d, 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1971).

Defendants’ mere execution of a contract with plaintiff, a Colorado corporation, did not constitute doing business in Colorado for purposes of this section. New Frontier Media, Inc. v. Freeman, 85 P.3d 611 (Colo. App. 2003).

Phone conversations and in-state negotiations deemed “doing business”. Where the transaction forming the basis of the action was shaped by negotiations in Denver between defendant A and plaintiff as well as telephone conversations between defendant A in Colorado and defendant B in Texas and where an agreement to execute a note and personal guaranties was entered into in Colorado, by having engaged in these telephone conversations, defendant B transacted business within Colorado and caused important business consequences in this state, within the test set forth by the Colorado Supreme Court in Van Schaack & Co. v. District Court, 189 Colo. 145, 538 P.2d 425 (1975), sufficient and substantial enough so that the assertion of personal jurisdiction was both fair and reasonable. Halliburton Co. v. Texana Oil Co., 471 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1979).

Plaintiff established prima facie case of specific jurisdiction over defendant under subsection (1)(a) by alleging that defendant came to Colorado to talk about forming a joint venture with plaintiff involving use of plaintiff’s trade secrets and that the parties agreed to such joint venture during these meetings. Gognat v. Ellsworth, 224 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2009), aff’d on other grounds, 259 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2011).

Subjecting defendant to the jurisdiction of Colorado courts is consistent with due process since defendant purposefully availed himself of the privilege of conducting activities in Colorado. Defendant allegedly negotiated and entered into a joint venture while in Colorado with a Colorado resident and regularly communicated with that resident about the joint venture while in Colorado and by telephone and email. Gognat v. Ellsworth, 224 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2009), aff’d on other grounds, 259 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2011).

The asserted sale of goods by the defendants in Colorado is too speculative to provide the requisite jurisdictional contacts since solicitations were made from Kansas and since the defendants maintain no sales or service personnel here. There has been no showing of the volume or extent of the defendants’ sales or the relation of those sales to the license agreement. For personal jurisdiction purposes, the quality and nature of that activity is too indirect and remote from the license agreement upon which plaintiff has brought suit. Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J Mfg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo.), aff’d, 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1971).

An out-of-state seller whose agents never enter Colorado is not subject to long arm jurisdiction. If an out-of-state milk handler has no outlets in Colorado, none of his employees come into the state, and the handler is divested of ownership of the milk before it enters Colorado, then the handler is not doing business in Colorado and the Colorado courts do not have jurisdiction over the handler under the Colorado long arm statute and do not have authority to grant injunctions against him under the Colorado marketing act. People ex rel. Jeffers v. Gibson, 181 Colo. 4, 508 P.2d 374 (1973).

Corporate visit plus sending sales materials is a transaction of business. The visit of the assistant general sales manager of a Delaware corporation to Colorado in connection with franchise negotiations and the receipt of customer's lists, contracts, and other sales materials at plaintiff's offices in Denver constitute the transaction of business within the state of Colorado, which would authorize service of process upon the defendant outside the state of Colorado when the cause of action arises from that transaction and the failure to grant the franchise. Colorado-Florida Living, Inc. v. Deltona Corp., 338 F. Supp. 880 (D. Colo. 1972).

Manufacturer who assembles in Colorado subject to long arm. This section grants jurisdiction under "long arm" to Colorado courts in an action against a North Carolina manufacturer of products assembled and sold in Colorado. Czarnick v. District Court, 175 Colo. 482, 488 P.2d 562 (1971).

Where the parent and its subsidiary maintain separate identities and charge each other for service performed, as reinsurance, the corporations will be treated as separate entities for the purpose of determining personal jurisdiction. Perlman v. Great States Life Ins. Co., 164 Colo. 493, 436 P.2d 124 (1968).

A nonpresent parent corporation is not "doing business" because of mere presence of subsidiary. Although a corporation is totally owned by another corporation, the mere presence in Colorado of the wholly-owned subsidiary, standing alone, does not in and of itself subject the nonpresent parent corporation to the state's jurisdiction where the two companies are operated as distinct entities. Bolger v. Dial-A-Style Leasing Corp., 159 Colo. 44, 409 P.2d 517 (1966); SGI Air Holdings II LLC v. Novartis Int'l, AG, 192 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 2002).

The relationship of a holding company and the subsidiaries of which the holding company owns stock is not of a nature to support an agency relationship, or consequently, personal jurisdiction over the holding company or its day-to-day managing company. SGI Air Holdings II LLC v. Novartis Int'l, AG, 192 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 2002).

Stock ownership of subsidiary is not doing business. Neither does stock ownership in a domestic company nor common directors establish that defendant was doing business in Colorado. Perlman v. Great States Life Ins. Co., 164 Colo. 493, 436 P.2d 124 (1968).

It is essential in each case that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protection of its laws. Circle A Drilling Co. v. Sheehan, 251 F. Supp. 242 (D. Colo. 1966); Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J Mfg. Co., 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir.), aff'd, 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo. 1971).

Jurisdiction will attach if the defendant purposely initiates or acquiesces in activity conducted within the forum state on its behalf. It must also avail itself of the protection of the forum state's law. Once that activity has been initiated, a single incident, substantial in nature, which gives rise to the plaintiff's claim will suffice to confer personal jurisdiction upon the courts of the forum state. Hydraulics Unlimited Mfg. Co. v. B/J Mfg. Co., 323 F. Supp. 996 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 449 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1971).

Phone conversations, correspondence, and receipt of check are not purposeful acts. The interstate telephone conversations, correspondence, and the receipt in Illinois by petitioner of checks drawn on a Denver bank by respondent do not constitute acts by which the petitioner purposefully availed himself of the privilege of conducting activities within Colorado, thus invoking the benefits of its laws. Safari Outfitters, Inc. v. Superior Court, 167 Colo. 456, 448 P.2d 783 (1968).

Nor does advertising in national magazines distributed within the forum state alone constitute a transaction of business within that state. Such a contact is simply too tenuous upon which to found a claim of jurisdiction. Safari Outfitters, Inc. v. Superior Court, 167 Colo. 456, 448 P.2d 783 (1968).

An advertisement in a national magazine is not in itself sufficient to establish contacts in Colorado. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Emide Corp., 496 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Colo. 1980).

Transactions carried on in a state wholly by mail may be sufficient to constitute a doing of business within the state sufficient to enable the state to exercise in personam jurisdiction over the corporation. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Even the activities of even a single salesman certainly may be sufficient to constitute the doing of business within a state even though those activities do not involve the actual concluding of contracts but involve only solicitation of orders and service calls. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

When the activities of the agent are a continuous course of dealing. While it is clear that casual or intermittent presence of the corporation's agent within the state is not enough to support in personam jurisdiction based upon service on an agent, the United States supreme court has held that when the activities of the agent are such as to constitute a continuous course of dealings within the state, due process is not denied by the exercise of in personam jurisdiction through service on the agent in the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Corporation's control over its representative. The amount of control the corporation exerted over its representative in the state and the fact that the representative maintains a listing in the Denver telephone directory are factors which point toward "doing business". Elliott v. Edwards Eng'g Corp., 257 F. Supp. 537 (D. Colo. 1965).

The payment of congressional salaries by merely transferring money to banks in Colorado does not establish minimum contacts with Colorado. Thus the clerk of the U.S. house of representatives and the secretary of the U.S. senate could not be reached by Colorado's long-arm statute and the court could not exercise personal jurisdiction over them. Shaffer v. Clinton, 54 F. Supp.2d 1014 (D. Colo. 1999).

Negotiation, execution, and delivery of a note in Colorado is transacting business. The negotiation of a loan from a Colorado bank, in Colorado, with the execution and delivery to the bank of a promissory note is transacting business within this state within the meaning of the statute. Knight v. District Court, 162 Colo. 14, 424 P.2d 110 (1967).

Mere fact that part of consideration for note is Colorado contract is not sufficient. The note was executed in Montana. Presumably all negotiations took place there. The only contact with Colorado is the fact that part of the consideration was a contract executed in Colorado. Such contact does not satisfy "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice". Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945); Circle A Drilling Co. v. Sheehan, 251 F. Supp. 242 (D. Colo. 1966).

A note is a specialty and is not to be regarded as the same transaction as that which gave rise to the debt. The note stands alone. Circle A Drilling Co. v. Sheehan, 251 F. Supp. 242 (D. Colo. 1966).

Demand for payment of note executed outside state insufficient. Where a promissory note was executed and delivered outside of Colorado and, later, one of the parties relocated in Colorado and mailed a letter out of state demanding payment of the note, the contacts within the state are not sufficient for in personam jurisdiction. Associated Inns & Restaurant Co. of Am. v. Dev. Assocs., 516 F. Supp. 1023 (D. Colo. 1981).

Where foreign note is merely a renewal of a Colorado loan transacting of business con- tinues. Though the petitioners admittedly executed the renewal note in Utah, they had each nonetheless performed in Colorado several "purposeful acts" relative thereto, but for the original loan in Colorado, there never would have been a renewal note. Knight v. District Court, 162 Colo. 14, 424 P.2d 110 (1967).

Actions of internal revenue officials insufficient. Officials who were out-of-state residents and who at no time worked in, or traveled in connection with work, in this state had not transacted business for purposes of this section. First Western Govern. Sec., Inc. v. U.S., 578 F. Supp. 212 (D. Colo. 1984).

A nonresident who filed a required claim in a probate proceeding does not constitute the transaction of business by the nonresident for purposes of Colorado's long-arm statute. Harman v. Stillwell, 944 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1997).

Economic injury in Colorado insufficient. Where defendant welded a pipe in Italy which was subsequently used by the plaintiff Colorado corporation in Texas, where the weld failed, allegedly causing economic injury in Colorado, the defendant is not subject to the jurisdiction of the court under this section. Res. Inv. Corp. v. Hughes Tool Co., 561 F. Supp. 1236 (D. Colo. 1983).

Plaintiff failed to make a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction under the transaction of business subsection where his complaint failed to allege any facts in support of his conclusory statement that "defendants transacted business" in Colorado and his affidavit and response to motion to dismiss did not contain any additional facts that would sufficiently support jurisdiction. Wenz v. Memory Crystal, 55 F.3d 1503 (10th Cir. 1995).

Defendant's continuing contractual relationship with plaintiff was insufficient to allow personal jurisdiction over it in Colorado. Trial court did not err in determining that defendant did not purposefully avail itself of the privilege of conducting business activities within Colorado. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Arkhangelskgeoldobycha, 94 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005).

Defendant's contacts to the state were necessitated by virtue of the plaintiff's moving its principal place of business to Colorado. Contacts that are necessitated by the plaintiff's unilateral move are given much less weight. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005).

The continuous presence of four employees of the defendant non-resident corporation in Colorado who are employed for the purpose of soliciting orders on behalf of such corporation constitutes sufficient contact in the forum for personal jurisdiction over the corporation.

Schlesinger v. Merrill Pub. Co., 675 F. Supp. 591 (D. Colo. 1987).

An individual who has become an officer or a director of a Colorado corporation has sufficiently transacted business within the state to subject himself to the jurisdiction of its courts with respect to claims made by the corporation or by others on behalf of the corporation arising out of the individual's duties as an officer or director. Pub. Warranty Corp. v. Mullins, 757 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1988).

Execution of note. When a person executes a note outside of this state but the note expressly obligates him to pay money to a resident of this state, he may be properly sued in Colorado. The single act of executing the note constituted a substantial enough connection to render exercise of jurisdiction reasonable under the circumstances. Kingston v. Brussat, 698 F. Supp. 215 (D. Colo. 1988); Alameda Nat. Bank v. Kanchanapoom, 752 F. Supp. 367 (D. Colo. 1990).

Defendants who induced plaintiff to rely on defendants' representations resulting in extension of more than two million dollars in credit and shipment of more than two million dollars worth of products from Colorado to defendants' clients are subject to personal jurisdiction in Colorado. Contacts which included seven face-to-face meetings in two states, one mailing, and twenty-eight phone calls over a four-month period were sufficient to satisfy both transaction-of-business standards and due process requirements. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Daniel, McKee & Co., 791 P.2d 14 (Colo. App. 1990).

Because its promotional efforts were directed towards Colorado residents through local media advertising in Colorado, defendant purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting business in this state and should reasonably have anticipated being subject to the jurisdiction of the Colorado courts. Martinez v. Farmington Motors, Inc., 931 P.2d 546 (Colo. App. 1996).

Purported father found to have transacted business in state. Purported father's sending of letter agreeing to pay support that father knew would be relied upon by Colorado authorities for purpose of determining eligibility for public assistance constituted transacting business in this state. In re Parental Responsibilities of H.Z.G., 77 P.3d 848 (Colo. App. 2003).

D. Agency Theory.

Agency theory explained. Under Colorado's long-arm statute, a nonresident defendant may be subject to personal jurisdiction in Colorado based on the imputed contacts of defendant's agent. To establish this agency theory, jurisdictional facts must connect the actions of the agent to the principal by either "the transaction of any business" or "the commission of a tortious act."

Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

Jurisdiction and liability separate issues. A court's determination of agency for the purpose of personal jurisdiction is a separate determination from, and is not dispositive of, the substantive issue of defendant's liability for the actions of the agent. For jurisdictional purposes, plaintiff needs only make a prima facie showing of the connection between the actions of the agent and the principal. Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

Due process requires that jurisdictional facts be examined to determine whether either general or specific jurisdiction exists and, if so, whether it is reasonable for the court to exercise that jurisdiction. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Lukoil, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005); Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

Australian corporation was properly subject to personal jurisdiction because, although general jurisdiction was lacking due to the corporation's absence of business contacts with Colorado, plaintiff made a prima facie showing of specific jurisdiction based on documentary evidence showing the corporation sent its agent on a business trip to various states, including Colorado, during the course of which trip the agent went to a restaurant with a coworker, became intoxicated, and caused an automobile accident that killed the coworker. Further, under the circumstances, it was held reasonable to require the corporation to defend in Colorado due to the legitimate interests of Colorado in protecting the safety of its roads and providing a forum for the plaintiff. Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

III. COMMISSION OF TORT.

Law reviews. For comment on Vandermee v. District Court, appearing below, see 40 U. Colo. L. Rev. 471 (1968).

Section is constitutional. The new "long arm" statute, insofar as it permits the assertion of in personam jurisdiction over nonresidents who commit a tortious act within the state of Colorado is not unconstitutional. Zerr v. Norwood, 250 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1966).

Where tortious act is committed within state, there need not be additional minimum contacts in state to meet constitutional requirements of due process. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

Tortious act. The noun "act" implies a single occurrence, a specific event, one happening. The adjective "tortious" implies an act with an attending injury proximately related to that act. The use of the term "tortious act" implies the total act embodying the cause and the effect through the continuum of time. Vandermee v.

District Court, 164 Colo. 117, 433 P.2d 335 (1967).

Our long arm statute grants Colorado courts jurisdiction over persons who commit tortious acts within this state. Granite States Volkswagen, Inc. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 42, 492 P.2d 624 (1972).

Colorado residents have local forum for damages inflicted on them by nonresidents. The legislative purpose, which inspired the adoption of the long arm statute, was the expansion of our court's jurisdiction within constitutional limitations in order to provide a local forum for Colorado residents who suffer damages in Colorado as a result of tortious acts of nonresidents. Vandermeer v. District Court, 164 Colo. 117, 433 P.2d 335 (1967).

Court has jurisdiction over nonresident motorist in Colorado accident. A nonresident motorist who is involved in an automobile accident in a particular state has established a sufficient contact with that state to warrant its courts in asserting in personam jurisdiction over him to determine the merits of any controversy that may happen to arise out of that accident. Zerr v. Norwood, 250 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1966).

Foreign corporation may be summoned based on tortious act of its agent within Colorado although "transacting business" standard may not be met. Goettman v. North Fork Valley Rest., 176 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2007).

"Tortious act" is to be liberally construed but not to create a new tort. Although our supreme court has said that the term, "tortious act", is to be liberally construed to carry out the intent of the general assembly, it cannot be so liberally construed as to create a tort. People in Interest of D.R.B., 30 Colo. App. 603, 498 P.2d 1166 (1972), aff'd sub nom., A.R.B. v. G.L.P., 180 Colo. 439, 507 P.2d 468 (1973).

The fathering of an illegitimate child in and of itself is not a "tortious act". People in Interest of D.R.B., 30 Colo. App. 603, 498 P.2d 1166 (1972), aff'd sub nom. A.R.B. v. G.L.P., 180 Colo. 439, 507 P.2d 468 (1973).

Fact that person dies in Colorado does not constitute tortious act. Ferrari, S.p.A. SEFAC v. District Court, 185 Colo. 136, 522 P.2d 105 (1974), overruled in part in Classic Auto Sales, Inc. v. Schocket, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

Disclosure of internal revenue agent's report concerning Colorado resident, in place other than Colorado, did not give rise to a tort in this state. First Western Govern. Sec., Inc. v. U.S., 578 F.Supp. 212 (D. Colo. 1984).

Injury must result from intended or foreseeable use. An additional requirement to be met before subjecting an alien manufacturer to personal jurisdiction is that the injury complained of must have resulted from a use intended or foreseeable by the manufacturer. Alliance Clothing, Ltd. v. District Court, 187 Colo. 400, 532 P.2d 351 (1975).

Use of foreign product in United States or state must be foreseen. In all the tort cases subjecting alien manufacturers to personal jurisdiction by long-arm statutes, the courts noted that the manufacturer could reasonably foresee that his product would be used in the United States or in the state in question. Alliance Clothing, Ltd. v. District Court, 187 Colo. 400, 532 P.2d 351 (1975).

Misrepresentations inducing reliance justify jurisdiction. Where the defendants make an affirmative misrepresentation intending to induce, and actually inducing, justifiable reliance by the plaintiff in Colorado, which causes him damages in Colorado, the defendants purposefully avail themselves of Colorado by proximately causing tort damage in Colorado. Ruggieri v. Gen. Well Serv., Inc., 535 F. Supp. 525 (D. Colo. 1982).

Telephone conversations which are nothing more than informational are inadequate to support a finding of personal jurisdiction. Bennett Waites Corp. v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 810 (D. Colo. 1983).

Two letters, an electronic presentation, and a conference call were sufficient contacts to establish prima facie showing that Colorado court has personal jurisdiction over defendant. First Horizon Merch. Servs., Inc. v. Wellspring Capital Mgmt., LLC, 166 P.3d 166 (Colo. App. 2007).

Participation in conference calls and failure to correct material omissions established a prima facie case of personal jurisdiction. Although contacts were limited, the exercise of jurisdiction would be consistent with due process. First Horizon Merch. Servs., Inc. v. Wellspring Capital Mgmt., LLC, 166 P.3d 166 (Colo. App. 2007).

Out-of-state repair of motor vehicle insufficient. Where the defendant truck stop's sole contact with Colorado was its allegedly negligent repair of the brakes on the truck driven in Colorado by the plaintiff, and it could not be proven that the truck stop had conducted any other activity in the state, the district court's exercise of jurisdiction violates due process. Fleet Leasing, Inc. v. District Court, 649 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982).

As a general proposition, if a corporation elects to sell its products for ultimate use in another state, it is not unjust to hold it answerable there for any damage caused by defects in those products. Vandermeer v. District Court, 164 Colo. 117, 433 P.2d 335 (1967); Granite States Volkswagen, Inc. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 42, 492 P.2d 624 (1972).

Corporation must by some act avail itself of privilege of doing business in forum state. It is essential in each case "that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state". Granite States Volkswagen, Inc. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 42, 492 P.2d 624 (1972).

This test has been generalized to mean that the defendant must have taken voluntary action calculated to have an effect in the forum state. Granite States Volkswagen, Inc. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 42, 492 P.2d 624 (1972).

Statute does not apply to tortious act outside of state. The statute clearly provides that personal jurisdiction can only be grounded on the commission of a tortious act within the state, and the general assembly did not include tortious acts committed without the state which gave rise to injuries within the state. Had that been the legislative intent it could have been accomplished by specific language to that effect. Before this statute has any effect, both the asserted negligent act or acts of the nonresident defendant, as well as the injury they produce, must occur within the state of Colorado. Lichina v. Futura, Inc., 260 F. Supp. 252 (D. Colo. 1966). But see Vandermeer v. District Court, 164 Colo. 117, 433 P.2d 335 (1967).

But a tortious act committed outside the state may come within this section once it causes injury or damage within this state. Pace v. D & D Fuller CATV Const., Inc., 748 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1987), aff'd, 780 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1989); Schocket v. Classic Auto Sales, Inc., 817 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

For the purposes of subsection (1)(b), allegations of tortious conduct in another state which causes injury in Colorado have been held to constitute a prima facie showing of a tortious act within Colorado. Marquest Med. Prods., Inc. v. Daniel, McKee & Co., 791 P.2d 14 (Colo. App. 1990); Schocket v. Classic Auto Sales, Inc., 817 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

Negligent conduct initiated in foreign state which proximately results in injury incurred in Colorado constitutes tortious conduct within the meaning of long arm statute. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973); Scheuer v. District Court, 684 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1984); Found. for Knowledge in Dev. v. Interactive Design Consultants, 234 P.3d 673 (Colo. 2010).

To bring one under the jurisdiction of the Colorado court by use of the tort section of this section, sufficient facts need be alleged to support a claim that the alleged tortfeasor was negligent and that the negligent conduct proximately resulted in injury that occurred in Colorado, even if that conduct was initiated in a foreign state. Shaw v. Aurora Mobile Homes & Real Estate, Inc., 36 Colo. App. 321, 539 P.2d 1366 (1975).

Section may be relied on even if tort committed prior to effective date. This section and § 13-1-125 may be constitutionally applied where the complaint is filed after the effective date of the statute, though the tortious act complained of occurred before the effective date of the statute. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966).

Retrospective application of this section is in accord with sound public policy. At the time of the accident, the defendant was a resident of Colorado. This fact, in itself, in addition to providing a sufficient contact with the state to satisfy the requirement of due process, makes it reasonable to conclude that the defendant might have expected to be subject to suit in Colorado for torts that she may have committed here during that period. Smith v. Putnam, 250 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1965).

Generally, courts of one state do not have jurisdiction over foreign administrator or executor and should not interfere with administration of decedent's estate in foreign jurisdiction. However, rule must give way to legislative enactments in appropriate circumstances, such as where administrator's decedent has committed tort in state of forum. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

In personam jurisdiction may be obtained over personal representative of deceased non-resident tortfeasor. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

Plaintiff need not prove merits of action — commission of tort within state — to initially establish in personam jurisdiction. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973); Jenner & Block v. District Court, 197 Colo. 184, 590 P.2d 964 (1979).

Facts constituting commission of a tortious act within this state. Jenner & Block v. District Court, 197 Colo. 184, 590 P.2d 964 (1979).

Contact insufficient to justify personal jurisdiction. C.F.H. Enters., Inc. v. Heatcool, 538 F. Supp. 774 (D. Colo. 1982).

"Effects" test, as established by U.S. supreme court, specifies that where a defendant's intentional actions, taken outside the forum, are expressly directed at causing a harmful effect within the forum state, such actions are sufficient to satisfy due process in the context of an intentional tort. D & D Fuller CATV Const., Inc. v. Pace, 780 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1989).

Defendant's alleged tortious acts that have an effect in Colorado, without other contacts with Colorado, did not support a reasonable inference that defendant engaged in conduct subjecting it to personal jurisdiction. Archangel Diamond Corp. v. Arkhangelskgeoldobycha, 94 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 123 P.3d 1187 (Colo. 2005).

Jurisdiction over nonresident tortfeasor requires that the injury itself occur in Colorado, even if the negligent act occurs in an- other state. McAvoy v. District Court, 757 P.2d 633 (Colo. 1988); AST Sports Science, Inc. v. CLF Distribution Ltd., 514 F.3d 1054 (10th Cir. 2008).

Where Colorado resident was injured in an accident with a Washington resident in Washington due to alleged negligent actions which occurred in Washington, the allegations of subsequent treatment for the injury in Colorado, and effects of the accident which were manifest in Colorado, were not sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the Colorado court under the long-arm statute. McAvoy v. District Court, 757 P.2d 633 (Colo. 1988).

In order to satisfy the statutory standard for assertion of long arm jurisdiction, it is not necessary that both the tortious conduct constituting the cause and the injury constituting the effect take place in Colorado. However, the injury in the forum state must be direct, not consequential or remote. F.D.I.C. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, N.A., 937 F. Supp. 1461 (D. Colo. 1996).

Plaintiff's allegation of a tort caused by unauthorized disbursements from a London account failed to allege that defendants engaged in any tortious conduct in Colorado. Wenz v. Memery Crystal, 55 F.3d 1503 (10th Cir. 1995).

Plaintiff failed to allege an injury in Colorado sufficient to invoke personal jurisdiction under subsection (1)(b) where alleged unauthorized disbursements occurred in London and were from a London account. That plaintiff may have been economically affected in Colorado simply because he lived here is insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction under subsection (1)(b). Wenz v. Memery Crystal, 55 F.3d 1503 (10th Cir. 1995).

The loss of profits in the state of plaintiff's domicile is insufficient to sustain long-arm jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant. The injury in the forum state must be direct, not consequential or remote. When both the tortious conduct and the injury occur in another state, the fact that the plaintiff resides in Colorado and experiences some economic consequences here is insufficient to confer jurisdiction on a Colorado court. AMAX Potash Corp. v. Trans-Resources, Inc., 817 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1991); Gognat v. Ellsworth, 224 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 259 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2011).

A person's conduct causes a minor child to leave a custodial parent, when the parent does not consent, or prevents a child's return to such parent, such conduct constitutes a tortious act. D & D Fuller CATV Const., Inc. v. Pace, 780 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1989).

Defendant's allegedly tortious action in collecting upon a voided wage assignment was expressly directed at causing a harmful effect within the forum state and thus created a sufficient nexus between defendant and the forum state so as to satisfy due process. Vogan v. County of San Diego, 193 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2008).

Tortious conduct in a foreign state which causes injury in Colorado may be deemed to be an act committed in Colorado so as to satisfy the long-arm statute. Ranger v. Fortune Ins. Co., 817 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1991).

Tort claims of intentional and negligent misrepresentations directed into Colorado during the course of telephone conversations from outside the state into the state are sufficient to constitute tortious acts within the state under this section. Broadview Fin., Inc. v. Entech Mgmt. Servs. Corp., 859 F. Supp. 444 (D. Colo. 1994).

Personal jurisdiction existed over nonresident attorney and his law firm which, in addressing two letters to plaintiff in Colorado, purposely directed their activities toward Colorado and plaintiff's injuries relate to that contact with Colorado. First Entm't, Inc. v. Firth, 885 F. Supp. 216 (D. Colo. 1995).

Exercise of jurisdiction held proper where defendants, in connection with sale of sports car through Nebraska dealership, placed ad in national magazine, made allegedly fraudulent representations via telephone to Colorado plaintiff, and knew that car would be transported to and used in Colorado. Schocket v. Classic Auto Sales, Inc., 817 P.2d 561 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 832 P.2d 233 (Colo. 1992).

IV. REAL PROPERTY IN COLORADO.

Transaction involving Colorado property gives long arm jurisdiction. This section commonly referred to as the long arm statute specifically provides that a person who transacts business in the state of Colorado or owns real property in the state of Colorado submits himself to the jurisdiction of the courts of Colorado in any action arising from the transaction of such business or the ownership of such property. McHenry F.S., Inc., v. Clausen, 30 Colo. App. 253, 491 P.2d 592 (1971).

Being the state with greatest interest in transaction, jurisdiction in Colorado not offensive. Where a contract to purchase land was signed by both parties outside the state of Colorado but the defendant came to Colorado to view the property and employed a Colorado firm of consulting engineers to conduct a survey of the property, and the contract to purchase the property was prepared in Colorado, and the real estate broker and the vendor of the property were both Colorado residents, and the subject matter of the contract, the real estate, was located in Colorado thereby making Colorado the state with the greatest interest in the transaction, the defendant's purposeful acts in this state were significant, and the jurisdiction of the district court obtained through the long arm statute did not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Dwyer v. District Court, 188 Colo. 41, 532 P.2d 725 (1975).

Once defendants are personally served, court acquires in personam jurisdiction. Where the claims asserted against the defendants arose out of their title to certain real property and their transfer of that property to a company, and the defendants were personally served with process in the state of Illinois pursuant to the provisions of this section, consequently, the trial court obtained in personam jurisdiction over them. McHenry F.S., Inc. v. Clausen, 30 Colo. App. 253, 491 P.2d 592 (1971).

Nonresidency of all parties does not defeat long arm jurisdiction. The argument that since both the plaintiff and the defendants were residents of Illinois, the long arm statute was not available is without merit. McHenry F.S., Inc. v. Clausen, 30 Colo. App. 253, 491 P.2d 592 (1971).

V. CONTRACTS OF INSURANCE.

Reinsurance contract subject to law of state where made. The negotiation and execution outside the state of a contract of reinsurance is not doing business in the state where the insured property is situated and the original risk was assumed. Reinsurance effected under a contract made in one state does not constitute doing business in another, although the risks covered by the reinsurance agreement were in the latter state and were covered by the reinsurance contract. Perlman v. Great States Life Ins. Co., 164 Colo. 493, 436 P.2d 124 (1968).

Plaintiff must prove reinsurance treaty was executed in Colorado. As to the reinsurance treaties, the record fails to show that these were executed in Colorado. Plaintiff has the burden of proof in regard to this essential assertion of jurisdiction. Perlman v. Great States Life Ins. Co., 164 Colo. 493, 436 P.2d 124 (1968).

Mere fact that certain individuals who live in Colorado were parties to a reinsurance contract is insufficient to meet the minimum contacts test. Union Pac. R.R. Co. v. Equitas Ltd., 987 P.2d 954 (Colo. App. 1999).

Insurance company and liquidator subject to jurisdiction. Where an insurance company solicited and did substantial business in Colorado, the company, and its liquidator in case the company is insolvent, is subject to jurisdiction under the provisions of this section. Insurance Affiliates, Inc. v. O'Connor, 522 F. Supp. 703 (D. Colo. 1981).

VI. MAINTENANCE OF MATRIMONIAL DOMICILE.

Trial court held to have acquired personal jurisdiction over husband for purposes of dividing marital property. In re Booker, 833 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1992).

A spouse's affidavit that the spouse has resided and continues to reside in Colorado is sufficient for a Colorado court to exercise long arm jurisdiction over the husband under subsection (1)(e). In re Akins, 932 P.2d 863 (Colo. App. 1997).

Entry of foreign decree that determined only the status of the marriage without addressing the division of marital property did not deprive the Colorado court of the power to divide property exclusive of husband's military pension and to award maintenance and child support. In re Akins, 932 P.2d 863 (Colo. App. 1997).

Federal act preempts state rules regarding jurisdiction over a military pension. Under the supremacy clause, the terms of the federal Uniformed Services Former Spouse's Protection Act preempt state rules with respect to a court's jurisdiction to consider the military pension as a marital asset. In re Akins, 932 P.2d 863 (Colo. App. 1997).

13-1-125. Service of process. (1) Service of process upon any person subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of Colorado may be made by personally serving the summons upon the defendant or respondent outside this state, in the manner prescribed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure, with the same force and effect as if the summons had been personally served within this state.

(2) No service of any summons or other process upon any corporation shall be made outside the state in the manner provided in subsection (1) of this section when such corporation maintains an agent for process upon whom service may be made as provided in rule 4 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(3) Nothing in this section shall limit or affect the right to serve any process as prescribed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

I. General Consideration.

II. Proper Service.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "One Year Review of Colorado Law — 1964", see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965). For article, "Jurisdiction and Service of Process Beyond Colorado Boundaries", see 11 Colo. Law. 748 (1982). For article, "Legislative Activities in Family Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 1560 (1982).

This section and § 13-1-124 are sometimes referred to as the "long arm" or "single act" statute. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966); Cox v. District Court, 160 Colo. 437, 417 P.2d 792 (1966).

Purpose of sections was to extend the court's jurisdiction. These sections were passed by the general assembly in order to extend, rather than to limit the jurisdiction of the courts of the state. White-Rodgers Co. v. District Court, 160 Colo. 491, 418 P.2d 527 (1966).

Section may be used even when cause arose before effective date. This section and § 13-1-124 may be constitutionally applied where the complaint is filed after the effective date of the statute, though the tortious act complained of occurred before the effective date of the statute. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966); Cox v. District Court, 160 Colo. 437, 417 P.2d 792 (1966).

Retrospective application of this section is in accord with sound public policy. Smith v. Putnam, 250 F. Supp. 1017 (D. Colo. 1965).

For discussion of conspiracy theory of personal jurisdiction, see Bennett Waites Corp. v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 563 F. Supp. 810 (D. Colo. 1983).

Applied in Nations Enters, Inc. v. Process Equip. Co., 40 Colo. App. 390, 579 P.2d 655 (1978); Adolph Coors Co. v. A. Genderson & Sons, 486 F. Supp. 131 (D. Colo. 1980); Beckman v. Carlson, 553 F. Supp. 1049 (D. Colo. 1983).

II. PROPER SERVICE.

Transacting of business may not be proved unless process is properly served. Since respondents did not serve process on a foreign corporation by personal service as required by the "long arm" statute, its provisions concerning contacts sufficient to establish doing business are inapplicable under § 7-9-119. Geer Co. v. District Court, 172 Colo. 48, 469 P.2d 734 (1970).

It is improper to dismiss a complaint because of improper or invalid service of process. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966).

Quashing of process is not reviewable by writ of error. An order quashing a purported service of process is not tantamount to a judgment of dismissal and under our rules is not such an order as is subject to review by writ of error. Hoen v. District Court, 159 Colo. 451, 412 P.2d 428 (1966).

Process must be served on defendant at usual place of abode. The fact that the serviceman's usual place of abode was not the place of service is sufficient as a matter of law to overcome the prima facie showing made by the sheriff's return and that the service must therefore be set aside. Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

Term "usual place of abode" is not necessarily synonymous with domicile. The term "usual place of abode" has generally been construed to mean the place where that person is actually living at the time service is attempted. It is not necessarily synonymous with "domicile". Neher v. District Court, 161 Colo. 445, 422 P.2d 627 (1967).

For necessity of process being served by proper person, see Martin v. Denver Juvenile Court, 177 Colo. 261, 493 P.2d 1093 (1972).

Process will not be quashed for lack of jurisdiction if plaintiff makes prima facie showing. Where plaintiff makes prima facie showing of threshold jurisdiction in complaint, process is not vulnerable to motion to quash based upon lack of jurisdiction. Texair Flyers, Inc. v. District Court, 180 Colo. 432, 506 P.2d 367 (1973).

13-1-126. Documents in court proceedings - designation by clerk of representative to attend court proceedings. Documents from the office of the clerk of any court of record to be used as evidence in court proceedings shall be acknowledged, exemplified, verified, or attested to in a manner which shall make unnecessary the personal appearance of such clerk in court proceedings to acknowledge, exemplify, verify, or attest to the validity of such documents. The clerk of any court of record may designate a representative to attend court proceedings if the clerk is subpoenaed for the purpose of acknowledging, exemplifying, verifying, or attesting to the validity of documents furnished by the clerk's office.

(b) "Corporation" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (10), C.R.S.

(c) "Entity" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (20), C.R.S.

(d) "Limited liability company" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (32), C.R.S.

(e) "Limited partnership" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (34), C.R.S.

(f) "Limited partnership association" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (35), C.R.S.

(g) "Nonprofit association" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (38), C.R.S.

(h) "Nonprofit corporation" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (39), C.R.S.

(i) "Officer" means a person generally or specifically authorized by an entity to take any action contemplated by this section.

(j) "Owner" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 7-90-102 (43), C.R.S.

(k) "School district" means a school district organized and existing pursuant to law but does not include a junior college district.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in section 13-6-407, a closely held entity may be represented before any court of record or any administrative agency by an officer of such closely held entity if:

(a) The amount at issue in the controversy or matter before the court or agency does not exceed ten thousand dollars, exclusive of costs, interest, or statutory penalties, on and after January 1, 1991; and

(b) The officer provides the court or agency, at or prior to the trial or hearing, with evidence satisfactory to the court or agency of the authority of the officer to appear on behalf of the closely held entity in all matters within the jurisdictional limits set forth in this section.

(2.3) For the purposes of this section, each of the following persons shall be presumed to have the authority to appear on behalf of the closely held entity upon providing evidence of the person's holding the specified office or status:

(a) An officer of a cooperative, corporation, or nonprofit corporation;

(b) A general partner of a partnership or of a limited partnership;

(c) A person in whom the management of a limited liability company is vested or reserved; and

(d) A member of a limited partnership association.

(2.5) (a) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that the practice of law should not include the representation of a corporation in workers' compensation proceedings by an authorized employee of such corporation. While the general assembly respectfully recognizes the jurisdiction of the supreme court with respect to the regulation of the practice of law, it hereby finds and declares that the representation of a corporation in workers' compensation cases by an authorized employee of that corporation does not constitute the unauthorized practice of law. The general assembly has determined that the decision of a president or secretary of a corporation to have a corporate employee represent the corporation in a workers' compensation case is a business decision made voluntarily and knowingly by persons who are qualified and accustomed to making business decisions. The general assembly has further determined that allowing such representation will not hamper the orderly and proper disposition of workers' compensation cases and may expedite and facilitate such disposition. An employee of a defendant corporation with experience in the operations of such corporation and knowledge of the necessary facts and law can afford a defendant corporation with representation which is the substantial equivalent to, and may in some cases, be more effective than, a licensed attorney. The general assembly hereby declares that the protections afforded by the restrictions set forth by the supreme court with respect to the unauthorized practice of law are unnecessary for the described form of representation because the general public is not likely to be harmed by such representation. Further, the general assembly respectfully recommends that the supreme court adopt rules which permit and regulate such representation in which event the general assembly may choose to repeal this statute in deference to the supreme court's rules.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section concerning the amount at issue, any corporation which is in compliance with the requirements otherwise imposed on corporations by law may be represented by any employee of the corporation who is so authorized by the president or secretary of such corporation, in proceedings authorized under the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8, C.R.S., exclusive of proceedings before the industrial claim appeals office under part 3 of article 43 of title 8, C.R.S., appeals to the court of appeals under section 8-43-307, C.R.S., and summary reviews by the supreme court under section 8-43-313, C.R.S.

(3) The court may rely upon a written resolution of a closely held entity that allows a named officer to appear in the closely held entity's behalf.

(4) A closely held entity's exercise of the option authorized by this section to be represented by an officer shall not alone be construed to establish personal liability of the representing officer or any other officer, director, owner, or shareholder for action taken by that closely held entity.

(5) A corporate licensed child placement agency, as defined in paragraph (a.5) of subsection (1) of this section, that is in compliance with the requirements otherwise imposed on closely held entities by law, may be represented by any named officer or designated agent of the agency in any proceeding involving the termination of the parent-child relationship pursuant to the "Colorado Children's Code", title 19, C.R.S., or in any proceeding involving a petition for adoption pursuant to section 19-5-208, C.R.S.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to restrict the classes of persons who, or circumstances in which persons, may be represented by other persons, or may appear in person, before Colorado courts or administrative agencies.

(7) (a) A school district board of education may authorize, by resolution, one or more employees of the school district to represent the school district in truancy proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction; except that the authorization of the board of education shall not extend to representation of the school district before a court of appeals or before the Colorado supreme court.

(b) A court may rely on the written resolution of the school district board of education that authorizes the named employee to represent the school district in truancy proceedings.

(c) An authorized employee who represents a school district in truancy proceedings pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (7) shall not be subject to the provisions of section 12-5-112, C.R.S.

(d) A school district board of education's exercise of the option authorized by this section to be represented in truancy proceedings by an employee shall not alone be construed to establish personal liability of the representing employee or any other employee or a school director of the school district for action taken by the school district.

(b) The chief judge, for good cause shown, shall appoint the special prosecutor and shall order the impaneling of a grand jury in accordance with the provisions of article 73 of this title. Any special prosecutor appointed pursuant to this section shall be compensated as provided in section 20-1-308, C.R.S.

(2) In any civil action filed in any court of record in this state, the court may grant a motion for a preferential trial date upon the motion of a party who is a natural person at least seventy years of age and a finding by the court that such claim is meritorious, unless the court finds that such party does not have a substantial interest in the case as a whole.

(3) A motion under this section may be filed and served at any time when the case is at issue and a party meets the requirements of subsection (1) or (2) of this section.

(4) Upon the granting of a motion for a preferential trial date, the court shall set the case for trial not more than one hundred nineteen days from the date the motion was filed. The court shall establish an accelerated discovery schedule in all such cases. No continuance shall be granted beyond the one-hundred-nineteen-day period except for physical or mental disability of a party or a party's attorney or upon a showing of other good cause. When such a trial is held before a master, the parties shall pay the costs of such trial, as allocated fairly among the parties by the master. The master shall have all the powers of a judge.

An interactive audiovisual device shall operate so as to enable the person and the judge or magistrate to view and converse with each other simultaneously.

(2) Notwithstanding any provision of this section, a judge or magistrate may order a person to appear in court.

(3) A full record of such proceeding shall be made.

(4) The supreme court may prescribe rules of procedure pursuant to section 13-2-109 to implement this section.

Use of recycled paper. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that there is a need to expand upon existing laws which foster the effective and efficient management of solid waste by requiring that certain documents submitted by attorneys-at-law to state courts of record be submitted on recycled paper. The general assembly further finds that such expansion will protect and enhance the environment and the health and safety of the citizens of Colorado.

(II) (A) Procedures adopted to implement the provisions of this section shall not impede the conduct of court business nor create grounds for an additional cause of action or sanction.

(B) No document shall be refused by a court of record solely because it was not submitted on recycled paper.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to:

(I) Photographs;

(II) An original document that was prepared or printed prior to January 1, 1994;

(III) A document that was not created at the direction or under the control of the submitting attorney;

(IV) Facsimile copies otherwise permitted to be filed with a court of record in lieu of the original document; however, if the original is also required to be filed, such original shall be submitted in compliance with this section;

13-1-134. Court automation system - juvenile or domestic actions. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the accurate and efficient exchange of information between the courts and state family service agencies is beneficial in providing aid to families in need in Colorado. Further, the general assembly declares that the use of a computer automation system to link the courts with each other and with state family service agencies for the purpose of the exchange of information regarding families would aid in identifying and providing services to families in need. It is for this reason that the general assembly has adopted this section.

(2) (a) On or before January 15, 1996, the state court administrator shall establish and administer a program for automation of the court computer technology systems in order to link the juvenile courts and district courts involved in domestic actions around the state with each other and with state family service agencies, including, but not limited to, the department of human services, the juvenile probation department, law enforcement offices, and any other agency involved in the investigation, evaluation, or provision of services to families involved in domestic actions pursuant to title 19, C.R.S., and articles 4 and 10 of title 14, C.R.S. 13-1-136. Civil protection orders - single set of forms. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that the statutes provide for the issuance of several types of civil protection orders to protect the public, but that many of these protection orders have many elements in common. The general assembly also finds that consolidating the various forms for issuing and verifying service of civil protection orders and creating, to the extent possible, a standardized set of forms that will be applicable to the issuance and service of civil protection orders will simplify the procedures for issuing these protection orders and enhance the efficient use of the courts' and citizens' time and resources.

(2) On or before July 1, 2003, the state court administrator, pursuant to the rule-making authority of the Colorado supreme court, shall design and make available to the courts copies of a standardized set of forms that shall be used in the issuance and verification of service of civil protection orders issued pursuant to article 14 of this title or section 14-10-108, C.R.S., or rule 365 of the Colorado rules of county court civil procedure. The state court administrator shall design the standardized set of forms in such a manner as to make the forms easy to understand and use and in such a manner as will facilitate and improve the procedure for requesting, issuing, and enforcing civil protection orders.

(3) In developing the standardized set of forms for the issuance and verification of service of civil protection orders pursuant to this section, the state court administrator shall work with representatives of municipal, county, and district court judges, law enforcement, a member of the Colorado bar association, and representatives of other interested groups.

PART 2

COURT SECURITY CASH FUND COMMISSION

13-1-201. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that:

(a) Ensuring the safety of employees and users of state court facilities is a significant component of ensuring access to justice for the people of the state of Colorado;

(b) Responsibility for providing security for state court facilities lies with the county governments; and

(c) Colorado is a geographically, demographically, and economically diverse state and this diversity affects the funding and services of individual counties. Although the provision of security for state court facilities is a county responsibility, the variation in funds available to individual counties may not allow fundamental security measures to be met in each county.

(2) The general assembly, therefore, determines and declares that:

(a) The creation of the court security cash fund commission and the court security cash fund will be beneficial to, and in the best interests of, the people of the state of Colorado; and

(b) The goals of the commission and the cash fund shall be to:

(I) Provide supplemental funding for ongoing security staffing in the counties with the most limited financial resources; and

(II) Provide moneys to counties for court security equipment costs, training of local security teams on issues of state court security, and emergency needs related to court security.

(2) (a) The commission shall be composed of seven members, as follows:

(I) Two representatives of an association that represents county commissioners who are recommended by the association and who are appointed by the governor;

(II) Two representatives of an association that represents county sheriffs who are recommended by the association and who are appointed by governor;

(III) Two members of the judicial branch who are appointed by the chief justice; and

(IV) One member of the general public who is appointed by the chief justice.

(b) The commission membership described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall include, at all times, at least one representative from a county in which the population is above the median population for the state of Colorado, as determined by the most recent data published by the department of local affairs, and at least one representative from a county in which the population is below the median population for the state of Colorado, as determined by the most recent data published by the department of local affairs.

(3) The term of office of each member of the commission shall be three years; except that, of those members first appointed, one member representing each entity shall be appointed for a one-year term and one member representing each entity shall be appointed for a two-year term. All private and public moneys received by the state court administrator from gifts, grants, or donations shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the fund in addition to any moneys that may be appropriated to the fund directly by the general assembly.

(2) Moneys from the fund that are distributed to counties pursuant to this part 2 shall be used to supplement existing county funding for purposes related to security of facilities containing a state court or probation office and shall not be used to supplant moneys already allocated by the county for such purposes.

(3) All moneys credited to the fund shall be available for grants awarded by the state court administrator, based on recommendations of the commission, to counties for the purposes described in this part 2; except that the state court administrator may use up to ten percent of the moneys annually appropriated from the fund for administrative costs incurred through the implementation of this part 2. The state court administrator, subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly, is hereby authorized to expend moneys appropriated from the fund pursuant to this part 2.

What is procedural and what is substantive is frequently a question of great difficulty. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

The supreme court by rule cannot invest trial courts with an expanded jurisdiction. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Where there is a conflict between a statute and a rule, the former must govern; rules of court can neither abridge, enlarge, nor modify substantive rights of a litigant. Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 729 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988); Herstam v. Bd. of Dirs., 895 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1995).

ANNOTATION

Power to make rules is the constitutional right of the supreme court, aside from any common-law right or statutory grant. Kolkman v. People, 89 Colo. 8, 300 P. 575 (1931).

The word "rules" is synonymous with practice, procedure, custom, method, and system. Kolkman v. People, 89 Colo. 8, 300 P. 575 (1931).

Rules must not be inconsistent with the constitution or statute laws of the state. There is no statute giving costs to a defendant in case of a reversal of a criminal case, and the supreme court cannot award them under the guise of a power to prescribe rules of practice. Boykin v. People, 23 Colo. 183, 46 P. 635 (1896).

The court seriously questions the power of the general assembly to make any rules or to enact any laws relative to procedure in courts. It is doubtful if the general assembly could have enacted any law with reference to procedure in courts of record unless that power had been expressly or tacitly surrendered to it by the judiciary. Walton v. Walton, 86 Colo. 1, 278 P. 780 (1929).

Courts always have regulated their own practice and procedure. The act of the general assembly granting the supreme court the power to prescribe rules was not a delegation of legislative power, for the court has always regulated its own practice and procedure. Ernst v. Lamb, 73 Colo. 132, 213 P. 994 (1923).

The general assembly may not attempt to regulate the court's discretionary granting of a final decree in a divorce action for this is a procedural matter. Walton v. Walton, 86 Colo. 1, 278 P. 780 (1929).

13-2-111. Employees - compensation. (1) The supreme court may appoint one clerk, two deputy clerks, one librarian of the supreme court library, one reporter and an assistant reporter of its decisions, two bailiffs, and such additional clerical assistants as may be necessary.

(2) Each justice of the supreme court may appoint one or more law clerks and such clerical personnel as may be necessary to assist him in fulfilling the duties of his office.

(3) All employees appointed under the provisions of subsections (1) and (2) of this section shall be appointed and compensated pursuant to the provisions of section 13-3-105.

(2) In case of the absence of the bailiff, the court or judges may appoint some suitable person to act in his stead, and the person so appointed shall perform like services and shall receive the same salary as the bailiff.

13-2-115. Pensions of supreme court judges. (1) Any person who has served as a judge of the supreme court of Colorado for not less than ten years, who has ceased to hold said office, and who has reached the age of sixty-five years is entitled to receive an annual pension during the remainder of his life in the amount of one-fourth of the annual salary of an associate judge of the supreme court. If such judge has served twenty years or more and has attained the age of seventy-two years, the annual pension shall be one-third of the annual salary of an associate judge of the supreme court. All pensions due under this section shall be paid monthly out of the general fund of this state.

(2) Upon the death of any judge, eligible to receive an annual pension pursuant to this section, who leaves a surviving spouse of at least sixty-five years of age to whom he has been married for at least twenty years, such spouse is entitled to receive a pension during the remainder of such spouse's life, or as long as such spouse remains unmarried, in the amount of seven thousand dollars per year, payable monthly from the general fund of this state.

(3) It is the intent of this section to limit the benefits payable under this section to persons, or their widows, who have terminated their service on the supreme court prior to May 16, 1974, or whose election or appointment to the supreme court took place prior to May 16, 1974. Nowhere are pensions mentioned in the constitution of Colorado. Unless the granting of them is expressly prohibited, or language is used that by necessary implication must be construed as a prohibition, the power to grant them exists as a residual power of the state. *Bedford v. #### ANNOTATION

The publication of the opinions of the supreme court is not the publication of "department reports", within the meaning of § 29 of art. V, Colo. Const., which requires the printing, binding, and distribution of department reports to be performed under contract to be given to the lowest responsible bidder. Gillette v. Peabody, 19 Colo. App. 356, 75 P. 18 (1904).

13-2-123. Duty of reporter. It is the duty of the reporter of the decisions of said courts, within four months after a sufficient number of opinions to constitute a volume of the prescribed size have been delivered to him, to compile and prepare the same for publication, together with such other proceedings of the supreme court as the justices thereof may designate for insertion in such volume, with syllabi, title pages, digest, and table of cases reported.

13-2-124. Publication of reports. (1) In lieu of the publication of the opinions of the supreme court and the court of appeals as provided for in this article, the supreme court may designate the published volumes of the decisions of the supreme court and the court of appeals, as the same are published by any person, firm, or corporation, to be the official reports of the decisions of the supreme court and the court of appeals. Any publication so designated as the official reports may include both the opinions of the supreme court and the court of appeals in the same volume.

(2) When any law of this state refers to the reports of the supreme court of the state of Colorado, said law shall be construed as referring to the reports in which are also contained the reported opinions of the court of appeals created pursuant to article 4 of this title.

(3) All books, both bound and unbound, and matrices covering the reports of the supreme court and the court of appeals which were published prior to July 1, 1982, and which are in the custody of the supreme court shall remain in the custody of the supreme court for the purpose of sale or replacement, and the supreme court may fix the price at which the prior official reports of the supreme court and the court of appeals are to be sold to the public. The supreme court may replace any lost or destroyed books free of cost if such books were originally distributed free of cost. The supreme court may authorize the reprinting of any prior volumes, the replacement supply of which has become exhausted or insufficient. The supreme court may also contract for the storage of such books and to sell, give away, destroy, or otherwise dispose of any excess books, bound or unbound, which it deems not needed to provide a reasonable replacement supply.

13-2-125. Purchase, distribution, and sale of reports. (1) Upon the publication of each volume of the reports of the supreme court and the court of appeals under contract with the judicial department, the publisher shall be responsible for distributing as many copies as are required to meet the needs of the state in accordance with a list provided by the librarian of the supreme court. Costs of mailing incurred in such distribution shall be borne by the state from appropriations made to the judicial department.

(2) The distribution pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall include the following:

This shall not apply to the justices and reporter of the supreme court as to volumes prepared during their tenure of office.

(4) The publisher shall sell the reports of the supreme court and the court of appeals to the public at a price which is set at the cost of the report plus a twenty percent markup for handling. The publisher shall retain the markup charges and remit to the state the costs of the reports sold as reimbursement to the general fund for payment by the state of the expenses of publication thereof. The unsold copies of all reports shall remain the property of the state and shall be returned by the publisher to the secretary of state upon the termination of the contract for publication. Until otherwise designated by law or order of the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court, the secretary of state shall be the legal custodian of the reports of the supreme court and the court of appeals. The secretary of state shall sell any remaining copies of such reports to the public at such cost plus twenty percent and transmit the sale proceeds to the state treasurer for deposit to the credit of the general fund.

ANNOTATION

The Colorado judicial system personnel rules do not create an objective expectation of tenure which should be characterized as a property interest subject to due process protection. Hamm v. Scott, 426 F. Supp. 950 (D. Colo. 1977).

Contractual right of certified employee to continued employment would violate state policy. Even if the language of Colorado judicial system personnel rules 25 and 26, which relate to the dismissal of certified employees, could be read to create a contractual right to continued employment, a certified employee could not prevail because the recognition of such a contract would violate the expressed public policy of the state of Colorado. Hamm v.

Scott, 426 F. Supp. 950 (D. Colo. 1977).

The fourteenth amendment affords no extraordinary protection. Even if it were assumed that a certified employee had a recognizable property interest which would not be contrary to express public policy, the fourteenth amendment affords him no protection other than the ordinary protections that would be afforded in a court of law on a breach of contract suit.

Hamm v. Scott, 426 F. Supp. 950 (D. Colo. 1977).

Requirements for protection of certified employee. The minimum opportunity to learn of the reasons for the action terminating employment and a chance to address the decision-maker is all that would be required as protection to a certified employee. Hamm v. Scott, 426 F. Supp. 950 (D. Colo. 1977).

13-3-106. Judicial department operating budget - fiscal procedures. (1) (a) The court administrator, subject to the approval of the chief justice, shall prepare annually a consolidated operating budget for all courts of record subject to the provisions of section 13-3-104, such budget to be known as the judicial department operating budget.

(b) The court administrator, subject to the approval of the chief justice, shall prepare an annual budget request upon forms and according to procedures agreed to by the executive director of the department of personnel and the joint budget committee of the general assembly. The budget request documents and such additional information as may be requested shall be submitted to the department of personnel and the joint budget committee according to the same time schedule for budgetary review and analysis required of all executive agencies. The governor shall include recommendations for court appropriations as part of his or her regular budget message and according to section 24-37-301, C.R.S. The general assembly, upon recommendation of the joint budget committee, shall make appropriations to courts based on an evaluation of the budget request and the availability of state funds.

(2) The court administrator, subject to the approval of the chief justice, shall prescribe the procedures to be used by the judicial department and each court of record subject to the provisions of section 13-3-104, with respect to:

- (a) The preparation of budget requests;
  - (b) The disbursement of funds appropriated to the judicial department by the general assembly;
  - (c) The purchase of forms, supplies, equipment, and other items as authorized in the judicial department operating budget; and
  - (d) Any other matter relating to fiscal administration.
- (3) The court administrator shall consult with the state controller in the preparation of regulations pertaining to budgetary and fiscal procedures and forms and the disbursement of funds.

13-3-107. Consolidation of offices of clerks of court in certain counties. (1) The chief justice, pursuant to his authority under section 5 of article VI of the state constitution, may consolidate the offices of the clerks of the district and county courts in any county when he finds that there is insufficient judicial business to warrant the maintenance of separate offices.

(2) When the offices of the clerk of the district and county courts are so consolidated, the consolidated office shall be under a single clerk, who shall be both the clerk of the district court and the clerk of the county court; except that all functions, operations, and records required to be kept separate shall be so kept.

13-3-108. Maintenance of court facilities - capital improvements. (1) The board of county commissioners in each county shall continue to have the responsibility of providing and maintaining adequate courtrooms and other court facilities including janitorial service, except as otherwise provided in this section.

(2) The court administrator, subject to the approval of the chief justice, shall prepare annually a capital construction budget. The capital construction budget shall specify: The additional court housing facilities required for each court; the estimated cost of such additional structures or facilities and whether such additional court structures or facilities will include space used by other governmental units for nonjudicial purposes; and a detailed report on the present court facilities currently in use and the reasons for their inadequacy.

(4) (a) The chief justice is authorized to approve payment of state funds for the construction of any capital improvement facilities to be used for judicial purposes authorized and approved by the general assembly.

(b) The court administrator, with the approval of the chief justice, shall enter into leasing agreements with the governing body of the appropriate local unit of government when joint construction is authorized, or when the approved facilities are also to be used for nonjudicial purposes. The leasing agreement shall provide for the payment of state funds for that portion of the construction costs related to the operation of the courts.

(5) Construction or remodeling of any court or court-related facility shall be commenced only with prior approval of the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court after consultation with the board of county commissioners; except that a board of county commissioners, at its discretion, may take such actions.

ANNOTATION

Historically, Colorado law has placed the duty of providing a suitable courthouse upon the county commissioners of each county. Lawson v. Pueblo County, 36 Colo. App. 370, 540 P.2d 1136 (1975).

Even though the general assembly indicated its intention to take over from the counties the financial burden of providing judicial facilities, the general assembly has not provided funds for the construction of court facilities in the various counties of the state, and the burden of providing courtroom space and facilities remains with the counties. Lawson v. Pueblo County, 36 Colo. App. 370, 540 P.2d 1136 (1975).

Mandamus appropriate. The language of subsection (1) meets the test for mandamus relief, and thus, an action in the nature of mandamus is available as a proper means of enforcing the statute. Lawson v. Pueblo County, 36 Colo. App. 370, 540 P.2d 1136 (1975); State v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, Mesa County, 897 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1995).

Judicial guidelines. To achieve compliance with subsection (1) requiring county commissioners to provide adequate court facilities, without undue encroachment upon the prerogatives of the county commissioners, a judgment should give reasonable guidelines delineating what would constitute "adequate" space and then should direct that the space and related facilities be provided within a specific time. Included among the guidelines should be such physical requirements as dimensions, partitions, ventilation, security of prisoners, etc., as well as other details which would lead to creation of courtroom facilities of a character and quality commensurate with the proper and effective administration of justice. Lawson v. Pueblo County, 36 Colo. App. 370, 540 P.2d 1136 (1975).

Court exceeded its authority in issuing order requiring the board of county commissioners to provide a new judicial facility. While court does have the inherent authority to order the board to provide a new courthouse, the record does not demonstrate that the chief justice approved the initiation of the proceeding as required by subsection (5). In re Court Facilities for the Routt County Combined Ct., 107 P.3d 981 (Colo. App. 2004).

Mandamus order containing only one alternative unacceptable. While an action in the nature of mandamus will lie to enforce subsection (1), a judgment designating one alternative course of action that the county commissioners must follow in meeting the requirements of the subsection constitutes an unacceptable intrusion into the exclusive province of the executive branch of government, and, accordingly, the specific course of action to be followed by the county commissioners in complying with the subsection and with a mandamus judgment must be one of their choosing. Lawson v. Pueblo County, 36 Colo. App. 370, 540 P.2d 1136 (1975).

Subsection (5) is applied in Pena v. District Court, 681 P.2d 953 (Colo. 1984).

A county's duties under this section may not be reduced or ended pursuant to art. X, § 20(9) of the state constitution. State v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, Mesa County, 897 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1995).

13-3-109. Retirement - past service benefits. (1) Past service benefits in the public employees' retirement association shall be purchased for each employee covered under sections 13-3-104 and 13-3-105 who, on January 1, 1970, meets all of the following conditions:

- (a) Is sixty years of age or older;
- (b) Was not a member of a county or a city and county retirement plan, or, if a member, is not eligible to receive a deferred annuity;
- (c) If a member of a county or a city and county retirement plan, has withdrawn the funds credited to his account with the county or city and county retirement fund, and paid the full amount thereof, exclusive of any voluntary contributions to such county or city and county retirement plan, into the public employees' retirement association, or who withdraws such funds and deposits them with the public employees' retirement association no later than March 31, 1970.

(2) (a) When an employee meets all of the conditions in subsection (1) of this section, the public employees' retirement association shall grant him prior service credit based on length of service in a court, or department thereof, covered under sections 13-3-104 and 13-3-105, up to a maximum of five years.

(b) The public employees' retirement association shall calculate the cost of granting such prior service credit to each employee, after giving credit for the amount paid, if any, by the employee, and shall bill the judicial department for such cost. In the event that the cost for an employee is less than the amount paid in by him pursuant to subsection (1) (c) of this section, the treasurer of the public employees' retirement association shall instead refund the difference to the employee.

(c) The judicial department shall include the total of such billings in its appropriation request. The grant of prior service credits provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall be made only if an appropriation therefor is made by the general assembly.

(3) (a) Any employee under the age of sixty years covered under sections 13-3-104 and 13-3-105 who has been a member of a county or city and county retirement plan may purchase prior service credit by withdrawing the funds credited to his account with the county or city and county retirement fund and paying the full amount thereof into the public employees' retirement fund.

(b) The public employees' retirement association shall calculate the amount of prior service credit purchased by an employee as provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) and shall so notify him.

(c) An employee covered under sections 13-3-104 and 13-3-105 may also purchase prior service credit, not to exceed the actual number of years of employment in a court of record, or department thereof, by making a direct payment to the public employees' retirement association in an amount determined by the public employees' retirement association to be actuarially sound and without expense to the state.

(4) For the purposes set forth in article 51 of title 24, C.R.S., the employees for whom prior service credit is granted under this section shall be considered to have been employees of the state for the period of such prior service.

13-3-113. "Family-friendly Courts Act". (1) Short title. This section shall be known and may be cited as the "Family-friendly Courts Act".

(2) Legislative declaration. (a) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that many families experience challenges and transitions with legal ramifications that often necessitate court involvement. Frequently individuals and family members attend court or visit other governmental offices for juvenile delinquency proceedings, domestic relations proceedings, protective proceedings related to domestic abuse or domestic violence, child protection proceedings, meetings with probation officers, and other matters. Many persons who attend court proceedings are responsible for the care of young children. For many such individuals, child care issues can distract from, if not present obstacles or even barriers to, effective and complete participation in ongoing court proceedings. The general assembly finds that these issues were acknowledged and addressed in the 1999 report entitled "Creating Family Friendly Courts in Colorado: Children's Centers for the Courthouse", which report was submitted by the Colorado supreme court family friendly facilities task force and which report recommended the establishment of children's centers in courthouses.

(b) The general assembly further finds that the same individuals who are in need of child care services when they are participating in court proceedings may also benefit from the availability of information and resource referrals relating to certain types of services within the community, including services addressing at-risk youth, employment counseling, employment training and placement, health education and counseling, financial management, education, legal counseling and referral, mediation, domestic abuse and domestic violence, fatherhood programs, and substance abuse.

(c) The general assembly further finds that individuals who are involved in court proceedings may have additional court-ordered service needs involving their children, including, but not limited to, supervised parenting time and the transfer of the physical custody of a child from one parent to the other.

(d) The general assembly therefore determines and declares that the creation of family-friendly court programs is beneficial to and in the best interests of the citizens of Colorado. The general assembly further finds that the goal of such programs shall primarily be providing quality child care in or near courthouses to the children of individuals and families who attend court-related proceedings, but that such programs may also provide additional court-related family services at the facility and shall serve as a clearinghouse of information and resource referrals for program patrons concerning the wide variety of available services in the community, including services that provide help to at-risk youth, educational services, health services, mental health services, substance abuse services, legal services, and domestic abuse information.

(C) Information related to health insurance and health care coverage, including but not limited to the children's basic health plan and dental health plan, established pursuant to article 8 of title 25.5, C.R.S., and the baby and kid care program, established pursuant to section 25.5-5-205, C.R.S.;

(II) Reporting annually to the state court administrator concerning the results of the judicial district's evaluation of the family-friendly court program as well as an accounting of fiscal contributions received and expenditures made by the judicial district for the implementation, administration, and maintenance of the program and such other information that the state court administrator may require or that the judicial district determines to be relevant and informative.

(d) The judicial districts that are selected by the state court administrator to provide family-friendly court services that provide child care services shall meet the licensing requirements for child care facilities set forth in part 1 of article 6 of title 26, C.R.S., and all child care licensing rules promulgated by the state board of human services in connection therewith.

(e) In addition to grants received from the state court administrator pursuant to this section, judicial districts implementing or enhancing existing family-friendly court programs pursuant to this section are authorized to accept any funds, grants, gifts, or donations from any private or public source for the purpose of implementing this section; except that no grant or donation shall be accepted if the conditions attached to the grant or donation require the expenditure thereof in a manner contrary to law. Any such moneys received by a judicial district shall be credited to the family-friendly court program cash fund created in subsection (6) of this section for grants awarded by the board pursuant to this section.

All investment earnings derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the fund shall remain in the fund and shall not be transferred or revert to the general fund of the state at the end of any fiscal year.

(b) All moneys in the family-friendly court program cash fund, created in paragraph (a) of this subsection (6), shall be available for grants awarded by the state court administrator to judicial districts seeking to implement or enhance existing family-friendly court programs and administrative costs associated with the implementation and administration of this section. The state court administrator, subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly, is hereby authorized to expend moneys appropriated to the judicial department from the family-friendly court program cash fund to judicial districts seeking to establish or enhance family-friendly court programs pursuant to this section.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Problem of Delay in the Colorado Court of Appeals", see 58 Den. L.J. 1 (1980).

General assembly may change appellate subject matter jurisdiction. The changes brought about by this section, § 13-4-108, and § 13-4-110 pertain to the subject matter, i.e., jurisdiction of the supreme court and court of appeals and, as such, the changes are within the authority of the general assembly. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

Statutes pertaining to the creation of appellate remedies take precedence over judicial rules of procedure. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

A court cannot adopt a rule which changes jurisdiction. The supreme court has authority to adopt rules for the regulation of the business of the courts and the procedure to be followed by litigants in doing that business. Nonetheless, absent constitutional authority, it is equally clear that this court cannot adopt a rule which changes jurisdiction of a court contrary to a provision of a statute. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

Where the general assembly has enacted statutes prescribing appellate procedure, this court may not modify the jurisdiction granted it by statute. People v. Meyers, 43 Colo. App. 63, 598 P.2d 526 (1979).

The manner in which subject matter jurisdiction is exercised is properly within the scope of the supreme court's rule-making powers vested by § 2(1) of art. VI, Colo. Const. This procedure has been established and is set forth in C.A.R. 50-57. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

Court of appeals has no jurisdiction over constitutionality of a city charter. Where claimant contends that a city charter provision is unconstitutional, the Colorado court of appeals does not have jurisdiction to decide the issue. McCamant v. City & County of Denver, 31 Colo. App. 287, 501 P.2d 142 (1972).

Jurisdiction of court of appeals to hear appeal. Whether the court of appeals has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the district court, or any part thereof, depends upon whether the matters presented were properly before the district court. Zaharia v. County Court ex rel. County of Jefferson, 673 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1983).

An appeal that is filed before the entry of final judgment does not remove jurisdiction from the trial court. People v. Rosales, 134 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2005).

The final judgment of the district court, following a trial de novo, is subject to review by the court of appeals under both § 13-6-310 and this section. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

This section provides that court of appeals does not have initial jurisdiction over appeals from summary proceeding under certain election statutes, but statute does not bar court of appeals' jurisdiction after the supreme court has declined to exercise its initial jurisdiction. Zivian v. Brooke-Hitching, 28 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2001).

Right to appeal to courts from special assessment for public improvements does not exist except by statute. Orchard Court Dev. Co. v. City of Boulder, 182 Colo. 361, 513 P.2d 199 (1973).

Subsection (1)(h) expressly divests the court of appeals of jurisdiction over appeals from postconviction proceedings in cases in which the death penalty has been imposed. When this provision is combined with § 16-12-101.5 and §§ 16-12-201 to 16-12-210, the legislature has made plain that it does not want the court of appeals to resolve issues arising from cases in which the death penalty has been imposed. People v. Owens, 219 P.3d 379 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsection (2)(x) does not, by its language, limit the court of appeals' jurisdiction to review board of assessment appeals decisions that are not related to property valuation. Prop. Tax Adjustment Specialists, Inc. v. Mesa County Bd. of Comm'rs, 956 P.2d 1277 (Colo. App. 1998).

Final judgment defined. A final judgment is defined as one which ends the particular action in which it is entered, leaving nothing further for the court pronouncing it to do in order to completely determine the rights of the parties involved in the proceeding. D.H. v. People, 192 Colo. 542, 561 P.2d 5 (1977); Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 640 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of S.M.O., 931 P.2d 572 (Colo. App. 1996).

A decision on the merits is a final judgment for appeal purposes despite any outstanding issue of attorney fees and certification pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54 (b) is not a prerequisite to appellate review of the merits of a case if a judgment has been entered and only the issue of attorney fees remains to be determined. Baldwin v. Bright Mortg. Co., 757 P.2d 1072 (Colo. 1988).

An arbitrator's award is not a "final judgment" within the meaning of this section. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Order granting a stay in action pending resolution of case involving similar issues in another state was not a final appealable order where the issues and parties were not identical in the two proceedings and the order did not preclude plaintiff from seeking to lift the stay based upon a showing of prejudice. Things Remembered v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1089 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court of appeals jurisdiction is limited to review of final orders, and the parties cannot confer subject matter jurisdiction upon the court by consent. Arevalo v. Colo. Dept. of Human Servs., 72 P.3d 436 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court of appeals does not have jurisdiction to review the trial court's interpretation and enforcement of a settlement agreement until the trial court either certifies its orders as final pursuant to C.R.C.P. 54(b) or issues an order that outlines the parties' exact responsibilities pursuant to the settlement agreement and services plan and does not allow the trial court to further modify or vacate these responsibilities. Arevalo v. Colo. Dept. of Human Servs., 72 P.3d 436 (Colo. App. 2003).

A judgment of conviction is not final until sentence is imposed. Absent a specific finding that the victim did not suffer a pecuniary loss, restitution is a mandatory part of the sentence. Thus, absent such a finding, sentencing is not final until restitution is ordered. People v. Rosales, 134 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2005).

Order of dismissal without prejudice is a final judgment when the applicable statute of limitations period has expired. SMLL, L.L.C. v. Daly, 128 P.3d 266 (Colo. App. 2005).

A transfer order from juvenile to district court is not a final judgment from which appeal lies because it is interlocutory in nature and in no sense completely determines the rights of the parties. D.H. v. People, 192 Colo. 542, 561 P.2d 5 (1977).

Remand for further proceedings before city council of case against ordinance was final appealable order. Where the city council in enacting a special assessment ordinance had made all the required findings and in an action to enjoin the assessment, the district court, without explicitly stating whether it was affirming or reversing the council's action, remanded the case to the council for further proceedings, such action by the district court constituted final judgment and the court of appeals had jurisdiction to consider any appeal from the district court's order. Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975).

Trial court's order on attorney fees was a final judgment and could have been reviewed by the court of appeals if a party had appealed some other aspect of the case and the matter was otherwise properly before the court. Bye v. District Court, 701 P.2d 56 (Colo. 1985).

However, court of appeals has initial jurisdiction to review an order regarding attorney fees that has been certified as final by the trial court, even though other claims in the underlying action are pending before the trial court. Steven A. Gall, P.C. v. District Court, 965 P.2d 1268 (Colo. 1998).

A postjudgment collection order is final if the order ends the particular part of the action in which it is entered, leaves nothing further for the court pronouncing it to do in order to completely determine the rights of the parties as to that part of the proceeding, and is more than a ministerial or administrative determination. Luster v. Brinkman, 250 P.3d 664 (Colo. App. 2010).

No review of issue raised first time on appeal. Questioning the constitutionality of a statute for the first time in an appellate brief will not successfully raise the issue for review by Colorado supreme court on appeal. Manka v. Martin, 200 Colo. 260, 614 P.2d 875 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 913, 101 S. Ct. 1354, 67 L. Ed.2d 338 (1981).

No jurisdiction over constitutionality of statute. Court of appeals did not have jurisdiction to consider the constitutionality of a statute, despite a supreme court order stating that jurisdiction of the case "shall be retained by the court of appeals" because the general assembly did not intend to confer upon the supreme court the power to expand and contract the jurisdictional authority of the court of appeals. People v. Salazar, 715 P.2d 1265 (Colo. App. 1985), cert. denied, 744 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1987); Kollodge v. Charnes, 741 P.2d 1260 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Woertman, 786 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1989); Flores v. Dept. of Rev., 802 P.2d 1175 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Truesdale, 804 P.2d 287 (Colo. App. 1990); Lucchesi v. State, 807 P.2d 1185 (Colo. App. 1990); People v. Merrill, 816 P.2d 958 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Robinson, 833 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court of appeals has jurisdiction over constitutionality of a statute when issue raised in appeal of decisions of statutorily created tribunals under subsection (2). Indus. Comm'n v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 690 P.2d 839 (Colo. 1984).

Statute does not otherwise limit court of appeals authority to address constitutional issues raised in a Colorado appellate rule promulgated by the Colorado supreme court. Refusal to address the constitutional issues raised over C.A.R. 3.4 may mean that appellants would have no forum for their arguments, thus court of appeals concluded it had jurisdiction to address appellant's challenges to constitutionality of the rule. People ex rel. T.D., 140 P.3d 205 (Colo. App.), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1020, 127 S. Ct. 564, 166 L. Ed. 2d 411, and 549 U.S. 1024, 127 S. Ct. 565, 166 L. Ed. 2d 419 (2006).

Constitutional challenges to sales and use tax provisions of municipal code made to an administrative agency but were not made in declaratory judgment action in district court are not properly preserved for appellate review. Arapahoe Roofing & Sheet Metal v. Denver, 831 P.2d 451 (Colo. 1992).

Jurisdiction of the court of appeals was not precluded by subsection (1)(b) since the court was being asked to determine the facial constitutionality of an executive order of the mayor of the city and county of Denver rather than a statute, charter provision, or ordinance. Casados v. City & County of Denver, 832 P.2d 1048 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided prior to 1992 amendment to subsection (1)(b)), rev'd on other grounds, 862 P.2d 908 (Colo. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1005, 114 S. Ct. 1372, 128 L. Ed.2d 48 (1994).

General assembly's authority to determine the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is exclusive. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Parties to an arbitration agreement cannot define and prescribe the powers of a court of law. Where a contract term purported to allow an appellate court to conduct a substantive review of the arbitration panel's award, contrary to the controlling statutes, clause was void and unenforceable. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Court of appeals has jurisdiction to address facial constitutionality challenge to a municipal executive order. Casados v. City & County of Denver, 832 P.2d 1048 (Colo. App. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 862 P.2d 908 (Colo. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1005, 114 S. Ct. 1372, 128 L. Ed.2d 48 (1994).

However, where the court of appeals refers a question of its jurisdiction to the supreme court, which then determined the case properly within the court of appeal's jurisdiction, that ruling is conclusive. Barela v. Beye, 916 P.2d 668 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court of appeals lacks jurisdiction to review an arbitration award; jurisdiction extends only to orders and judgments entered by statutorily specified courts. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court of appeals does not possess general powers of supervision over lower courts or attorneys appearing therein. Rather, such powers are vested in the supreme court. People v. Bergen, 883 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant's assertion that Colorado's homicide statutes violate principles of equal protection brings into question the constitutionality of a statute and is therefore outside the jurisdiction of the court. People v. Seigler, 832 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the supreme court may retain and review an appeal of a declaratory order of the state personnel board that should have been filed with the court of appeals. The court's authority rests in its power under C.A.R. 50(b) to review cases pending in the court of appeals prior to judgment and under C.A.R. 2 to suspend the rules of appellate procedure. Colo. Ass'n of Pub. Emp. v. Dept. of Hwys., 809 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

Court of appeals does not have jurisdiction over writs of habeas corpus. All district courts have jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings and one seeking habeas corpus may select his forum. Duran v. Price, 868 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1994).

Crim. P. 35(c) motion is properly vested in the court of appeals. Duran v. Price, 868 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1994).

Under this section, the court of appeals does not have jurisdiction over an appeal of a district court's decision modifying a county court decision, regardless of whether a district court judgment which modifies a county court judgment is a final judgment of the district court under rule 37 of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure. People v. Smith, 874 P.2d 452 (Colo. App. 1993).

The final judgment of the district court, following a trial de novo, is subject to review by the court of appeals under both § 13-6-310 and this section. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

The dismissal of a claim without prejudice is generally not appealable unless such dismissal prohibits further proceedings, such as an applicable statute of limitations. Golden Lodge No. 13, I.O.O.F. v. Easley, 916 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1996).

The dismissal of a claim without prejudice for failure to exhaust the administrative remedies provided by the laws and regulations of the Sovereign Lodge was not appealable because the defendant Golden Lodge could at any time file an internal appeal protesting the actions of the Grand Lodge with the supreme governing body, the Sovereign Grand Lodge. Golden Lodge No. 13, I.O.O.F. v. Easley, 916 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1996).

A denial of a summary judgment motion is not generally considered a final decision that is immediately appealable under this section. City of Lakewood v. Brace, 919 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1996).

An appeal may be taken from an interlocutory order denying a motion to dismiss based on tribal sovereign immunity when the issue presented is one of law not of fact. Rush Creek Solutions, Inc. v. Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, 107 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court's order reserving ruling on a summary judgment motion and allowing full discovery to proceed is a final judgment for purposes of conferring appellate jurisdiction. Furlong v. Gardner, 956 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1998).

The same rules of finality apply in probate cases as in other civil cases. An order of the probate court is final if it ends the particular action in which it is entered and leaves nothing further for the court pronouncing it to do in order to completely determine the rights of the parties as to that proceeding. In re Estate of Scott, 119 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 892 (Colo. 2006).

C.R.C.P. 54(b) governs the interlocutory appeal of a probate court order. In re Estate of Scott, 119 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 892 (Colo. 2006).

Where probate court's order of partial summary judgment adjudicated fewer than all of the parties' claims, it was not a final judgment, and party could not appeal the order without C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification. In re Estate of Scott, 119 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 136 P.3d 892 (Colo. 2006).

As reenacted, § 22-63-302 authorizes teachers to appeal only school board decisions of dismissal. Under § 22-63-302, the court does not have jurisdiction to consider appeals of school board decisions placing a teacher on probation. Holdridge v. Bd. of Educ., 881 P.2d 448 (Colo. App. 1994).

Because an order directing a new trial is not a final judgment, the court of appeals has no jurisdiction over such an appeal, even if the defendant assert that a new trial would violate his or her rights. People v. Jones, 942 P.2d 1258 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court retains jurisdiction to determine substantive matters when a party files a premature notice of appeal of a nonfinal judgment. Barring extraordinary circumstances, a judgment subject to C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification must be so certified in order to be considered final and sufficient to transfer jurisdiction to the court of appeals. Musick v. Woznicki, 136 P.3d 244 (Colo. 2006).

A trial court's ruling on a question of sovereign immunity under the CGIA raised by a public entity or public employee is a final, appealable judgment. However, when a trial court refuses to dismiss on the basis of allegations of willful and wanton conduct that would eliminate the employee's immunity, its order is not immediately appealable. Carothers v. Archuleta County Sheriff, 159 P.3d 647 (Colo. App. 2006).

The court of appeals has jurisdiction to review a district court decision regarding matters within the water courts' exclusive jurisdiction only insofar as is necessary to determine its own and the district court's jurisdiction. Although the water courts do not, in general, have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the ownership of a water right as opposed to the use of the right under the rule of priority of appropriation, the rule is otherwise when the ownership claims are based on adverse possession and abandonment. In this case, the district court has jurisdiction only with regard to a damages claim, necessitating reversal of the holdings regarding ownership. Archuleta v. Gomez, 140 P.3d 281 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in Evans v. Simpson, 190 Colo. 426, 547 P.2d 931 (1976); In re Petrafeck v. Indus. Comm'n, 191 Colo. 566, 554 P.2d 1097 (1976); Kelce v. Touche Ross & Co., 37 Colo. Malacara*, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1980); People v. Scott, 630 P.2d 615 (Colo. 1981); In re W.D.A. v. City & County of Denver, 632 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1981); People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981); Riley v. Indus. Comm'n, 628 P.2d 147 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Boyd, 642 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Fields, 697 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1984); Leske v. Golder, 124 P.3d 863 (Colo. App. 2005).

13-4-102.1. Interlocutory appeals of determinations of questions of law in civil cases. (1) The court of appeals, under rules promulgated by the Colorado supreme court, may permit an interlocutory appeal of a certified question of law in a civil matter from a district court or the probate court of the city and county of Denver if:

(a) The trial court certifies that immediate review may promote a more orderly disposition or establish a final disposition of the litigation; and

(b) The order involves a controlling and unresolved question of law.

(2) A majority of the judges who are in regular active service on the court of appeals and who are not disqualified may, if approved by rules promulgated by the Colorado supreme court, order that an interlocutory appeal permitted by the court of appeals be heard or reheard by the court of appeals en banc.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (HB 10-1395), ch. 364, p. 1719, § 2, effective August 11.

ANNOTATION

Interlocutory resolution would not promote a more orderly disposition. Where plaintiff petitioned for interlocutory review of district court's order that economic loss rule barred plaintiff's other claims against defendants, immediate review would not have avoided a trial. Therefore, interlocutory resolution of the economic loss question would not promote a more orderly disposition of the litigation. Wahrman v. Golden W. Realty, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

13-4-103. Number of judges - qualifications. (1) The number of judges of the court of appeals shall be sixteen. Subject to available appropriations, effective July 1, 2008, the number of judges of the court of appeals shall be twenty-two.

(2) Judges of the court of appeals shall have the same qualifications as justices of the Colorado supreme court.

Temporary judicial duties. Whenever the chief justice of the supreme court deems assignment of a judge necessary to the prompt disposition of judicial business, the chief justice may assign any judge of the court of appeals, or any retired judge of the court of appeals who consents, to temporarily perform judicial duties in any court of record. For each day of such temporary service a retired judge shall receive compensation as provided by law.

13-4-106. Divisions. (1) The court of appeals shall sit in divisions of three judges each to hear and determine all matters before the court.

(2) The chief judge, with the approval of the chief justice, shall assign judges to each division. Such assignments shall be changed from time to time as determined by the chief judge, with the approval of the chief justice.

(3) Cases shall be assigned to the divisions of the court of appeals in rotation according to the order in which they are filed with the clerk of the court of appeals or transferred by the supreme court, except that the chief judge has the authority to transfer cases from one division to another to maintain approximately equal case loads or for any other appropriate reason.

13-4-108. Supreme court review. (1) Before application may be made for writ of certiorari, as provided in this section, application shall be made to the court of appeals for a rehearing if required by supreme court rule.

(2) Within thirty days after a rehearing has been refused by the court of appeals, any party in interest who is aggrieved by the judgment of the court of appeals may appeal by application to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari.

(3) Procedures on writs of certiorari, including procedures for rehearings, shall be as prescribed by rule of the supreme court.

- (a) The subject matter of the appeal has significant public interest;
- (b) The case involves legal principles of major significance; or

(c) The case load of the court of appeals is such that the expeditious administration of justice requires certification.

(2) The supreme court shall consider such certification and may accept the case for final determination or remand it for determination by the court of appeals.

(3) The supreme court may order the court of appeals to certify any case before the court of appeals to the supreme court for final determination.

Determination of jurisdiction - transfer of cases. (1) (a) When a party in interest alleges, or the court is of the opinion, that a case before the court of appeals is not properly within the jurisdiction of the court of appeals, the court of appeals shall refer the case to the supreme court. The supreme court shall decide the question of jurisdiction in a summary manner, and its determination shall be conclusive.

(b) A party in interest shall allege that a case is not properly within the jurisdiction of the court of appeals by motion filed with the court of appeals within twenty-one days after the date the record is filed with the clerk of the court of appeals, failing which any objection to jurisdiction by a party in interest shall be waived.

(2) Any case within the jurisdiction of the court of appeals which is filed erroneously in the supreme court shall be transferred to the court of appeals by the supreme court.

(3) No case filed either in the supreme court or the court of appeals shall be dismissed for having been filed in the wrong court but shall be transferred and considered properly filed in the court which the supreme court determines has jurisdiction.

ANNOTATION

Section is not in conflict with the constitution. This section and § 13-4-108, and § 2(2) of art. VI, Colo. Const., are not in conflict. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

General assembly may legislate appellate subject matter jurisdiction. The changes brought about by this section, § 13-4-102, and § 13-4-108 pertain to the subject matter, i.e., jurisdiction of the supreme court and court of appeals and, as such, the changes are within the authority of the general assembly. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

Procedure is established for final review in the supreme court. The procedure established in this section and § 13-4-108 and in C.A.R. 50-57 clearly provides for appellate review in the supreme court. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

Because the substance of the complaint addressed primarily the use of water rights rather than their ownership, the complaint related to a water matter and should have been filed in a water court. However, the appeal was properly transferred from the supreme court to the court of appeals because the appeal was from a district court judgment. City of Sterling v. Sterling Irrig. Co., 42 P.3d 72 (Colo. App. 2002).

Although subsection (3) provides that cases filed in wrong appellate court shall not be dismissed, where appeal will not lie in either court, the only review being by certiorari, the case must be dismissed for failure to comply with the statutory procedure. People v. Meyers, 43 Colo. App. 63, 598 P.2d 526 (1979).

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the supreme court may retain and review an appeal of a declaratory order of the state personnel board that should have been filed with the court of appeals. Emp. v. Dept. of Highways*, 809 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-5-127 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 46, § 91, a relevant case construing those provisions has been included in the annotations to this section.

From whom a defendant can obtain the testimony for his bill of exceptions. The defendant had the right to assume that he would obtain the testimony from the stenographer for his bill of exceptions. He was not called upon to make any other arrangements nor to anticipate that he would be called upon to procure that testimony from any other source, nor compelled to depend upon the uncertain memory of those present as to what the testimony was. King v. People, 54 Colo. 122, 129 P. 235 (1912)(special concurring opinion by J. Musser).

It has been the invariable custom for district judges to appoint stenographers for their respective districts to appear at every criminal trial, and under the court's direction, take down the testimony and other matters, and when a defendant wanted a bill of exceptions, containing all of the testimony in a case, if desired, it has been the custom invariably to obtain it from the stenographer. King v. People, 54 Colo. 122, 129 P. 235 (1912)(special concurring opinion by J. Musser).

Court of record has an affirmative duty to contemporaneously record all proceedings. Reconstruction of the record at a later time is not an adequate substitute for a contemporaneous record. Jones v. District Court, 780 P.2d 526 (Colo. 1989).

13-5-128. Compensation of reporter. The shorthand reporter of a court of record shall be compensated for preparation of the original and any copies of the typewritten transcript of his shorthand notes at such rates as from time to time may be established and promulgated by the supreme court of the state of Colorado. Where, in a court of record, no shorthand reporter is employed and trial transcripts are prepared by other court personnel, such personnel shall be similarly compensated for any transcript preparation required to be accomplished in other than normal working hours.

Annotator's note. Since § 13-5-131 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 46, § 107, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is constitutional. Jordan v. Peo- ple, 19 Colo. 417, 36 P. 218 (1894).

Intent of section is to empower each district court judge to rule on matters challenging the constitutionality of the death penalty and procedures for qualifying a jury for a death penalty case only when sitting separately. Tolerton v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1020 (Colo. 1981).

District court has no authority to set motions challenging constitutionality of death penalty and procedures for qualifying a jury for a death penalty case for a hearing or for determination by a multi-judge panel. Tolerton v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1020 (Colo. 1981).

Each of the judges herein provided for is authorized to exercise the powers of a district court. Jordan v. People, 19 Colo. 417, 36 P. 218 (1894).

Each judge must exercise all the powers and functions of the court. In the trial of causes, and in the hearing and determination of any matter of purely judicial cognizance pending in the district court, each judge must sit and act alone. He must exercise all the powers and functions of the court and assume the full responsibility in the decision of each and every cause, demurrer, motion, and the like, coming before him for adjudication, as if he were the sole judge of said court. Two or more judges, by sitting together, cannot share or divide such responsibility. They cannot thus jointly hear and determine, and render a valid and binding judgment or order in any cause. People ex rel. Rucker v. District Court, 14 Colo. 396, 24 P. 260 (1890).

Purposes set forth in § 13-5-133 (3) do not include the hearing or determination of motions or the making of decisions, orders, decrees, or judgments in criminal or civil cases filed in the district court. Tolerton v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1020 (Colo. 1981).

13-5-132. Powers of judges sitting separately. Each court held by the several judges, while sitting separately, shall be known as the district court in and for the county where such court is held and shall have the same power to vacate or modify its own judgments, decrees, or orders rendered or made while so held as if the said court were composed of a single judge.

Intent of section is to empower each district court judge to rule on matters challenging the constitutionality of the death penalty and procedures for qualifying a jury for a death penalty case only when sitting separately. Tolerton v. District Court, 625 P.2d 1020 (Colo. 1981).

A second judge may correct error of a judge no longer on the bench. It makes little sense to hold that if a palpable error were committed by one judge in refusing the continuance, it cannot be corrected by a second judge since the judge first presiding is no longer on the bench. Sunshine v. Robinson, 168 Colo. 409, 451 P.2d 757 (1969).

13-5-133. Judges may sit en banc - purpose - rules. (1) In any district court composed of more than one judge, the judges may sit en banc at such times as they may determine, for the purpose of making rules of court, the appointment of a clerk and other employees, subject to the provisions of section 13-3-105, and other ministerial duties, subject to the administrative powers delegated to the chief judge by the chief justice of the supreme court pursuant to section 5 (4) of article VI of the state constitution.

(2) Subject to the approval of the chief justice of the supreme court, a district court sitting en banc may make rules:

(a) To facilitate the transaction of business in the courts held by the judges sitting separately; and

(b) To provide for the classification, arrangement, and distribution of the business of the court among the several judges thereof.

(3) Judges of a district court in districts having more than one judge may sit en banc only for the purposes enumerated in this section, and the court so sitting en banc shall have no power to review any order, decision, or proceeding of the court held by any judge sitting separately.

ANNOTATION

Neither this section nor § 13-5-136 is an authority for the entry of a judgment in vacation or at chambers. A judgment appearing upon the records of the district court of one county, but which by the same record appears to have been rendered by the judge while at his chambers, in a different county, will be reversed on appeal. Scott v. Stutheit, 21 Colo. App. 28, 121 P. 151 (1912).

This section does not divest jurisdiction or affect the validity of a judgment. Neither the statute nor the constitution in any way divests the trial court of jurisdiction to render a decision or affects the validity of the judgment rendered solely because of the lengthy delay between trial and judgment. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

The bare fact of the delay is not sufficient to warrant reversal of the judgment. Since no transcript of the evidence has been presented to this court, it appears that the findings of fact and conclusions of law are fully supported by the evidence. Uptime Corp. v. Colo. Research Corp., 161 Colo. 87, 420 P.2d 232 (1966).

13-5-136. Forfeit of salary. (1) If any judge of any district court, to whom any motion, issue, or other matter, arising in any cause, is submitted for judgment or decision, fails or neglects to decide or give judgment upon the same within the time limited by section 13-5-135, such judge shall not receive from the state treasury any salary for the quarter in which such failure occurred, when the following requirements are satisfied:

(a) The party aggrieved by the failure of such judge to rule in a timely manner files a complaint demanding the withholding of the salary of such judge with the commission on judicial discipline established in section 23 (3) of article VI of the state constitution;

(b) The commission on judicial discipline, in accordance with rule 4 of the Colorado rules of judicial discipline, investigates the judge's alleged violation of section 13-5-135;

(c) After such investigation the commission on judicial discipline, in accordance with rule 4 of the Colorado rules of judicial discipline, makes a recommendation concerning the allegation to the Colorado supreme court; and

(d) If deemed appropriate, the Colorado supreme court issues an order directing the department of the treasury to withhold the judge's salary.

(2) This section shall not apply in case of the sickness or death of a judge.

Evaluation in retention election years. (1) (a) (I) The state commission shall conduct an evaluation of each justice of the supreme court and each judge of the court of appeals whose term is to expire and who must stand for retention election. The evaluations shall be referred to in this subsection (1) as "retention year evaluations".

(II) Retention year evaluations shall be completed and the narrative prepared and communicated to the appellate justice or judge no later than forty-five days prior to the last day available for the appellate justice or judge to declare such justice's or judge's intent to stand for retention.

(III) Prior to the completion of the narratives for retention year evaluations, and following at least ten days' notice to the public and the appellate justices and judges, it is highly recommended that the state commission hold a public hearing regarding all appellate justices and judges who are subject to retention year evaluations. The state commission shall arrange to have the public hearing electronically recorded and shall make copies of the recording available to members of the public. The state commission shall supply a copy of the recording at no cost to any justice or judge who is the subject of the hearing.

(IV) The narrative prepared for a retention year evaluation shall include an assessment of the appellate justice's or judge's strengths and weaknesses with respect to the judicial performance criteria contained in section 13-5.5-105.5 (1), a discussion regarding any deficiency identified in the interim evaluation prepared pursuant to section 13-5.5-106.3, and a statement of whether the state commission concludes that any deficiency identified has been satisfactorily addressed by the justice or judge.

(V) Each appellate justice or judge who receives a retention year evaluation shall have the opportunity to meet with the state commission or otherwise respond to the evaluation no later than ten days following the justice's or judge's receipt of the evaluation. If the meeting is held or response is made, the state commission may revise its evaluation.

(b) After the requirements of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) are met, the state commission shall make a recommendation regarding the retention of each appellate justice or judge who declares his or her intent to stand for retention, which recommendation shall be stated as "retain", "do not retain", or "no opinion". A "no opinion" recommendation shall be made only when the state commission concludes that results are not sufficiently clear to make a firm recommendation and shall be accompanied by a detailed explanation. The narrative shall include the number of commission members who voted for and against the recommendation.

(c) The state commission shall release the narrative, the recommendation, and any other relevant information related to a retention year evaluation to the public no later than forty-five days prior to the retention election. The state commission shall arrange to have the narrative and recommendation printed in the ballot information booklet prepared pursuant to section 1-40-124.5, C.R.S., and mailed to electors pursuant to section 1-40-125, C.R.S.

(2) (a) (I) The district commission shall conduct an evaluation of each district and county judge whose term is to expire and who must stand for retention election. The evaluations shall be referred to in this subsection (2) as "retention year evaluations".

The district commission shall arrange to have the public hearing electronically recorded and shall make copies of the recording available to members of the public. The district commission shall supply a copy of the recording at no cost to any judge who is the subject of the hearing.

(IV) The narrative prepared for a retention year evaluation shall include an assessment of the district or county judge's strengths and weaknesses with respect to the judicial performance criteria contained in section 13-5.5-105.5 (2), a discussion regarding any deficiency identified in the interim evaluation prepared pursuant to section 13-5.5-106.3, and a statement of whether the district commission concludes that any deficiency identified has been satisfactorily addressed by the judge.

(V) Each judge who receives a retention year evaluation shall have the opportunity to meet with the district commission or otherwise respond to the evaluation no later than ten days following the judge's receipt of the evaluation. If the meeting is held or response is made, the district commission may revise its evaluation.

(b) After the requirements of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) are met, the district commission shall make a recommendation regarding the retention of each district or county judge who declares his or her intent to stand for retention, which recommendation shall be stated as "retain", "do not retain", or "no opinion". A "no opinion" recommendation shall be made only when the district commission concludes that results are not sufficiently clear to make a firm recommendation and shall be accompanied by a detailed explanation. The narrative shall include the number of commission members who voted for and against the recommendation.

(c) The state commission shall release the narrative, the recommendation, and any other relevant information to the public no later than forty-five days prior to the retention election. Recusal. (1) A member of the state commission or a district commission shall disclose to the commission any professional or personal relationship with a justice or judge that may affect an unbiased evaluation of the justice or judge, including involvement with any litigation involving the justice or judge and the member, the member’s family, or the member’s financial interests. The state commission or a district commission may require the recusal of one of its members on account of a relationship with a justice or judge upon a two-thirds vote of the other members of the commission.

(2) A member of the state commission or a district commission shall recuse himself or herself from participating in the consideration and vote on any matter involving the evaluation of a justice or judge for failure to meet the training, courtroom observation, interview, or opinion review responsibilities provided by rule, unless excused by a two-thirds vote of the other members of the commission.

(3) An attorney serving as a member of the state commission or a district commission shall not request that a justice or judge being evaluated by the commission be recused from hearing a case in which the attorney appears as counsel of record, or request permission to withdraw from a case pending before a justice or judge being evaluated, solely on the basis that the attorney is serving as a member of a commission.

13-6-103. Statewide jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the county court shall extend to all cases which arise within the boundaries of this state or are subject to its judicial power and which are within the limitations imposed by this article, but the exercise of this jurisdiction is subject to restrictions of venue as established by this article or, if there are none, by rule of the Colorado supreme court.

The county court shall also have jurisdiction of counterclaims in all such actions when the counterclaim does not exceed fifteen thousand dollars.

(2) The county court shall have concurrent original jurisdiction with the district court in actions to foreclose liens pursuant to article 20 of title 38, C.R.S., and in cases of forcible entry, forcible detainer, or unlawful detainer, except when such cases involve the boundary or title to real property and except as provided in section 13-40-109. ## ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.

II. Subject Matter Jurisdiction.

III. Jurisdictional Amount.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For comment on Ohmie v. Martinez, appearing below, see 38 Dicta 123 (1961). For note, "Rural Poverty and the Law in Southern Colorado", see 47 Den. L.J. 82 (1970).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-6-104 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 46, § 156, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The jurisdiction of district and county courts is concurrent with respect to matters which fall within the jurisdiction of both. Ohmie v. Martinez, 141 Colo. 480, 349 P.2d 131 (1960).

County court may enforce a state agency's imposition of a monetary penalty. Gibbs v. Colo. Mined Land Reclamation Bd., 883 P.2d 592 (Colo. App. 1994).

II. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION.

County courts have general subject matter jurisdiction. Jurisdiction of the subject matter is the power to deal with the general abstract question, to hear the particular facts in any case relating to this question, and to determine whether or not they are sufficient to invoke the exercise of that power. Camplin v. Jackson, 34 Colo. 447, 83 P. 1017 (1905).

County court has jurisdiction in all civil matters, both in law and in equity, except as expressly limited. Flynn v. Casper, 26 Colo. App. 344, 144 P. 1137 (1914), citing Sievers v. Garfield County Court, 11 Colo. App. 147, 52 P. 634 (1898); Arnett v. Berg, 18 Colo. App. 341, 71 P. 636 (1903).

County court has jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings. Habeas corpus by a parent, demanding the custody of his infant child, is, under this section, within the jurisdiction of the county court. Flynn v. Casper, 26 Colo. App. 344, 144 P. 1137 (1914).

This section does not apply to proceedings under the eminent domain act. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Poundstone, 74 Colo. 191, 220 P. 234 (1923).

Nor does it apply in proceedings for injunction against city or town ordinance. County courts have no jurisdiction to control, by injunction, proceedings before police magistrates or justices of the peace acting as such in the enforcement of the ordinances of cities and towns. Hart v. Dana, 12 Colo. App. 499, 55 P. 958 (1889).

III. JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT.

Annotator's note. The jurisdictional amount in repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 46, § 156, was $2,000.

The purpose behind regulating the jurisdiction of the county court as to the amount in controversy is to expedite the handling of small claims. This purpose must be considered in the light of the policy that a person cannot be allowed to invoke the jurisdiction of a court, acquiesce in the decree thus obtained, and later question the validity of the judgment when it is enforced against him. Under the circumstances, the petitioner is estopped by his acquiescence and conduct from asserting the invalidity of the judgment in the county court. In re Estate of Lee v. Graber, 170 Colo. 419, 462 P.2d 492 (1969).

Jurisdictional allegation is an essential prerequisite. Jurisdictional allegation in the complaint that the relief sought does not exceed the jurisdictional sum is an essential prerequisite to the exercise of jurisdiction by the court. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943).

This section does not prescribe a form for the jurisdictional averment. There is nothing in this section that indicates an intention to require the jurisdictional averment to be in a prescribed form. The import of the language employed therein is, that it must affirmatively appear from the complaint that the value of the property in controversy, or the amount involved, for which relief is sought, does not exceed the jurisdictional sum. Hughes v. Brewer, 7 Colo. 583, 4 P. 1115 (1884); Bloomer v. Jones, 22 Colo. App. 404, 125 P. 541 (1912).

Complaint may be amended to show jurisdiction. A complaint in a county court which is insufficient by reason of the omission of a jurisdictional averment may be amended so as to give the court jurisdiction. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943).

Amendment may be allowed to include averment. In condemnation proceedings in the county courts under this section the complaint, if lacking the requisite jurisdictional allegations, is not entirely void but amendable, and when a complaint is amended, it stands as though it had originally read as amended. Goodman v. City of Ft. Collins, 164 F. 970 (8th Cir. 1908).

A defect in this respect may be aided by the answer. A complaint in an action in the county court which did not allege that the value of the property involved was less than $2,000, if defective in that respect, was aided by the answer, which alleged it was not worth $1,500. Petri v. Doughty, 75 Colo. 551, 227 P. 388 (1924).

In a bill to quiet title to lands, an averment that "the value of the property involved does not exceed or equal two thousand dollars", suffices to support the jurisdiction of the county court. Green v. Gibson, 53 Colo. 346, 127 P. 239 (1912).

Complaint must indicate value of land. In a complaint, in an action to quiet the title to lands, no money judgment being demanded, an averment that "the amount herein involved and sued for does not equal $2,000", gives no indication of the value of the land, and is not a compliance with this section. A decree given upon such complaint is void, and may be collaterally assailed. Bloomer v. Jones, 22 Colo. App. 404, 125 P. 541 (1912).

On error defendant will not be heard to question the jurisdiction of the court for want of the averment as to the amount in controversy required by this section. To permit the jurisdiction to be thus questioned for the first time in the court of review would deprive plaintiff of the right to amend granted by the code of civil procedure. Nelson v. Chittenden, 53 Colo. 30, 123 P. 656 (1912).

Uncertainties in the record will be resolved in favor of the party successful below; e.g., as to whether an averment essential to the jurisdiction of the court below, appearing by interlineation in the complaint, was therein, when it was originally filed. Dunkle v. French, 51 Colo. 170, 116 P. 1039 (1911).

Determination of jurisdictional amount. The amount fixed as the statutory limitation of the jurisdiction must be taken to mean the amount due the plaintiff, or the value or amount of his claim, or the value of the property sought to be recovered at the time of bringing the action, and in an action for the recovery of money, where the principal sum draws interest, if the amount due at the time of the commencement of the action, including interest, does not exceed the jurisdictional amount, the county court, under the constitution and this section, has jurisdiction, and the accumulation of interest pendente lite will not oust such jurisdiction. Denver Brick Mfg. Co. v. McAllister, 6 Colo. 326 (1882).

Jurisdictional limit applies to the total amount to be paid, and not to each monthly payment of child support. Mathews v. Urban, 645 P.2d 290 (Colo. App. 1982).

For when averments are sufficient, see Hughes v. Brewer, 7 Colo. 583, 4 P. 1115 (1884).

Once a court has jurisdiction over a case because the total sum sought is within the jurisdictional limit, the court does not lose jurisdiction simply because the case is litigated, and attorney fees incurred and awarded exceed the jurisdictional amount. Ferrell v. Glenwood Brokers, Ltd., 848 P.2d 936 (Colo. 1993).

13-6-105. Specific limits on civil jurisdiction. (1) The county court shall have no civil jurisdiction except that specifically conferred upon it by law. In particular, it shall have no jurisdiction over the following matters:

- (a) Matters of probate;
- (b) Matters of mental health, including commitment, restoration to competence, and the appointment of conservators;
- (c) Matters of dissolution of marriage, declaration of invalidity of marriage, and legal separation;
- (d) Matters affecting children, including the allocation of parental responsibilities, support, guardianship, adoption, dependency, or delinquency;
- (e) Matters affecting boundaries or title to real property;
- (f) Original proceedings for the issuance of injunctions, except as provided in section 13-6-104 (5), except as required to enforce restrictive covenants on residential property and to enforce the provisions of section 6-1-702.5, C.R.S., and except as otherwise specifically authorized in this article or, if there is no authorization, by rule of the Colorado supreme court.

(2) Any powers or duties previously placed in the county court by law in connection with any of the matters excluded from the jurisdiction of the county court by this section are transferred to the district court or, if within their jurisdiction, to the probate court of the city and county of Denver or the juvenile court of the city and county of Denver, and the statutes relating thereto shall be so construed.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent the appointment of county judges as magistrates in juvenile matters or as magistrates in mental health and other matters. Appointments of county judges as magistrates in mental health and other matters are authorized, and, when so appointed by the district judge, the county judge shall serve as a district court officer for the designated purposes.

ANNOTATION

Specific exclusions to county court jurisdiction are found in this section. The jurisdiction of the newly created county courts was defined and specific exclusions were mentioned in this section. Rowland v. Theobald, 159 Colo. 1, 409 P.2d 272 (1965).

Election disputes are not withdrawn from county court jurisdiction. Six classifications of legal matters are expressly mentioned with reference to which the county court shall have no jurisdiction. Nothing concerning election disputes is withdrawn from consideration by the county courts by these expressed exclusions. Rowland v. Theobald, 159 Colo. 1, 409 P.2d 272 (1965).

County court forced entry and detainer judgment not dispositive of subsequent property ownership question. Because county courts are specifically precluded from deciding any matters affecting title to real property, judgment entered in a county court forced entry and detainer action cannot be dispositive of the property ownership question in a subsequent quiet title action. Gore Trading Co. v. Alice, 35 Colo. App. 97, 529 P.2d 324 (1974).

Section not applicable to decrees of specific performance. In interpreting the reference in this section to "injunctions", presumption is that the general assembly was aware of the legal distinction between injunctions and specific performance decrees. Therefore, subsection (1)(f), which limits a county court's power to issue injunctions, does not limit the court's power to issue decrees of specific performance, and C.R.C.P. 370 properly may be read with the understanding that county courts have jurisdiction to issue decrees of specific performance. Snyder v. Sullivan, 705 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1985).

13-6-106. Original criminal jurisdiction. (1) The county court shall have concurrent original jurisdiction with the district court in the following criminal matters:

(a) Criminal actions for the violation of state laws which constitute misdemeanors or petty offenses, except those actions involving children over which the juvenile court of the city and county of Denver or the district courts of the state, other than in Denver, have exclusive jurisdiction;

(b) The issuance of warrants, the conduct of preliminary examinations, the conduct of dispositional hearings pursuant to section 16-5-301 (1), C.R.S., and section 18-1-404 (1), C.R.S., the issuance of bindover orders, and the admission to bail in felonies and misdemeanors.

(2) The provisions of subsection (1) (b) of this section shall not apply to any child under the age of eighteen years alleged to have committed a felony, except a crime of violence punishable by death or life imprisonment where the accused is sixteen years of age or older.

Law reviews. For article, "Commitment of Misdemeanants to the Colorado State Reformatory", see 29 Dicta 294 (1952).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-6-106 is similar to repealed § 37-7-1, CRS 53, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Under this section, the jurisdiction of county courts in criminal cases is limited to misdemeanors; hence a conviction of grand larceny in the county court and a sentence to the state penitentiary is void. Latham v. People, 136 Colo. 252, 317 P.2d 894 (1957).

The jurisdiction conferred by the general assembly in § 42-4-1504 for misdemeanors involving the operation of motor vehicles did not intend to impliedly repeal this section conferring original jurisdiction upon the county courts in misdemeanor cases. People v. Griffith, 130 Colo. 475, 276 P.2d 559 (1954).

Jurisdiction extends to offenses under § 42-4-1501. Jurisdiction of the county courts includes those offenses reclassified as misdemeanor traffic offenses under § 42-4-1501. Phillips v. County Court, 42 Colo. App. 187, 591 P.2d 600 (1979).

Since a person under age 18 can only be charged with an offense in the manner permitted by the Children's Code, the county court had no jurisdiction to entertain or to dispose of the merits of the proceeding involving an offense alleged against a juvenile and was without authority to go further than merely dismissing the case without prejudice for lack of jurisdiction. People in Interest of C.O., 870 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1994).

13-6-203. Qualifications of judges. (1) The county judge shall be a qualified elector of the county for which he is elected or appointed and shall reside there so long as he serves as county judge.

(2) In counties of Class A and B, no person shall be eligible for election or appointment to the office of county judge unless he has been admitted to the practice of law in Colorado.

(3) In counties of Class C and Class D, no person shall be eligible for appointment to the office of county judge unless he has graduated from high school or has attained the equivalent of a high school education as indicated by the possession of a certificate of equivalency issued by the department of education, based upon the record made on the general educational development test.

(4) Repealed.

(5) Judges-elect who have not been admitted to the practice of law shall not take office for the first time as county judge until they have attended an institute on the duties and functioning of the county court to be held under the supervision of the supreme court, unless such attendance is waived by the supreme court. Judges who are attorneys and who are taking office for the first time as county judge may attend this institute if they wish. All judges are entitled to their actual and necessary expenses while attending this institute. The supreme court shall establish the institute to which this subsection (5) refers and shall provide that it be held when the appointment of a sufficient number of nonlawyer county judges warrants, as determined by the chief justice.

13-6-204. Activities of judges. (1) In counties of Class A and B, county judges shall devote their full time to judicial duties and shall not engage in the private practice of law. They may also serve as municipal judges in counties of Class A but may not do so in counties of Class B.

(2) In counties of Class C and D, county judges, if admitted to the bar, may engage in the private practice of law in courts other than the county court and in matters which have not and will not come before the county court and may serve as municipal judges.

(3) County judges of any class county may be appointed as magistrates in juvenile matters and as magistrates for the district court in mental health matters and shall receive no additional compensation for such service. County judges may accept appointment as magistrates in any other matter, and for such service a county judge is entitled to such compensation as the appointing district judge may allow, payable from funds provided under sections 13-3-104 and 13-3-106.

13-6-205. Term and appointment of judges. The term of office of county judges shall be four years. County judge appointments shall be made pursuant to section 20 of article VI of the state constitution. This section shall not apply to the city and county of Denver, and the term of office and manner of selection of county judges therein shall be determined by the charter and ordinances thereof.

Vacancies. If the office of a county judge, except in the city and county of Denver, becomes vacant because of death, resignation, failure to be retained in office pursuant to section 25 of article VI of the state constitution, or other cause, the governor, as provided in section 20 of article VI of the state constitution, shall appoint an individual possessing the qualifications specified in section 13-6-203.

13-6-208. Special associate, associate, and assistant county judges. (1) In order to provide for the expeditious handling of county court business and for county court sessions in population centers which are not county seats, there may be created in counties designated by law the positions of special associate county judge, associate county judge, and assistant county judge.

(2) Special associate, associate, and assistant county judges, when so provided by law, except in the city and county of Denver, shall be elected or appointed at the same time, in the same manner, and for the same term, and shall possess the same qualifications, as the county judges of their respective counties. Vacancies in positions for special associate, associate, and assistant county judges shall be filled in the same manner as a vacancy in the office of county judge.

(3) The location of the official residence and court chambers for the purpose of holding court of special associate, associate, and assistant county judges shall be as prescribed by law. Travel and maintenance expenses shall be allowed special associate, associate, and assistant county judges only when they are performing official duties outside of their official places of residence.

(4) Special associate, associate, and assistant county judges when actually performing judicial duties shall have all the jurisdiction and power of a county judge, and their orders and judgments shall be those of the county court.

(5) Repealed.

(6) Special associate, associate, and assistant county judges in counties of Classes B, C, and D, if admitted to the bar, may engage in the private practice of law in courts other than the county court and in matters which have not and will not come before the county court, and may serve as municipal judges.

ANNOTATION

This statute does not purport to create a new court. Rather, it creates two new judicial positions, namely, that of associate county judge and assistant county judge. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

The only difference between an associate or assistant county judge and a county judge relates to the emoluments which go with the respective judicial offices. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

The jurisdiction and power of an associate or an assistant county judge is coequal with that of a full-fledged county judge. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

Associate and assistant judges are part-time. Though the statute is silent on the matter, the general assembly must have intended that an associate county judge would perform, volumewise at least, about one-half the amount of work customarily performed by the county judge and the assistant county judge about one-fourth. Associate and assistant county judges are "part-time" — not "full-time" — county judges, even though under the statute they have all of the jurisdiction and power of a county judge. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

Judge may sit in population centers other than the county seat. One purpose of the statute creating associate county judges is to locate judicial officers with the power and jurisdiction of a county judge in population centers which are not county seats. This is not special or local legislation of the type prohibited by our constitution, which prohibitions relate essentially to the organization, jurisdiction and practice of and in a given court, and not to the number or titles of judicial officers, who are authorized to preside in a particular court. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

13-6-209. Special associate and associate county judges - designated counties.

(1) In the county of Montrose there shall be an associate county judge who shall maintain his or her official residence in Montrose county and court chambers in that portion of Montrose county that is included in the southwestern water conservation district as set forth and described in section 37-47-103, C.R.S.

(2) In the county of Garfield there shall be a special associate county judge who shall maintain his official residence and court chambers in the city of Rifle.

(3) In the county of Rio Blanco there shall be an associate county judge who shall maintain his official residence and court chambers in the city of Rangely.

ANNOTATION

Section is constitutional. Subsection (2) of this section does not violate § 25 of art. V, or § 19 of art. VI, Colo. Const., for there is no dispute that the general assembly has the power to determine the number of judges in each district. Sanders v. District Court, 166 Colo. 455, 444 P.2d 645 (1968).

(c) In counties of Classes B, C, and D, the appointment and salary of the clerk shall be in accordance with the provisions of section 13-3-105.

(2) In such counties as may be determined by the chief justice, the functions of the office of the clerk of the county court may be performed by a consolidated office serving both the district and county courts, as provided in section 13-3-107.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-6-211 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 46, § 191, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

A county judge may elect to perform the duties of clerk of his court and when he does so elect is authorized to issue and sign all processes from his court. But when a clerk has been appointed by a county judge, so long as the appointment is not revoked, the clerk or his deputy alone has power to discharge the clerical duties of the office, and a summons issued and signed by the judge is void notwithstanding the disqualification of the clerk to act on account of absence or sickness. McNevins v. McNevins, 28 Colo. 245, 64 P. 199 (1901).

A clerk may also be probation officer. There is no statutory inhibition against one person holding the offices of clerk of the county court and probation officer. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Wharton, 82 Colo. 466, 261 P. 4 (1927).

13-6-212. Duties of clerk. (1) The powers and duties of the clerk of the county court shall be similar to the powers and duties of the clerk of the district court exclusive of the powers of the district court clerk in probate and shall include such duties as may be assigned to him by law, by court rules, and by the county judge.

(2) Upon approval by the chief justice of the supreme court, the chief judge of a judicial district may authorize, either generally or in specific cases, the clerk of the county court to do the following:

(a) Issue bench warrants, misdemeanor or felony warrants, and writs of restitution upon written or oral order of a judge;

(b) Advise defendants in criminal cases of their procedural and constitutional rights;

(c) Accept pleas of not guilty in all criminal cases and set dates for hearings or trials in such cases;

(d) Subject to the requirements of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, enter default and default judgments and issue process for the enforcement of said judgments;

(e) Under the direction of a judge, grant continuances, set motions for hearing, and set cases for trial; and

(f) With the consent of the defendant, accept pleas of guilty and admissions of liability and impose penalties pursuant to a schedule approved by the presiding judge in misdemeanor cases involving violations of wildlife and parks and outdoor recreation laws for which the maximum penalty in each case is a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, and in misdemeanor traffic and traffic infraction cases involving the regulation of vehicles and traffic for which the penalty specified in section 42-4-1701, C.R.S., or elsewhere in articles 2 to 4 of title 42, C.R.S., in each case is less than three hundred dollars. A clerk shall not levy a fine of over said amounts nor sentence any person to jail. If, in the judgment of the clerk, a fine of over said amounts or a jail sentence is justified, the case shall be certified to the judge of the county court for rearraignment and trial de novo.

13-6-214. Other employees. (1) In counties of Class A, such deputy clerks, assistants, reporters, stenographers, and bailiffs as shall be necessary for the transaction of the business of the county court may be appointed and their compensation fixed in the manner provided in the charter and ordinances thereof.

(2) In counties of Classes B, C, and D, there shall be appointed such deputy clerks, assistants, reporters, stenographers, and bailiffs as are necessary, in accordance with the provisions of section 13-3-105.

13-6-216. Judges to sit separately. In each county court which has more than one county judge, each judge shall sit separately for the trial of cases and the transaction of judicial business, and each court so held shall be known as the county court of the county wherein held. Each judge shall have all of the powers which he might have if he were the sole judge of the court, including the power to vacate his own judgments, decrees, or orders, or those of a predecessor when permitted by law, but not county court orders of another judge of the same county court who is still in office.

13-6-217. Judges may sit en banc. In each county court which has more than one judge, the court may sit en banc for the purpose of making rules of court, the appointment of a clerk and other employees, pursuant to section 13-3-105, and the conduct of other business relating to the administration of the court, as authorized by and subject to the approval of the chief justice of the supreme court.

13-6-218. Assignment of county judges and retired county judges to other courts authorized. Any county judge or retired county judge who has been licensed to practice law in this state for five years may be assigned by the chief justice of the supreme court, pursuant to section 5 (3) of article VI of the state constitution, to perform judicial duties in any district court, the probate court of the city and county of Denver, or the juvenile court of the city and county of Denver.

ANNOTATION

Chief justice of supreme court can properly delegate appointment powers to another judicial officer, and appointments by chief district judges are not limited to specific cases. There is no statutory basis for requiring the chief justice of the supreme court to personally make each temporary appointment. Furthermore, reading the statute to preclude delegation would bring it into conflict with art. VI, § 5(4), the constitutional provision expressly allowing the chief justice to delegate administrative powers. People v. McCulloch, 198 P.3d 1264 (Colo. App. 2008).

13-6-219. Judge as party to a case - recusal of judge upon motion. (1) If a judge or former judge of a county court is a party in his or her individual and private capacity in a case that is to be tried within any county court in the same judicial district in which the judge or former judge is or was a judge of a county court, any party to the case may file a timely motion requesting that the judge who is appointed to preside over the case recuse himself or herself from the case.

(2) If a county court receives a motion filed by a party pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the judge who is appointed to preside over the case shall recuse himself or herself if he or she is a judge of a county court in the same judicial district in which the judge or former judge who is a party to the case in his or her individual and private capacity is or was a judge of a county court.

(3) If a judge recuses himself or herself pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court or his or her designee shall appoint a judge from outside the judicial district to preside over the case.

GENERAL PROCEDURAL PROVISIONS

13-6-301. Court rules. Each county court possesses the power to make rules for the conduct of its business to the extent that such rules are not in conflict with the rules of the supreme court or the laws of the state, but are supplementary thereto. In each county court which has more than one judge, or has an associate judge sitting regularly, the court shall make such rules as it deems necessary for the classification, arrangement, and distribution of the business of the court among the several judges thereof. All county court rules are subject to review by the supreme court.

13-6-302. Terms of court. Terms of the county court shall be fixed by rule of the court in each county; except that at least one term shall be held in each county in each year.

13-6-303. Place of holding court. In each county, the county court shall sit at the county seat, and the county court by rule or order also may provide for hearing and trials to be held in locations other than the county seat. In particular, if the corporate limits of a municipality extend into two counties, the county court of either county, for the hearing of matters for which venue is properly laid before them or the requirements thereof are waived, may sit at any place within such municipality without regard to the location of the county line. Where the county court sits regularly at locations other than the county seat, proper venue within the county shall be fixed by court rule.

13-6-304. Court facilities. The county commissioners shall provide court facilities at the county seat and are authorized to do so elsewhere. Such facilities may be provided by arrangement with municipal authorities, by rental, or by other appropriate means.

ANNOTATION

A county's duties under this section may not be reduced or ended pursuant to art. X, § 20(9) of the state constitution. State v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, Mesa County, 897 P.2d 788 (Colo. 1995).

13-6-305. Maintenance of records. (1) Permanent records of the county court shall be maintained at the office of the clerk of the court at the county seat.

(2) (a) If the county court sits regularly at a location other than the county seat, and the court so provides by rule, cases may be docketed at such locations, and thereafter all pleadings, writs, judgments, and other documents in the case shall be filed at such other location.

(b) Repealed.

(c) In criminal cases, a single copy of items filed is sufficient. A notice of docketing of criminal cases with sufficient information to identify the defendant and the offense charged shall be forwarded forthwith to the clerk of the court at the county seat. After termination of the case, all records on file and a transcript of the judgment shall be forwarded to the county seat.

13-6-306. Seal. The county court of each county shall have an appropriate seal.

13-6-307. Process. (1) Each county court shall have the power to issue process necessary to acquire jurisdiction, to require attendance, and to enforce all orders, decrees, and judgments. Such process runs to any county within the state and, when authorized by the Colorado rules of civil procedure, may be served outside the state. Any sheriff to whom process is directed is authorized and required to execute the same, and he is entitled to the same fees as are allowed for serving like process from the district courts. Persons other than the sheriff or his deputies may also serve process from the county court when permitted by the Colorado rules of civil procedure or by law.

(2) Upon request of the court, the prosecuting county, or the defendant, the clerk of the county court shall issue a subpoena for the appearance, at any and all stages of the court's proceedings, of the parent, guardian, or lawful custodian of any child under eighteen years of age who is charged with the violation of a county ordinance. Whenever a person who is issued a subpoena pursuant to this subsection (2) fails, without good cause, to appear, the court may issue an order for the person to show cause to the court as to why the person should not be held in contempt. Following a show cause hearing, the court may make findings of fact and conclusions of law and may enter an appropriate order, which may include finding the person in contempt.

13-6-308. Juries. (1) When required, juries shall be selected and summoned as provided for courts of record in articles 71 to 74 of this title, with such exceptions as are provided in this section. With the consent of the district court and the jury commissioners, the county court may, if feasible, use the same panel of jurors summoned for the district court. Jurors selected and summoned for the county court may also be used in municipal court in counties of Class A, as defined in section 13-6-201.

(2) If a county court sits regularly in a location other than the county seat and if jury trials are held at that location as well as at the county seat, the jury commissioner may establish jury districts within the county for the selection of county court jurors. The county shall be divided into as many such districts as there are locations in which the county court regularly holds jury trials, and each district shall include one such location as well as appropriate contiguous territory. In counties so divided, the jury commissioner shall select separate lists of persons from each jury district to serve as county court jurors within their respective districts. Such lists shall contain not less than one hundred names. When jurors are to be summoned for county court service within such districts, names shall be drawn from the list by the jury commissioner. In all other respects, the provisions of articles 71 to 74 of this title shall be followed in selecting, drawing, and summoning jurors in counties divided into county court jury districts.

13-6-309. Verbatim record of proceedings. A verbatim record of the proceedings and evidence at trials in the county court shall be maintained by electronic devices or by stenographic means, as the judge of the court may direct, except when such record may be unnecessary in certain proceedings pursuant to specific provisions of law.

Judge's discretion to employ court reporters instead of electronic recording devices is subject to availability of funds in judicial department's consolidated operating budget and approval of chief justice acting as executive head of judicial system. Yeager v. Quinn, 767 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1988).

13-6-310. Appeals from county court. (1) Appeals from final judgments and decrees of the county courts shall be taken to the district court for the judicial district in which the county court entering such judgment is located. Appeals shall be based upon the record made in the county court.

(2) The district court shall review the case on the record on appeal and affirm, reverse, remand, or modify the judgment; except that the district court, in its discretion, may remand the case for a new trial with such instructions as it may deem necessary, or it may direct that the case be tried de novo before the district court.

(3) Repealed.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Statutory Right of Appeal.
- III. Action of the District Court.
- IV. Appeals to Supreme Court.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Law", see 32 Dicta 409 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Contracts", see 39 Dicta 161 (1962). For article, "One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-6-310 is similar to repealed § 37-15-101, C.R.S. 1963, § 37-6-101, CRS 53, CSA, C. 46, § 165, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this section.

Although § 13-4-110 (3) provides that cases filed in wrong appellate court shall not be dismissed, where appeal will not lie in either court, the only review being by certiorari, the case must be dismissed for failure to comply with the statutory procedure. People v. Meyers, 43 Colo. App. 63, 598 P.2d 526 (1979).

Applied in Chavez v. People, 193 Colo. 50, 561 P.2d 1270 (1977); People v. Gonzales, 198 Colo. 546, 603 P.2d 139 (1979); People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980); Garcia v. People, 200 Colo. 413, 615 P.2d 698 (1980); People v. Luna, 648 P.2d 624 (Colo. 1982).

II. STATUTORY RIGHT OF APPEAL.

This section gives a statutory right of appeal. There is no constitutional right to an appeal from the county court to the district court; such right exists only when the general assembly has expressly or by clear implication declared in its favor. Callahan v. Jennings, 16 Colo. 471, 27 P. 1055 (1891); Shapter v. Arapahoe County Court, 13 Colo. App. 484, 59 P. 59 (1892); Andrews v. Lull, 139 Colo. 536, 341 P.2d 475 (1959).

This section provides that appeals from county courts shall be taken to the district courts. This is a statute general in nature. Russell v. Wheeler, 159 Colo. 588, 413 P.2d 700 (1966).

Appeals of final judgments. This statute provides that appeals from final judgments and decrees of the county court "shall be" taken to the district court. People ex rel. City of Aurora v. Smith, 162 Colo. 72, 424 P.2d 772 (1967).

An order vacating a previous order setting aside a judgment is not a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Hayhurst v. Hayhurst, 91 Colo. 58, 11 P.2d 804 (1932).

This section applies only to ordinary civil actions. Andrews v. Lull, 139 Colo. 536, 341 P.2d 475 (1959).

Therefore, no appellate jurisdiction exists in district court in special statutory proceedings. The appellate jurisdiction of district courts from final judgments of county courts applies only to judgments rendered in ordinary civil actions. No such jurisdiction exists in special statutory proceedings. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Poundstone, 74 Colo. 191, 220 P. 234 (1923); Selk v. Ramsey, 110 Colo. 223, 132 P.2d 454 (1942); Andrews v. Lull, 139 Colo. 536, 341 P.2d 475 (1959); Council of City of Englewood v. Nat'l Tea Co., 147 Colo. 96, 362 P.2d 1048 (1961).

The section does not except from its operation those cases which are commenced in the municipal court and thereafter appealed to the county court. Appeal from all final judgments of the county court is now to be made to the district court. People ex rel. City of Aurora v. Smith, 162 Colo. 72, 424 P.2d 772 (1967); People v. Anderson, 177 Colo. 84, 492 P.2d 844 (1972).

Allowance of appeal from judgment by default. An appeal is allowable from the county court to the district court from a judgment by default on two conditions: First, that the party aggrieved make application to have the judgment by default set aside within 10 days after its rendition; and, second, that the appeal be taken within 10 days, or the time allowed by the court, after the refusal of the court to set aside the default. Johnson v. Lawson, 9 Colo. App. 128, 50 P. 1087 (1897); County Court v. Eagle Rock Gold Mining & Reduction Co., 50 Colo. 365, 115 P. 706 (1911).

Appeal from part of judgment permissible. Where a personal judgment was rendered in the county court against the lessees of a mining claim which was declared to be a lien against the mine, the owners of the mine could appeal to the district court from that part of the judgment declaring the lien without appealing from the entire judgment and without making the defendants, against whom personal judgment was rendered, parties to the appeal. Davidson v. Jennings, 27 Colo. 187, 60 P. 354 (1900).

Objection to jurisdiction of district court on appeal may be waived. Plaintiff was nonsuited in the county court, and, without making a motion to set aside the nonsuit according to this section, he appealed to the district court. The defendant's motion to dismiss the appeal being there denied, he appeared as though there were no irregularities in the proceedings, and, without taking an exception to the ruling, renewing his objection or standing upon his motion, introduced witnesses, etc. It was held that he waived objection to the jurisdiction of the district court. Norton v. Young, 6 Colo. App. 187, 40 P. 156 (1895).

III. ACTION OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

Under the statute, the district court, upon appeal of the case to it, has three threshold alternatives: (1) It may review the case on the record; (2) it may remand the case for a new trial with instructions to the court from which appealed, or (3) it may direct that the case be tried de novo before it. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

The general assembly, having provided for both review on the record and for trial de novo, recognized the historical differences between the two both procedurally and in substance, so it is incumbent on the courts to make the same differentiation in carrying out their functions under the statute. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

A trial de novo conducted by the district court is not a review of the county court judgment; it is an entirely new proceeding. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

A trial de novo in a court of general jurisdiction, in the absence of statutory language restricting its scope, means a trial in the commonly accepted sense of that term in such court. Any court conducting such a trial may make its own findings and judgment. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

The district court would have the power to make new and independent findings of fact if it were acting as a trial court. The statute provides a procedure whereby the district court can act as a trial court rather than as a court of review, if it directs the case be tried de novo before it. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

Only in cases tried de novo by the district court will the district court judgment be subject to direct appeal. Justifiably, then, the defendant may seek direct appeal when the district court enters its judgment from a de novo trial. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

The final judgment of the district court, following a trial de novo, thus, is subject to review by the court of appeals under both

§ 13-4-102 and this section. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

Where the district court does not direct that the case be tried de novo before the district court, as it might do pursuant to subsection (2), the appeal is limited to review of the record on appeal and a consideration of the accompanying briefs and arguments. People v. Brown, 174 Colo. 513, 485 P.2d 500 (1971).

It is bound by the findings of the trial court. The district court is reviewing the record on appeal from the county court and is bound by the findings of the trial court which have been determined on disputed evidence. People v. Brown, 174 Colo. 513, 485 P.2d 500 (1971).

The function of the reviewing court is to correct any errors of law committed by the trial court and not to try, nor retry, issues of fact. The lack of sufficient competent evidence to support a finding of a material fact, however, would be a matter of law and fall within the court's powers on review. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

It cannot act as a fact finder. Where the district court is exercising its powers of review rather than conducting a trial de novo, it cannot act as a fact finder. People v. Williams, 172 Colo. 434, 473 P.2d 982 (1970).

Proper appeal from district court action is by writ of certiorari to the supreme court, and not by appeal to the court of appeals. Gallagher v. Ingram, 32 P.3d 50 (Colo. App. 2001).

IV. APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT.

Certiorari review does not suffice as an appellate review from a final judgment of the district court. Bovard v. People, 99 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2004).

Subsequent appeal to the supreme court only on certiorari. Appeal to the supreme court from a determination of the district court in a matter appealed to such court from the county court may be made only on a writ of certiorari issued in the discretion of the supreme court. People ex rel. City of Aurora v. Smith, 162 Colo. 72, 424 P.2d 772 (1967); People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Superior Court, 175 Colo. 391, 488 P.2d 66 (1971).

It must be distinguished from constitutional certiorari. The writ of certiorari mentioned in § 3 of art. VI, Colo. Const., is to be distinguished from, and not to be confused with, the statutory writ of certiorari provided for in this section. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. Court of Appeals, 171 Colo. 448, 468 P.2d 37 (1970).

"Further appeal" not limited to review of affirmances. The legislative authorization for "further appeal" is not limited to cases where the superior court's determination would otherwise end the matter, as in an affirmance of the trial court's judgment. People v. Dee, 638 P.2d 749 (Colo. 1981).

Review of superior court's reversal permitted. The state supreme court may review by certiorari a superior court's reversal of a county court judgment. People v. Dee, 638 P.2d 749 (Colo. 1981) (decided prior to abolition of superior courts in 1986).

For the supreme court granting certiorari, see Eyrich v. People, 161 Colo. 554, 423 P.2d 582 (1967).

Applied in Lucero v. Goldberger, 804 P.2d 206 (Colo. App. 1990); Byrd v. People, 58 P.3d 50 (Colo. 2002).

13-6-311. Appeals from county court - simplified procedure. (1) (a) If either party in a civil action believes that the judgment of the county court is in error, he or she may appeal to the district court by filing notice of appeal in the county court within twenty-one days after the date of entry of judgment and by filing within the said twenty-one days an appeal bond with the clerk of the county court. The bond shall be furnished by a corporate surety authorized and licensed to do business in this state as surety, or one or more sufficient private sureties, or may be a cash deposit by the appellant and, if the appeal is taken by the plaintiff, shall be conditioned to pay the costs of the appeal and the counterclaim, if any, and, if the appeal is taken by the defendant, shall be conditioned to pay the costs and judgment if the appealing party fails. The bond shall be approved by the judge or the clerk.

(b) Upon filing of the notice of appeal, the posting and approval of the bond, and the deposit by the appellant of an estimated fee in advance for preparing the record, the county court shall discontinue all further proceedings and recall any execution issued. The appellant shall then docket his or her appeal in the district court. A motion for new trial is not required as a condition of appeal. If a motion for new trial is made within twenty-one days, the time for appeal shall be extended until twenty-one days after disposition of the motion, but only matters raised on the motion for new trial shall be considered on an appeal thereafter.

(2) (a) Upon the deposit of the estimated record fee, the clerk of the court shall prepare and issue as soon as possible a record of the proceedings in the county court, including the summons, the complaint, proof of service, and the judgment. The record shall also include a transcription of such part of the actual evidence and other proceedings as the parties may designate or, in lieu of transcription, to which they may stipulate. If a stenographic record has been maintained or the parties agree to stipulate, the party appealing shall lodge with the clerk of the court the reporter's transcript of the designated evidence or proceedings or a stipulation covering such items within forty-two days after judgment. If the proceedings have been electrically recorded, the transcription of designated evidence and proceedings shall be prepared in the office of the clerk of the county court, either by him or her or under his or her supervision, within forty-two days after judgment.

(b) The clerk shall notify, in writing, the opposing parties of the completion of the record, and the parties have twenty-one days within which to file objections. If none are received, the record shall be certified forthwith by the judge. If objections are made, the parties shall be called for hearing and the objections settled by the county judge as soon as possible and the record then certified.

(3) When the record has been duly certified and any additional fees therefor paid, it shall be filed with the clerk of the district court by the clerk of the county court, and the opposing parties shall be notified of such filing by the clerk of the county court.

(4) A written brief setting out matters relied upon as constituting error and outlining any arguments to be made shall be filed in the district court by the appellant within twenty-one days after filing of the record therein. A copy of the brief shall be served on the appellee. The appellee may file an answering brief within twenty-one days after such service. In the discretion of the district court, time for filing of briefs and answers may be extended.

(5) Unless there is further review by the supreme court upon writ of certiorari and pursuant to the rules of that court, after final disposition of the appeal by the district court, the judgment on appeal therein shall be certified to the county court for action as directed by the district court, except upon trials de novo held in the district court or in cases in which the judgment is modified, in which cases the judgment shall be that of the district court and enforced therefrom.

(6) Repealed.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Appeal Bond.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For comment on Miller v. Miller, appearing below, see 31 Dicta 160 (1954).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-6-311 is similar to repealed § 37-6-11, CRS 53, CSA, C. 46, §§ 167, 168, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is mandatory; and, although appellant, after the expiration of the prescribed time, docket his appeal by paying his docket fee, the transcript should be remitted to the lower court on appellee's motion, so that the latter might proceed as though no appeal had been taken. Tierney v. Campbell, 7 Colo. App. 299, 44 P. 948 (1896); Thomas v. Beattie, 42 Colo. 235, 93 P. 1093 (1908).

Good faith and reasonable promptness are sufficient. On appeal from county to district court, when appellant has acted in good faith, with reasonable promptness, and no one has suffered, this section ought not to be so strictly construed as to deny the right of appeal. Markey v. People, 73 Colo. 466, 216 P. 526 (1923).

This section requires that after taking an appeal there shall be filed in the district court the record, including original process, pleadings, and other papers relating to the suit, and filed in the county court. Miller v. Miller, 129 Colo. 462, 271 P.2d 411 (1954).

If appeal is not filed in time, district court lacks jurisdiction. Where a party does not lodge her appeal in a district court within the time required by this section, the court acquires no jurisdiction in the matter and has no authority to proceed in any manner in that action. McKelvey v. District Court, 140 Colo. 557, 345 P.2d 726 (1959).

A motion to dismiss will be sustained after that time. Where an appeal from the county to the district court was not made within 10 days after the judgment, and no order extending the time in which to perfect an appeal was obtained, a motion to dismiss it should be sustained. Grove v. Foutch, 6 Colo. App. 357, 40 P. 852 (1895); Slattery v. Robinson, 7 Colo. App. 22, 42 P. 179 (1895).

This section provides for the filing of the original process, pleadings, and other papers with the clerk of a district court and for the docketing of the action in that court in appeals. Andrews v. Lull, 139 Colo. 536, 341 P.2d 475 (1959).

A motion for new trial filed in apt time suspends a judgment so that it becomes final only when the motion is overruled. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 74 Colo. 295, 220 P. 998 (1923); Charles v. Sprott, 75 Colo. 90, 224 P. 222 (1924), citing Bates v. Woodward, 66 Colo. 555, 185 P. 351 (1919).

Time for docketing. Subsection (1)(b) and rule 411(a)(1) of the county court rules clearly provide that the docketing must take place no later than the time allowed for completing and lodging the record. Tumbarello v. Superior Court, 195 Colo. 83, 575 P.2d 431 (1978).

Section applies only to civil actions. Where an information filed against defendant charges him with misdemeanors, the action is not a civil suit; hence is not governed by this section. Naranjo v. People, 130 Colo. 236, 274 P.2d 607 (1954).

Appeal to superior court. The district court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the appeal process between the county and superior courts. Petry v. County Court, 666 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1983) (decided prior to abolition of superior courts in 1986).

Fact that district court may enforce its order in the event that there is no appeal does not impact the appellate process: Proper appeal from district court action is by writ of certiorari to the supreme court. Gallagher v. Ingram, 32 P.3d 50 (Colo. App. 2001).

II. APPEAL BOND.

The essential step in the perfection of an appeal is the filing of a bond; even though the party had given a notice of appeal, or had in some other manner manifested intent to appeal, the judicial requirement of a bond filed within 10 days would still remain. Wellmuth v. Rogers, 25 Colo. App. 386, 138 P. 69 (1914); Swingle v. Estate of Pollo, 145 Colo. 591, 360 P.2d 808 (1961).

The filing of bond is a condition precedent to appeal. The filing of the bond required by this section, in the county court, "and its approval by the judge or clerk of said court", is a condition precedent to the appeal, and unless such steps are taken the district court is without jurisdiction. Fuller v. Fuller's Estate, 7 Colo. App. 555, 44 P. 72 (1896).

An appeal is not made until the bond is approved. This clause requires appeals to the district court to be "made" within 10 days after judgment is rendered. An appeal is not "made" until the appeal bond is approved. Zimmerman v. Combs, 91 Colo. 313, 14 P.2d 693 (1932).

Giving appeal bond is not equivalent to a general appearance in the district court. This section clearly contemplates that in an appeal from the county to the district court, the appellant, if he has not entered his appearance in the county court, may be heard upon his appeal to object to the form of the summons, or the manner of serving the same, if he made that objection in the county court. Necessarily, therefore, giving of the appeal bond is not equivalent to a general appearance in the district court. White House Mt. Gold Mining Co. v. Powell, 30 Colo. 397, 70 P. 679 (1902).

Section does not prescribe any particular manner or form in which the appeal bond on appeal from a county court to a district court must be approved. Stephens v. Wheeler, 60 Colo. 351, 153 P. 444 (1915); Zimmerman v. Combs, 91 Colo. 313, 14 P.2d 693 (1932), citing Adams v. Decker, 50 Colo. 326, 114 P. 654 (1911).

A county court party found to be indigent and allowed to proceed in forma pauperis is not required to post a judgment bond before appealing to district court. O'Donnell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 186 P.3d 46 (Colo. 2008).

However, as with appeals from the district court to the court of appeals, the prevailing party in the county court would be able to execute the judgment while the appeal is still pending because the judgment would not have been stayed by a judgment bond. O'Donnell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 186 P.3d 46 (Colo. 2008).

Judgment against sureties on appeal bond.

On an appeal from the county to the district court from a judgment against the appellant where judgment in the district court is in favor of appellee, the court in entering up an absolute and unconditional judgment against the sureties on the appeal bond does simply what it is required to do by this section. By serving a scire facias upon the sureties they are given an opportunity to show cause why the judgment should not be enforced against them. Gutheil Suburban Inv. Co. v. Fahey, 12 Colo. App. 487, 55 P. 946 (1899).

Bond not containing proper statutory conditions. Where on appeal from the county court to the district court the appeal bond was conditioned to pay all costs and damages adjudged to the appellee on appeal and to satisfy the judgment appealed from instead of the statutory condition to pay any judgment the district court should render, and the district court rendered a judgment against appellant in a greater amount than that of the county court, the measure of the liability of the sureties on the appeal bond was the original judgment of the county court with interest and costs. Barela v. Tootle, 29 Colo. 52, 66 P. 899 (1901).

This section is not to be regarded as providing another mode of commencing civil actions; it does not provide for introducing a new cause of action into the suit in which the undertaking is given; but the true construction of the section is that by executing the undertaking the sureties are deemed to consent that they shall, under the contingencies specified in the undertaking, be considered parties to the original suit, and liable to judgment for the original cause of action against their principal. Shannon v. Dodge, 18 Colo. 164, 32 P. 61 (1893).

For the sufficiency of the bond, see Swingle v. Estate of Pollo, 145 Colo. 591, 360 P.2d 808 (1961).

COUNTY COURT - SMALL CLAIMS DIVISION

Law reviews: For article, "Changes to the Statutes and Rules Governing Procedures in Colorado Small Claims Courts", see 31 Colo. Law. 29 (February 2002).

13-6-401. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that individuals, partnerships, corporations, and associations frequently do not pursue meritorious small civil claims because of the disproportion between the expense and time of counsel and litigation and the amount of money or property involved; that the law and procedures of civil litigation are technical and frequently unknown to persons who are representing themselves; that procedures for the inexpensive, speedy, and informal resolution of small claims in a forum where the rules of substantive law apply, but the rules of procedure and pleading and the technical rules of evidence do not apply, are desirable; that such procedures should be conducted at times convenient to the persons using them, including evening and Saturday sessions; that the personnel implementing and conducting such procedures should be trained and equipped to assist anyone with a small claim in a friendly, efficient, and courteous manner; and that, therefore, the establishment of a small claims division of the county court as provided in this part 4 is in the public interest.

of the action may commence an action therein, except as a court-appointed personal representative, conservator, or guardian of the real party in interest.

(2) (a) (I) Notwithstanding the provisions of article 5 of title 12, C.R.S., in the small claims court, an individual shall represent himself or herself; a partnership shall be represented by an active general partner or an authorized full-time employee; a union shall be represented by an authorized active union member or full-time employee; a for-profit corporation shall be represented by one of its full-time officers or full-time employees; an association shall be represented by one of its active members or by a full-time employee of the association; and any other kind of organization or entity shall be represented by one of its active members or full-time employees or, in the case of a nonprofit corporation, a duly elected nonattorney officer or an employee.

13-6-408. Counterclaims exceeding jurisdiction of small claims court - procedures - sanctions for improper assertion. Counterclaims exceeding the jurisdiction of the small claims court shall be removed to the county or district court of appropriate jurisdiction pursuant to rule of the supreme court. If a county or district court determines that a plaintiff who originally filed a claim in the small claims court is entitled to judgment and also that a counterclaim against the same plaintiff in the small claims action was filed solely to defeat the jurisdiction of the small claims court and was without merit, the county or district court may also award the plaintiff costs, including reasonable attorney fees, incurred in prosecuting the action in the county or district court.

13-6-411. Limitation on number of claims filed. (1) No plaintiff may file more than two claims per month, eighteen claims per year, in the small claims court of any county. Each claim filed in any small claims court shall contain a certification by the plaintiff that the plaintiff has not filed any more than two claims during that month and eighteen claims in that year in the small claims court of that county.

(2) The limitation imposed by subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to a state-supported institution of higher education which files claims to recover loans or other outstanding obligations due to such institution; except that no such state-supported institution of higher education shall file more than a total of thirty such claims per month in all small claims courts in Colorado.

13-6-411.5. Place of trial. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, all actions in the small claims court shall be brought in the county in which any defendant at the time of filing of the claim resides, is regularly employed, is a student at an institution of higher education, or has an office for the transaction of business.

(2) Actions to enforce restrictive covenants and actions arising under part 1 of article 12 of title 38, C.R.S., including, but not limited to, actions involving claims for the recovery of a security deposit or for damage to property arising from a landlord-tenant relationship, may be brought in the county in which the defendant's property that is the subject of the action is situated.

(3) If a defendant appears and defends a small claims action on the merits at trial, such defendant shall be deemed to have waived any objection to the place of trial permitted under this section.

(4) Subject to the provision that no magistrate may preside in any trial by jury, county court magistrates shall have power to hear the following matters:

(a) Class 2 misdemeanor traffic offenses and class A and class B traffic infractions, as defined in section 42-4-1701, C.R.S.;

(6) Magistrates, when handling county court matters and class A and class B traffic infraction matters and where the parties to such proceedings, other than traffic infraction matters, shall have waived their right to proceed before a county judge, shall have all the jurisdiction and power of a county judge, and their orders and judgments shall be those of the county court.

13-9-101. Establishment. Pursuant to the provisions of section 1 of article VI of the Colorado constitution, there is hereby established the probate court of the city and county of Denver.

13-9-102. Court of record - powers. The probate court shall be a court of record with such powers as are inherent in constitutionally created courts and with such legal and equitable powers to effectuate its jurisdiction and carry out its orders, judgments, and decrees as are possessed by the district courts.

13-9-103. Jurisdiction. (1) The probate court of the city and county of Denver has original and exclusive jurisdiction in said city and county of:

(a) The administration, settlement, and distribution of estates of decedents, wards, and absentees;

(b) Property vested in any person under a legal disability but paid to or held by another for such person's use or benefit as authorized by court order or as authorized by a power contained in a will or trust instrument;

(c) Property vested in any minor pursuant to the “Colorado Uniform Transfers to Minors Act”, or any predecessor act thereto, or any act having a substantially similar legal effect;

(d) The probate of wills;

(e) The granting of letters testamentary, of administration, of guardianship, and of conservatorship;

(f) The administration of guardianships of minors and of mentally competent persons and of conservatorships of persons with mental illness or mentally deficient persons and of absentees;

(g) Proceedings under article 23 of title 17 and articles 10 to 15 of title 27, C.R.S.;

(h) The determination of heirship in probate proceedings and the devolution of title to property in probate proceedings;

(i) Actions on the official bonds of fiduciaries appointed by it;

(j) The construction of wills;

(k) The administration of testamentary trusts, except as provided in subsection (2) of this section; and

(l) All other probate matters.

(2) If a testamentary trust is established by the will of the decedent and if it appears that it was not the intention of the testator that the court should continue the administration of the estate after the payment in full of all debts and legacies except the trust property, the court shall proceed to final settlement of such estate as in other cases, order the trust fund or property to be turned over to the trustee as such, and shall not require the filing of inventories and accounts, or supervise the administration of the trust; except that any party in interest of such trust, including the trustee thereof, may invoke the jurisdiction of the probate court with respect to any matters pertaining to the administration or distribution of such trust or to construe the will under which it was established.

(3) The court has jurisdiction to determine every legal and equitable question arising in connection with decedents', wards', and absentees' estates, so far as the question concerns any person who is before the court by reason of any asserted right in any of the property of the estate or by reason of any asserted obligation to the estate, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the jurisdiction:

(a) To give full and complete legal and equitable relief in any case in which it is alleged that the decedent breached an agreement to make or not to make a will;

(b) In any case in which a district court could grant such relief in a separate action brought therein, to impose or raise a trust with respect to any of the property of the decedent or any property in the name of the decedent, individually or in any other capacity, in any case in which the demand for such relief arises in connection with the administration of the estate of a decedent;

(c) To partition any of the real or personal property of any estate in connection with the settlement thereof.

(4) Nothing in this article shall prevent any district court sitting in law or equity from construing a will which is not before the probate court or from determining questions arising in connection with trusts which are not under the jurisdiction of the probate court.

(5) The court has jurisdiction to determine every legal and equitable question arising out of or in connection with express trusts.

(6) The provisions of articles 10 to 20 of title 15, article 23 of title 17, and articles 10 to 15 of title 27, C.R.S., shall govern the issuance and service and proof of service of any process, notice, citation, writ, or order of court and shall govern all other proceedings had pursuant to the powers of the court recited in subsections (1) and (2) of this section. The Colorado rules of civil procedure shall govern such matters when the proceedings are had pursuant to the powers granted to the court under any of the other provisions of this section.

(7) With respect to any trust established by or for an individual with his or her assets, income, or property of any kind, notwithstanding any statutory provision to the contrary, the court shall not authorize, direct, or ratify any trust that either has the effect of qualifying or purports to qualify the trust beneficiary for federal supplemental security income, or public or medical assistance pursuant to title 26, C.R.S., unless the trust meets the criteria set forth in sections 15-14-412.6 to 15-14-412.9, C.R.S., and any rule adopted by the medical services board pursuant to section 25.5-6-103, C.R.S.

Law. 787 (1986). For article, “Probate Jurisdiction for Creditors’ Claims”, see 29 Colo. Law. 57 (May 2000).

Specific enumeration of court’s subject-matter jurisdiction is applicable to all district courts sitting in probate matters since all probate courts may exercise subject-matter jurisdiction vested by this title. Lembach v. Lembach, 622 P.2d 606 (Colo. App. 1980).

In determining proper jurisdiction as between district court and probate court, the court must look at the facts alleged, the claims asserted, and the relief requested. Here, where the complaints were premised upon defendant’s alleged legal malpractice in the drafting of the estate instruments, the estate planning, and the implementation of the estate plan, the complaints were not considered probate claims, and, therefore, jurisdiction lay with the district court not the probate court. Levine v. Katz, 192 P.3d 1008 (Colo. App. 2006).

Probate court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over claims of legal malpractice where plaintiff does not seek to recover assets of the estate. Levine v. Katz, 167 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2006).

The phrase “in connection with” in subsection (3)(a) is a grant of authority to resolve disputes logically relating to an estate. This grant of jurisdiction presupposes, by necessary implication, the possibility that a person may have a valid claim to property claimed by an estate, and therefore contemplates that such property, while claimed by the estate, does not belong to the estate. In re Estate of Murphy, 195 P.3d 1147 (Colo. App. 2008).

In evaluating the child’s best interests, the probate court did not exceed its jurisdiction by directing the GAL to find a permanent guardian or by considering the potential for a future adoption. Nothing in this section deprives the district court of the authority to appoint a guardian for a child. In re J.C.T., 176 P.3d 726 (Colo. 2007).

When extrinsic fraud is shown to exist, a judgment may be collaterally attacked, for such fraud renders the judgment not merely irregular, but void. As such, the judgment has neither life nor incipience and as a nullity it may be attacked directly or collaterally at any time. In re Estate of Bonfils, 190 Colo. 70, 543 P.2d 701 (1975).

Intrinsic frauds, however, cannot give rise to collateral attack, though they may create voidable judgments, be the basis of a successful direct appeal, or be the subject of a motion for relief from judgment. In re Estate of Bonfils, 190 Colo. 70, 543 P.2d 701 (1975).

Probate court had jurisdiction to order cancellation of bonds and release of security held by trustee pursuant to municipal revenue bond trust indenture. Petition of First Interstate Bank, 767 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1988).

The probate court has the authority, in the appropriate circumstances, to instruct trustee to act or not act to carry out the court’s goal in the administration of such trust without relying on C.R.C.P. 65. When a trustee’s administration of a trust is challenged, the probate court has the authority to issue an injunction against the trustee without establishing grounds for a preliminary injunction to prevent further depletion of the trust while proper distribution of the trust is determined. In re Estate of Scott, 77 P.3d 906 (Colo. App. 2003).

13-9-104. Number of judges. There shall be one judge of the probate court of the city and county of Denver.

The duties of the clerk of the probate court shall also include such matters as may be assigned to him by law, by court rules, and by the probate judge.

ANNOTATION

No authority to set aside divorce decree. Constitutional and statutory provisions vest in the probate court the authority to decide, inter alia, matters relating to the probate of wills. They do not, however, confer authority upon the probate court to disregard the rules relating to collateral attacks on judgments and to set aside a divorce decree of a district court which has jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter. In re Estate of Bonfils, 190 Colo. 70, 543 P.2d 701 (1975).

Such process runs to any county within the state and, when authorized by law in special proceedings or, in the absence thereof, by the Colorado rules of civil procedure, may be served outside the state. Any sheriff to whom process is directed is authorized and required to execute the same and shall be entitled to the same fees as are allowed by law for serving like process from the district court. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1688, § 16, effective January 1, 1997.

ANNOTATION

Right to trial by jury even if city charter denies it. In cases involving petty offenses, there is a right to a jury trial, even in a municipal court of a home rule city whose city charter has expressly denied such right. Hardamon v. Municipal Court, 178 Colo. 271, 497 P.2d 1000 (1972).

Right to jury trial not abridged by forum for trial. The statutory right to a jury trial cannot be abridged on account of the forum in which the petty offense is tried. City of Aurora ex rel. People v. Erwin, 706 F.2d 295 (10th Cir. 1983).

Courts of home-rule cities are not excepted from the purview of municipal court rules of procedure issued by the supreme court. Alessi v. Municipal Court, 38 Colo. App. 153, 556 P.2d 87 (1976); Christie v. People, 837 P.2d 1237 (Colo. 1992).

The general assembly has made it clear that the power of home-rule cities over the operation of their municipal courts has some limitations, specifically in relation to rules of procedure. Alessi v. Municipal Court, 38 Colo. App. 153, 556 P.2d 87 (1976).

There is no violation of the due process clause in a trial before a nontenured judge. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

There is nothing to show that a trial before a nontenured judge in and of itself is sufficient to taint the fairness of the trial, thereby denying due process or equal protection. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

Tenure decision lies in hands of citizens of home-rule cities. The fact that the term of office for municipal judges is not included in the exceptions in this section clearly indicates the general assembly's recognition that the tenure decision lies in the hands of the citizens of home-rule cities. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977); Artes-Roy v. City of Aspen, 856 P.2d 823 (Colo. 1993).

13-10-104. Municipal court created - jurisdiction. The municipal governing body of each city or town shall create a municipal court to hear and try all alleged violations of ordinance provisions of such city or town.

ANNOTATION

Limitation on power of courts. This section does not give municipal courts the power to provide relief similar to that provided by remedial or original writs. City of Englewood v. Parkinson, 703 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1985).

Prerequisites of a written demand and $25 fee for a jury trial pursuant to C.R.M.P. 223

and this section do not violate defendant's right to a jury trial or deprive him of equal protection of the laws under the federal constitution. Christie v. People, 837 P.2d 1237 (Colo. 1992).

13-10-105. Municipal judge - appointment - removal. (1) (a) Unless otherwise provided in the charter of a home rule city, the municipal court shall be presided over by a municipal judge who shall be appointed by the municipal governing body for a specified term of not less than two years and who may be reappointed for a subsequent term; except that the initial appointment under this section may be for a term of office which expires on the date of the next election of the municipal governing body. Any vacancy in the office of municipal judge shall be filled by appointment of the municipal governing body for the remainder of the unexpired term.

(b) The municipal governing body may appoint such assistant judges as may be necessary to act or such substitute judges as circumstances may require in case of temporary absence, sickness, disqualification, or other inability of the presiding or assistant municipal judges to act.

(c) In the event that more than one municipal judge is appointed, the municipal governing body shall designate a presiding municipal judge, who shall serve in this capacity during the term for which he was appointed.

(2) A municipal judge may be removed during his term of office only for cause. A judge may be removed for cause if:

- (a) He is found guilty of a felony or any other crime involving moral turpitude;
- (b) He has a disability which interferes with the performance of his duties and which is or is likely to become of a permanent character;
- (c) He has willfully or persistently failed to perform his duties;
- (d) He is habitually intemperate; or
- (e) The municipality required the judge, at the time of appointment, to be a resident of the municipality, or county in which the municipality is located, and he subsequently becomes a nonresident of the municipality or the county during his term of office.

ANNOTATION

There is no violation of the due process clause in a trial before a nontenured judge. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

There is nothing to show that a trial before a nontenured judge in and of itself is sufficient to taint the fairness of the trial, thereby denying due process or equal protection. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

The fact that the term of office for municipal judges is not included in the exceptions in § 13-10-103 clearly indicates the general assembly's recognition that the tenure decision lies in the hands of the citizens of home-rule cities. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

Home-rule cities to specify terms of tenure. Subsection (1)(a), read in context with § 6 of art. XX, Colo. Const., makes it clear that the statute's unambiguous language offers home-rule cities the opportunity to specify the terms under which a municipal judge holds his office. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo. 144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

The decision of a home-rule city to appoint judges removable at the will of the city council is consistent with this section. People ex rel. People of City of Thornton v. Horan, 192 Colo.

144, 556 P.2d 1217 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 966, 97 S. Ct. 2922, 53 L. Ed.2d 1061 (1977).

Likewise, a city charter that provides for the appointment of a municipal judge by the city council for a fixed term and that limits the removal of a judge only for cause does not violate this section. Artes-Roy v. City of Aspen, 856 P.2d 823 (Colo. 1993).

13-10-106. Qualifications of municipal judges. (1) A municipal judge shall have the same qualifications as a county judge in a Class D county, as set forth in section 13-6-203 (3).

(2) Preference shall be given by the municipal governing body, when possible, to the appointment of a municipal judge who is licensed to practice law in Colorado or who is trained in the law.

(3) The municipal governing body may appoint a county judge in a Class C or D county, as defined in section 13-6-203, to serve as a municipal judge.

(4) The municipal governing body may require that the municipal judge be a qualified elector of the municipality or the county in which the municipality is located.

13-10-107. Compensation of municipal judges. (1) The municipal governing body shall provide by ordinance for the salary of the municipal and assistant judges. Such salary shall be a fixed annual compensation and payable on a monthly or other periodic basis. The municipal governing body may pay any substitute judge appointed pursuant to section 13-10-105 (1) (b) based upon the number of court sessions served by such judge.

13-10-108. Clerk of the municipal court. (1) The municipal governing body shall establish the position of clerk of the municipal court, except that the municipal judge shall serve as ex officio clerk if the business of the court is insufficient to warrant a separate full-time or part-time clerk.

(2) The clerk of the municipal court shall be appointed by the presiding municipal judge and shall have such duties as are delegated to him by law, court rule, or the presiding municipal judge.

(3) The municipal governing body shall provide for the salary of the clerk of the municipal court in the same manner as specified in section 13-10-107; except that if the municipal judge serves as ex officio clerk, he shall not receive any additional compensation.

(2) The performance bond shall be approved by the municipal governing body and be conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duties, and for the faithful accounting for, and payment of, all funds deposited with or received by the court.

(3) When the municipal judge serves as clerk of the municipal court, as provided in section 13-10-108 (3), he shall execute the performance bond required by this section.

(4) The governing body of the city or town may waive the bond required by this section.

13-10-110. Court facilities and supplies. (1) The municipal governing body shall furnish the municipal court with suitable courtroom facilities and sufficient funds for the acquisition of all necessary books, supplies, and furniture for the proper conduct of the business of the court.

(2) In order to carry out the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the municipal governing body may locate court facilities outside of the municipality or county in which the municipality is located, if such facilities are in reasonable proximity to the municipality and the governing body determines that suitable facilities cannot be provided within the municipality.

(3) Any two or more governments may cooperate or contract, pursuant to part 2 of article 1 of title 29, C.R.S., to provide joint court facilities and supplies. Such joint facilities may be located outside of any or all of the cooperating or contracting governments but shall be located within reasonable proximity to each of the cooperating or contracting governments.

(4) Where, pursuant to this section, a municipality locates its court facilities outside of its boundaries, any reference in this article to the municipality in which the court is located shall mean the municipality creating the municipal court, and any reference in this article to the county in which the municipal court is located shall mean the county in which the municipality creating the court is located.

13-10-111. Commencement of actions - process. (1) Any action or summons brought in any municipal court to recover any fine or enforce any penalty or forfeiture under any ordinance shall be filed in the corporate name of the municipality in which the court is located by and on behalf of the people of the state of Colorado.

(2) Any process issued from a municipal court runs in the corporate name of the municipality by and on behalf of the people of the state of Colorado. Processes from any municipal court shall be executed by any authorized law enforcement officer from the municipality in which the court is located.

(3) Any authorized law enforcement officer may execute within such officer's jurisdiction any summons, process, writ, or warrant issued by a municipal court from another jurisdiction arising under the ordinances of such municipality for an offense which is criminal or quasi-criminal. For the purposes of this subsection (3), traffic offenses shall not be considered criminal or quasi-criminal offenses unless penalty points may be assessed under section 42-2-127 (5) (a) to (5) (cc), C.R.S. The issuing municipality shall be liable for and pay all costs, including costs of service or incarceration incurred in connection with such service or execution.

(4) The clerk of the municipal court shall issue a subpoena for the appearance of any witness in municipal court upon the request of either the prosecuting municipality or the defendant. The subpoena may be served upon any person within the jurisdiction of the court in the manner prescribed by the rules of procedure applicable to municipal courts. Any person subpoenaed to appear as a witness in municipal court shall be paid a witness fee in the amount of five dollars.

(5) Upon the request of the municipal court, the prosecuting municipality, or the defendant, the clerk of the municipal court shall issue a subpoena for the appearance, at any and all stages of the court's proceedings, of the parent, guardian, or lawful custodian of any child under eighteen years of age who is charged with a municipal offense. Whenever a person who is issued a subpoena pursuant to this subsection (5) fails, without good cause, to appear, the court may issue an order for the person to show cause to the court as to why the person should not be held in contempt. Following a show cause hearing, the court may make findings of fact and conclusions of law and may enter an appropriate order, which may include finding the person in contempt.

ANNOTATION

Contempt power is implied by need to maintain order and decorum indispensable to judicial proceedings. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Determination whether or not certain conduct constitutes contempt is within the trial court's sound discretion, and it is not reviewable on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. Tipton v. City of Lakewood ex rel. People, 198 Colo. 18, 595 P.2d 689 (1979).

It is not designed to protect judge's dignity or person. A judge's power to punish contempt committed in his presence is not designed to protect his own dignity or person, but to protect the rights of litigants and the public by ensuring that the administration of justice shall not be thwarted or obstructed. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Contempt power must be exercised with self-restraint. Like other inherent judicial powers, the contempt power must be exercised with patience and self-restraint. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

While a court may have inherent power to perform its judicial functions effectively, the method a court chooses to use in exercising its inherent power must be one which the court has jurisdiction to utilize. City of Englewood v. Parkinson, 703 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1985).

Judges must be cautious to avoid overreacting when persons not familiar with court procedures, through ignorance or frustration, unintentionally cause minor commotions. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

When contempt power should be invoked. Since the contempt power is rooted in the necessity to maintain the respectful atmosphere appropriate to efficient administration of justice, it should be invoked only when the judicial process has been seriously affronted or disrupted. Only then is there a need to vindicate the dignity and authority of the court or to reestablish the respect owed to it. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

One cannot be convicted of contempt for respectfully declining to comply with an order which is beyond the court's authority. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Invocation of contempt power to punish valid exercise of constitutional right is an abuse of discretion by the court. Tipton v. City of Lakewood ex rel. People, 198 Colo. 18, 595 P.2d 689 (1979).

Ordering husband to reveal remarks to wife. A municipal judge had no authority, without the consent of the defendant or his wife, to order him to reveal what he had told her. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Evidence insufficient to support contempt conviction. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

Where the record indicates that the only substantial delay or disruption in court proceedings occurred after the judge required the defendant to return to the courtroom, sought to force him to divulge his prior remarks to his wife, and had him handcuffed in open court, that disruption cannot be attributed to the defendant's conduct. Thrap v. People, 192 Colo. 341, 558 P.2d 576 (1977).

13-10-113. Fines and penalties. (1) Any person convicted of violating a municipal ordinance in a municipal court of record may be incarcerated for a period not to exceed one year or fined an amount not to exceed one thousand dollars, or both.

(1.5) Any person convicted of violating a municipal ordinance in a municipal court which is not of record may be incarcerated for a period not to exceed ninety days or fined an amount not to exceed three hundred dollars, or both.

(2) In sentencing or fining a violator, the municipal judge shall not exceed the sentence or fine limitations established by ordinance. Any other provision of the law to the contrary notwithstanding, the municipal judge may suspend the sentence or fine of any violator and place him on probation for a period not to exceed one year.

(3) The municipal judge is empowered in his discretion to assess costs, as established by the municipal governing body by ordinance, against any defendant who pleads guilty or nolo contendere or who enters into a plea agreement or who, after trial, is found guilty of an ordinance violation.

(4) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, a municipal court has the authority to order a child under eighteen years of age confined in a juvenile detention facility operated or contracted by the department of human services or a temporary holding facility operated by or under contract with a municipal government for failure to comply with a lawful order of the court, including an order to pay a fine. Any confinement of a child for contempt of municipal court shall not exceed forty-eight hours.

(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a child, as defined in section 19-1-103 (18), C.R.S., arrested for an alleged violation of a municipal ordinance, convicted of violating a municipal ordinance or probation conditions imposed by a municipal court, or found in contempt of court in connection with a violation or alleged violation of a municipal ordinance shall not be confined in a jail, lockup, or other place used for the confinement of adult offenders but may be held in a juvenile detention facility operated by or under contract with the department of human services or a temporary holding facility operated by or under contract with a municipal government that shall receive and provide care for such child. A municipal court imposing penalties for violation of probation conditions imposed by such court or for contempt of court in connection with a violation or alleged violation of a municipal ordinance may confine a child pursuant to section 19-2-508, C.R.S., for up to forty-eight hours in a juvenile detention facility operated by or under contract with the department of human services. In imposing any jail sentence upon a juvenile for violating any municipal ordinance when the municipal court has jurisdiction over the juvenile pursuant to section 19-2-104 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S., a municipal court does not have the authority to order a child under eighteen years of age to a juvenile detention facility operated or contracted by the department of human services.

(6) Whenever the judge in a municipal court of record imposes a fine for a nonviolent municipal ordinance or code offense, if the person who committed the offense is unable to pay the fine at the time of the court hearing or if he or she fails to pay any fine imposed for the commission of such offense, in order to guarantee the payment of such fine, the municipal judge may compel collection of the fine in the manner provided in section 18-1.3-506, C.R.S. For purposes of this subsection (6), "nonviolent municipal ordinance or code offense" means a municipal ordinance or code offense which does not involve the use or threat of physical force on or to a person in the commission of the offense.

(7) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (1.5) of this section, the municipal judge of each municipality which implements an industrial wastewater pretreatment program pursuant to the federal act, as defined in section 25-8-103 (8), C.R.S., may provide such relief and impose such penalties as are required by such federal act and its implementing regulations for such programs.

(8) If, as a condition of or in connection with any sentence imposed pursuant to this section, a municipal court judge requires a juvenile who is younger than eighteen years of age to attend school, the municipal court shall notify the school district in which the juvenile is enrolled of such requirement.

13-10-114. Trial by jury. (1) In any action before municipal court in which the defendant is entitled to a jury trial by the constitution or the general laws of the state, such party shall have a jury upon request. The jury shall consist of three jurors unless, in the case of a trial for a petty offense, a greater number, not to exceed six, is requested by the defendant.

(2) In municipalities having less than five thousand population, juries may be summoned by the issuance of venire to a police officer or marshal. In municipalities having a population of five thousand or more, juries shall be selected from a jury list as is provided for courts of record.

(3) Jurors shall be paid the sum of six dollars per day for actual jury service and three dollars for each day of service on the jury panel alone; except that the governing body of a municipality may, by resolution or ordinance, set higher or lower fees for attending its municipal court.

(4) For the purposes of this section, a defendant waives his or her right to a jury trial under subsection (1) of this section unless, within twenty-one days after entry of a plea, the defendant makes a request to the court for a jury trial, in writing, and tenders to the court a fee of twenty-five dollars, unless the fee is waived by the judge because of the indigence of the defendant. If the action is dismissed or the defendant is acquitted of the charge, or if the defendant having paid the jury fee files with the court at least seven days before the scheduled trial date a written waiver of jury trial, the jury fee shall be refunded.

(5) At the time of arraignment for any petty offense in this state, the judge shall advise any defendant not represented by counsel of the defendant's right to trial by jury; of the requirement that the defendant, if he or she desires to invoke his or her right to trial by jury, request such trial by jury within twenty-one days after entry of a plea, in writing; of the number of jurors allowed by law; and of the requirement that the defendant, if he or she desires to invoke his or her right to trial by jury, tender to the court within twenty-one days after entry of a plea a jury fee of twenty-five dollars, unless the fee is waived by the judge because of the indigence of the defendant.

ANNOTATION

Applicability of the Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act. Although the act is not applicable to municipal courts, the statutory disqualifications in § 13-71-109 (2) should be applied to trials in municipal courts of record. City of Aurora v. Rhodes, 689 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1984).

For purposes of § 13-71-109, a prospective juror summoned to a municipal court qualifies as a "resident of the county" as long as he resides in that part of the county located within the territorial limits of the municipality. City of Aurora v. Rhodes, 689 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1984).

A defendant has the right to a jury in municipal court if charged with the commission of a petty offense, as defined under §16-10-109, C.R.S. Bradford v. Longmont Mun. Court, 830 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-10-116. Appeals. (1) Appeals may be taken by any defendant from any judgment of a municipal court which is not a qualified municipal court of record to the county court of the county in which such municipal court is located, and the cause shall be tried de novo in the appellate court.

(2) Appeals taken from judgments of a qualified municipal court of record shall be made to the district court of the county in which the qualified municipal court of record is located. The practice and procedure in such case shall be the same as provided by section 13-6-310 and applicable rules of procedure for the appeal of misdemeanor convictions from the county court to the district court, and the appeal procedures set forth in this article shall not apply to such case.

(3) No municipality shall have any right to appeal from any judgment of a municipal court, not of record, concerning a violation of any charter provision or ordinance, but this subsection (3) shall not be construed to prevent a municipality from maintaining any action to construe, interpret, or determine the validity of any ordinance or charter provision involved in such proceeding. Nothing in this subsection (3) shall be construed to prevent a municipality from appealing any question of law arising from a proceeding in a qualified municipal court of record.

(4) If, in any municipal court, a defendant is denied a jury trial to which he is entitled under section 13-10-114, he is entitled to a trial by jury under section 16-10-109, C.R.S., and to a trial de novo upon application therefor on appeal.

(5) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, if confinement of a child is ordered pursuant to a contempt conviction as set forth in section 13-10-113 (4), appeal shall be to the juvenile court for the county in which the municipal court is located. Such appeals shall be advanced on the juvenile court's docket to the earliest possible date. Procedures applicable to such appeals shall be in the same manner as provided in subsections (1) and (2) of this section for appeals to the county court.

- II. Appeals From Municipal Courts.

- III. Appeals From Municipal Courts of Record.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Colorado Appellate Procedure", see 40 U. Colo. L. Rev. 551 (1968).

Annotator's note. Since § 13-10-116 is similar to repealed § 139-36-2, CRS 53 and § 139-36-2, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Municipal courts may take judicial notice of the municipal ordinances that fall within their jurisdiction. City of Pueblo v. Murphy, 189 Colo. 559, 542 P.2d 1288 (1975).

A court which assumes the trial duties of the municipal court in a trial de novo appeal may take judicial notice of the same ordinances which the lower court does. City of Pueblo v. Murphy, 189 Colo. 559, 542 P.2d 1288 (1975).

A county court may take judicial notice of municipal ordinances when an appeal is taken from the municipal court to the county court for a trial de novo. City of Pueblo v. Murphy, 189 Colo. 559, 542 P.2d 1288 (1975).

The appellate court in such a circumstance stands in the same position and has the same duties as the trial court. As a result, the county court may take judicial notice of the ordinances which were before the municipal court. City of Pueblo v. Murphy, 189 Colo. 559, 542 P.2d 1288 (1975).

Courts of general jurisdiction may not take judicial notice of the ordinances of municipal corporations in civil or criminal cases. City of Pueblo v. Murphy, 189 Colo. 559, 542 P.2d 1288 (1975).

When district court may take judicial notice of municipal ordinance. Where a municipal ordinance was properly the subject of judicial notice in the municipal court, and the case is then before a district court on appeal on the record, the district court may also take judicial notice of the municipal ordinance. Chavez v. People, 193 Colo. 50, 561 P.2d 1270 (1977).

An executed sentence in municipal court does not necessarily constitute a waiver of the right of review to have the taint cleared on the name of the person. Where he has involuntarily complied with the sanction imposed by the trial court, he nevertheless has the opportunity to have undone the dishonor and discredit of a conviction. City of Pueblo v. Clemmer, 150 Colo. 546, 375 P.2d 99 (1962).

A municipality cannot appeal acquittal of a violation of an ordinance. Under this section a judgment finding accused not guilty of a traffic violation is a judgment on the merits and concludes the litigation between the parties, there being no right in the municipality to appeal from such judgment. People ex rel Town of Cherry Hills Vill. v. Cervi, 144 Colo. 338, 356 P.2d 241 (1960).

Appellate procedure must be followed before defendant can seek habeas corpus. Defendant, a 14 year old, who was found guilty of reckless driving and sentenced to 90 days in jail, was not entitled to habeas corpus relief on the ground of alleged violation of his right to counsel where he did not appeal to county court where adequate remedy of trial de novo was available, but instead proceeded immediately by way of habeas corpus. Garrett v. Knight, 173 Colo. 419, 480 P.2d 569 (1971).

Applied in Fuller v. Colo. Dept. of Rev., 43 Colo. App. 404, 610 P.2d 1078 (1979); People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980).

II. APPEALS FROM MUNICIPAL COURTS.

This section provides that appeals from a municipal or police court may be taken to the county court of the county where the municipal or police court is located. City of Central v. Axton, 159 Colo. 69, 410 P.2d 173 (1966).

County court sitting as appellate court in trial de novo has same duties as trial court. Rainwater v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 477, 604 P.2d 1195 (1979).

Trial de novo is not an entirely new trial, but is, instead, a continuation of the original trial in the form of an appeal. Rainwater v. County Court, 43 Colo. App. 477, 604 P.2d 1195 (1979).

"Any defendant" may appeal "any judgment". When he does appeal in compliance with the procedure set forth in this article, he is entitled to a trial de novo. City of Pueblo v. Trujillo, 150 Colo. 549, 374 P.2d 863 (1962).

This section means that a defendant starts afresh in the county court, i.e., if he resolves to contest the charge against him in the county court, he may have a trial de novo there without regard to what took place in the municipal court. City of Pueblo v. Trujillo, 150 Colo. 549, 374 P.2d 863 (1962).

Generally, municipal judges are untrained in the law. The general assembly and the courts recognize the fact that the judges and magistrates who preside over inferior tribunals are frequently untrained and unskilled in the law, and that they conduct courts not of record, in which the proceedings are apt to be summary in nature. They also recognize that, because of frequent shortcomings in training in the law, safeguards afforded defendants may be curtailed and, by reason thereof, defendants may not be properly advised of their rights in the premises or adequately warned of the consequences of a plea. City of Pueblo v. Trujillo, 150 Colo. 549, 374 P.2d 863 (1962).

III. APPEALS FROM MUNICIPAL COURTS OF RECORD.

If a municipal court is a court of record, the cause is heard on the record, and the practice and procedure is to be the same as provided for in regard to the appeal of misdemeanor convictions from county courts. Hylton v. City of Colo. Springs, 32 Colo. App. 9, 505 P.2d 26 (1973).

Remanded or tried de novo by the district court. These sections require a district court either to review a decision of a municipal court of record on the record, to remand the case for a new trial with instructions, or to direct that trial de novo be had before the district court. In the instant case, the district court adopted the first alternative, and therefore, the question is whether the court properly exercised the appellate jurisdiction granted to it under the sections noted above. People v. Anderson, 177 Colo. 84, 492 P.2d 844 (1972).

The function of a district court in acting as an appellate court is the same whether the case originates in a municipal court of record or a county court. People v. Anderson, 177 Colo. 84, 492 P.2d 844 (1972).

Party seeking review of a municipal court judgment is entitled to file a petition for rehearing unless the district court by express order dispenses with the filing of the petition. City of Aurora v. Rhodes, 689 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1984).

Because appellant's conviction originated in a municipal court of record, appellant had 30 days following the judgment of conviction to file the notice of appeal pursuant to this section and its implementing rules. Normandin v. Town of Parachute, 91 P.3d 383 (Colo. 2004).

13-10-117. Time - docket fee - bond. Appeals may be taken within fourteen days after entry of any judgment of a municipal court. No appeal shall be allowed until the appellant has paid to the clerk of the municipal court one dollar and fifty cents as a fee for preparing the transcript of record on appeal. If the municipal court is a court of record, the clerk of the municipal court is entitled to the same additional fees for preparing the record, or portions thereof designated, as is the clerk of the county court on the appeal of misdemeanors, but said fees shall be refunded to the defendant if the judgment is set aside on appeal. No stay of execution shall be granted until the appellant has executed an approved bond as provided in sections 13-10-120 and 13-10-121.

ANNOTATION

One appealing from a judgment of a municipal court must file an appeal bond as directed by this section. City of Pueblo v.

Trujillo, 150 Colo. 549, 374 P.2d 863 (1962) (decided under repealed § 139-36-4, CRS 53).

13-10-118. Notice - scope. (1) Appeals may be taken by filing with the clerk of the municipal court a notice of appeal, in duplicate. The notice of appeal shall set forth the title of the case; the name and address of the appellant and appellant's attorney, if any; identification of the offense or violation of which the appellant was convicted; a statement of the judgment, including its date and any fines or sentences imposed; and a statement that the appellant appeals from the judgment. The notice of appeal shall be signed by the appellant or his attorney.

(2) The taking of an appeal shall not permit the retrial of any matter of which the appellant has been acquitted, or any conjoined charge from the conviction of which he does not seek to appeal.

Substantial compliance is appropriate standard for notice of appeal. Pueblo v. County Court, 761 P.2d 275 (Colo. App. 1988).

13-10-119. Certification to appellate court. Upon payment of the fee provided in section 13-10-117, and filing of notice as provided in section 13-10-118, the original papers in the municipal court file, together with a transcript of the record of the municipal court, and a duplicate notice of appeal shall be certified to the appropriate appellate court pursuant to section 13-10-116 by the municipal court.

13-10-120. Bond - approval of sureties - forfeitures. (1) When an appellant desires to stay the judgment of the municipal court, he shall execute a bond to the municipality in which the municipal court is located, in such penal sum as may be fixed by the municipal court, and in such form and with sureties qualified as the municipality may, by ordinance, designate.

(2) Sureties shall be approved by a judge of the municipal court from which the appeal is taken.

(3) The amount of bond shall not exceed double the amount of the judgment for fines and costs, plus an amount commensurate with any jail sentence, which latter amount shall be not less than fifty dollars nor more than a sum equal to two dollars for each day of jail sentence imposed.

13-10-121. Conditions of bond - forfeiture - release. (1) The bond shall be conditioned that the appellant will duly prosecute such appeal and satisfy any judgment that may be rendered upon trial of the case in the appropriate appellate court to which appeal is taken pursuant to section 13-10-116 and that the appellant will surrender himself in satisfaction of such judgment if that is required.

(2) If the bond is forfeited, the appellate court, upon motion of the municipality, shall enter judgment against the appellant and sureties on the bond for the amount of such bond. The appellate court, with the consent of the municipality, shall enter judgment against the appellant and sureties on the bond for the amount of such bond. The appellate court, with the consent of the municipality, may set aside or modify the judgment.

(3) Any municipality may provide by ordinance such other bond terms and conditions as are not inconsistent with the provisions of this article. The filing of such bond or any notice thereof of record shall not constitute any lien against any property of the sureties.

(4) When the condition of the bond has been satisfied or the forfeiture thereof set aside or remitted, the municipal court shall exonerate the obligors and release the bond. At any time before final judgment in the appellate court, a surety may be exonerated by a deposit of cash in the amount of the bond or by timely surrender of the appellant into custody.

13-10-125. Judgment. Upon trial de novo of the case on appeal to the appellate court, if a jury has been demanded, the duties of the jurors shall be to determine only whether the appellant has violated the ordinance charged. #### ANNOTATION

County judge imposes penalty as required by law. Since on appeal to county court, if a jury sits, this section requires that the jury determine only whether the ordinance has been violated, the trial judge has the responsibility of imposing "a penalty as provided by law". Hylton v. City of Colo. Springs, 32 Colo. App. 9, 505 P.2d 26 (1973) (decided under repealed § 139-36-17, C.R.S. 1963).

Under this section, "law" can be none other than municipal ordinance. Hylton v. City of Colo. Springs, 32 Colo. App. 9, 505 P.2d 26 (1973).

Judgment is a county court judgment. Whether action and penalties are characterized as criminal, quasi-criminal, or civil, a county court is empowered by statute to impose a sentence within the limits provided by the municipal ordinance, but it is nevertheless a county court judgment. Hylton v. City of Colo. Springs, 32 Colo. App. 9, 505 P.2d 26 (1973).

Municipal court has no power to issue execution on a county court judgment, as the county court must issue execution on its own judgment. Hylton v. City of Colo. Springs, 32 Colo. App. 9, 505 P.2d 26 (1973).

13-10-126. Prostitution offender program authorized - reports. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, a municipal or county court, or multiple municipal or county courts, may create and administer a program for certain persons who are charged with soliciting for prostitution, as described in section 18-7-202, C.R.S., patronizing a prostitute, as described in section 18-7-205, C.R.S., or any corresponding municipal code or ordinance.

(2) A program created and administered by a municipal or county court or multiple municipal or county courts pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall:

(a) Permit enrollment in the program only by an offender who either:

(I) (A) Has no prior convictions or any charges pending for any felony; for any offense described in section 18-3-305, 18-3-306, or 18-13-128, C.R.S., in part 4 or 5 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., in part 3, 4, 6, 7, or 8 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., in section 18-7-201.7, 18-7-203, 18-7-205.7, or 18-7-206, C.R.S., or in part 3, 4, or 5 of article 7 of title 18, C.R.S.; or for any offense committed in another state that would constitute such an offense if committed in this state; and

(B) Has been offered and has agreed to a deferred sentencing arrangement as described in subsection (3) of this section; or

(II) (A) Has at least one prior conviction for any offense described in section 18-7-201,

18-7-202, 18-7-204, 18-7-205, 18-7-207, or 18-7-208, C.R.S.; or for any offense committed in another state that would constitute such an offense if committed in this state; and

(B) Has been sentenced by a court to complete the program as part of the penalty imposed for a subsequent conviction for soliciting for prostitution, as described in section 18-7-202, C.R.S., patronizing a prostitute, as described in section 18-7-205, C.R.S., or any corresponding municipal code or ordinance.

(b) Permit the court or courts to require each offender who enrolls in the program to pay an administration fee, which fee the court or courts shall use to pay the costs of administering the program;

(c) To the extent practicable, be available to offenders, courts, and prosecutors of other jurisdictions; and

(d) Be administered by the court or courts with assistance from one or more municipal prosecutor's offices, one or more district attorney's offices, one or more state or local law enforcement agencies, and one or more nonprofit corporations, as defined in section 7-121-401, C.R.S., which nonprofit corporations have a stated mission to reduce human trafficking or prostitution. The court or courts are encouraged to consult, in addition to the aforementioned entities, recognized criminology experts and mental health professionals.

(3) (a) Enrollment in the program shall be offered to each offender at the sole discretion of the prosecuting attorney in each offender's case.

(b) If the prosecuting attorney offers enrollment in the program to an offender as a condition of a plea bargain agreement as described in subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, the agreement shall include at a minimum the following stipulations:

(I) The offender shall enter a plea of guilty to the prostitution-related offense or offenses with which he or she is charged;

(II) The court shall defer judgment and sentencing of the offender for a period not to exceed two years, as described in section 18-1.3-102 (1), C.R.S., during which time the offender shall enroll in and complete the program and may be required to pay an administration fee, as described in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section;

(III) Upon the offender's satisfactory completion of the program, the court shall dismiss with prejudice the prostitution-related charge or charges;

(IV) The offender shall waive his or her right to a speedy trial; and

(V) If the offender fails to complete the program or fails to satisfy any other condition of the plea bargain agreement, he or she shall be sentenced for the offenses to which he or she has pleaded guilty and shall be required to pay a fine of not less than two thousand five hundred dollars and not more than five thousand dollars, or the maximum amount available to a municipal or county court, in the discretion of the court, in addition to any other sentence imposed by the court.

(c) If the prosecuting attorney offers enrollment in the program to an offender pursuant to subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section and the offender fails to complete the program, the offender shall be required to pay a fine of not less than two thousand five hundred dollars and not more than five thousand dollars, or the maximum amount available to the municipal or county court, in the discretion of the court, in addition to any other sentence imposed by the court.

(4) If a municipal or county court or multiple municipal or county courts create and administer a program pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the court or courts shall prepare and submit a report to the judiciary committees of the house of representatives and senate, or any successor committees, concerning the effectiveness of the program. The court or courts shall submit the report not less than two years nor more than three years after the creation of the program. The report shall include information concerning:

(a) The cost of the program and the extent to which the cost is mitigated by the imposition of the fees described in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section; and

(b) The effectiveness of the program in reducing recidivism among persons who commit prostitution-related offenses.

13-14-102. Civil protection orders - legislative declaration. (1) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that the issuance and enforcement of protection orders are of paramount importance in the state of Colorado because protection orders promote safety, reduce violence, and prevent serious harm and death. In order to improve the public's access to protection orders and to assure careful judicial consideration of requests and effective law enforcement, there shall be two processes for obtaining protection orders within the state of Colorado, a simplified civil process and a mandatory criminal process.

(b) The general assembly further finds and declares that:

(I) Domestic violence is not limited to physical threats of violence and harm but includes financial control, document control, property control, and other types of control that make a victim more likely to return to an abuser due to fear of retaliation or inability to meet basic needs;

(II) Victims of domestic violence in many cases are unable to access resources to seek lasting safety options;

(III) These victims need the assistance of additional court orders to meet their immediate needs for food, shelter, transportation, medical care, and child care at the time they go to court for a civil protection order; and

(IV) These additional court orders are needed not only in cases that end in dissolution of marriage but also in cases in which reconciliation is appropriate, as well as in other cases.

(1.5) Any municipal court of record, if authorized by the municipal governing body; any county court; and any district, probate, or juvenile court shall have original concurrent jurisdiction to issue a temporary or permanent civil protection order against an adult or against a juvenile who is ten years of age or older for any of the following purposes:

(a) To prevent assaults and threatened bodily harm;

(b) To prevent domestic abuse;

(c) To prevent emotional abuse of the elderly or of an at-risk adult;

(d) To prevent stalking.

(2) Any civil protection order issued pursuant to this section shall be issued using the standardized set of forms developed by the state court administrator pursuant to section 13-1-136.

(2.5) Venue for filing a motion or complaint pursuant to this section is proper in any county where the acts that are the subject of the motion or complaint occur, in any county where one of the parties resides, or in any county where one of the parties is employed. This requirement for venue does not prohibit the change of venue to any other county appropriate under applicable law.

(3) A motion for a temporary civil protection order shall be set for hearing, which hearing may be ex parte, at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all matters, except those matters of the same character that have been on the court docket for a longer period of time. The court shall hear all such motions as expeditiously as possible.

(3.3) Any district court, in an action commenced under the "Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act", article 10 of title 14, C.R.S., shall have authority to issue temporary and permanent protection orders pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1.5) of this section. Such protection order may be as a part of a motion for a protection order accompanied by an affidavit filed in an action brought under article 10 of title 14, C.R.S. Either party may request the court to issue a protection order consistent with any other provision of this article.

(3.7) At the time a protection order is requested pursuant to this section, the court shall inquire about, and the requesting party and such party's attorney shall have an independent duty to disclose, knowledge such party and such party's attorney may have concerning the existence of any prior protection or restraining order of any court addressing in whole or in part the subject matter of the requested protection order. In the event there are conflicting restraining or protection orders, the court shall consider, as its first priority, issues of public safety. An order that prevents assaults, threats of assault, or other bodily harm shall be given precedence over an order that deals with the disposition of property or other tangible assets. Every effort shall be made by judicial officers to clarify conflicting orders.

(4) (a) A temporary civil protection order may be issued if the issuing judge or magistrate finds that an imminent danger exists to the person or persons seeking protection under the civil protection order. In determining whether an imminent danger exists to the life or health of one or more persons, the court shall consider when the most recent incident of abuse or threat of harm occurred as well as all other relevant evidence concerning the safety and protection of the persons seeking the protection order. However, the court shall not deny a petitioner the relief requested solely because of a lapse of time between an act of abuse or threat of harm and filing of the petition for a protection order.

(b) If the judge or magistrate finds that an imminent danger exists to the employees of a business entity, he or she may issue a civil protection order in the name of the business for the protection of the employees. An employer shall not be liable for failing to obtain a civil protection order in the name of the business for the protection of the employees and patrons.

(5) Upon the filing of a complaint duly verified, alleging that the defendant has committed acts that would constitute grounds for a civil protection order, any judge or magistrate, after hearing the evidence and being fully satisfied therein that sufficient cause exists, may issue a temporary civil protection order to prevent the actions complained of and a citation directed to the defendant commanding the defendant to appear before the court at a specific time and date and to show cause, if any, why said temporary civil protection order should not be made permanent. In addition, the court may order any other relief that the court deems appropriate. Complaints may be filed by persons seeking protection for themselves or for others as provided in section 26-3.1-102 (1) (b) and (1) (c), C.R.S.

(6) A copy of the complaint together with a copy of the temporary civil protection order and a copy of the citation shall be served upon the defendant and upon the person to be protected, if the complaint was filed by another person, in accordance with the rules for service of process as provided in rule 304 of the rules of county court civil procedure or rule 4 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure. The citation shall inform the defendant that, if the defendant fails to appear in court in accordance with the terms of the citation, a bench warrant may be issued for the arrest of the defendant and the temporary protection order previously entered by the court shall be made permanent without further notice or service upon the defendant.

(7) The return date of the citation shall be set not more than fourteen days after the issuance of the temporary civil protection order and citation. If the petitioner is unable to serve the defendant in that period, the court shall extend the temporary protection order previously issued, continue the show of cause hearing, and issue an alias citation stating the date and time to which the hearing is continued. The petitioner may thereafter request, and the court may grant, additional continuances as needed if the petitioner has still been unable to serve the defendant.

(8) (a) Any person against whom a temporary protection order is issued pursuant to this section, which temporary protection order excludes such person from a shared residence, shall be permitted to return to such shared residence one time to obtain sufficient undisputed personal effects as are necessary for such person to maintain a normal standard of living during any period prior to a hearing concerning such order. Such person against whom a temporary protection order is issued shall be permitted to return to such shared residence only if such person is accompanied at all times while the person is at or in such shared residence by a peace officer.

(b) When any person is served with a temporary protection order issued against such person excluding such person from a shared residence, such temporary protection order shall contain a notification in writing to such person of such person's ability to return to such shared residence pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (8). Such written notification shall be in bold print and conspicuously placed in such temporary protection order. No judge, magistrate, or other judicial officer shall issue a temporary protection order that does not comply with this subsection (8).

(c) Any person against whom a temporary protection order is issued pursuant to this section, which temporary protection order excludes such person from a shared residence, shall be entitled to avail himself or herself of the forcible entry and detainer remedies available pursuant to article 40 of this title. However, such person shall not be entitled to return to the residence until such time as a valid writ of restitution is executed, filed with the court issuing the protection order, and, if necessary, the protection order is modified accordingly. A landlord whose lessee has been excluded from a residence pursuant to the terms of a protection order is also entitled to avail himself or herself of the remedies available pursuant to article 40 of this title.

(9) (a) On the return date of the citation, or on the day to which the hearing has been continued, the judge or magistrate shall examine the record and the evidence. If upon such examination the judge or magistrate is of the opinion that the defendant has committed acts constituting grounds for issuance of a civil protection order and that unless restrained will continue to commit such acts, the judge or magistrate shall order the temporary civil protection order to be made permanent or order a permanent civil protection order with different provisions from the temporary civil protection order. The judge or magistrate shall inform said defendant that a violation of the civil protection order shall constitute a criminal offense pursuant to section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S., or shall constitute contempt of court and subject the defendant to such punishment as may be provided by law. If the defendant fails to appear before the court for the show cause hearing at the time and on the date identified in the citation issued by the court and the court finds that the defendant was properly served with the temporary protection order and such citation, it shall not be necessary to re-serve the defendant to make the protection order permanent. However, if the court modifies the protection order on the motion of the protected party, the modified protection order shall be served upon the defendant.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (9), the judge or magistrate, after examining the record and the evidence, for good cause shown, may continue the temporary protection order and the show cause hearing to a date certain not to exceed one hundred twenty days after the date of the hearing if he or she determines such continuance would be in the best interests of the parties and if both parties are present at the hearing and agree to the continuance. In addition, each party may request one continuance for a period not to exceed fourteen days which the judge or magistrate, after examining the record and the evidence, may grant upon a finding of good cause. The judge or magistrate shall inform the defendant that a violation of the temporary civil protection order shall constitute a criminal offense pursuant to section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S., or shall constitute contempt of court and subject the defendant to such punishment as may be provided by law.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (b) of this subsection (9), for a protection order filed in a proceeding commenced under the “Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act”, article 10 of title 14, C.R.S., the court may, on the motion of either party if both parties agree to the continuance, continue the temporary protection order until the time of the final decree or final disposition of the action.

(10) The court shall electronically transfer into the central registry of protection orders established pursuant to section 18-6-803.7, C.R.S., a copy of any order issued pursuant to this section and shall deliver a copy of such order to the protected party.

(11) If the order has not been personally served, the peace officer responding to a call for assistance shall serve a copy of said order on the person named defendant therein and shall write the time, date, and manner of service on the protected person’s copy of such order and shall sign such statement.

(12) The duties of peace officers enforcing the civil protection order shall be in accordance with section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S., and any rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court pursuant to said section.

(13) A person failing to comply with any order of the court issued pursuant to this section shall be found in contempt of court or may be prosecuted for violation of a civil protection order pursuant to section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S.

(14) At the time a civil protection order is requested, the court shall inquire about, and the requesting party and such party’s attorney shall have an independent duty to disclose, any knowledge such party and such party’s attorney may have concerning the existence of any prior protection orders of any court addressing in whole or in part the subject matter of the requested civil protection order.

(15) A municipal court of record that is authorized by its municipal governing body to issue protection or restraining orders and any county court, in connection with issuing a civil protection order, shall have original concurrent jurisdiction with the district court to issue such additional orders as the municipal or county court deems necessary for the protection of persons. Such additional orders may include, but are not limited to:

(a) Restraining a party from threatening, molesting, or injuring any other party or the minor child of either of the parties;

(b) Restraining a party from contacting any other party or the minor child of either of the parties;

(c) Excluding a party from the family home upon a showing that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result;

(d) Excluding a party from the home of another party upon a showing that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result;

(e) (I) Awarding temporary care and control of any minor children of either party involved for a period of not more than one hundred twenty days.

(II) If temporary care and control is awarded, the order may include parenting time rights for the other party involved and any conditions of such parenting time, including the supervision of such parenting time by a third party who agrees on the record to the terms of the supervised parenting time and any costs associated with supervised parenting time, if necessary. If the restrained party is unable to pay the ordered costs, the court shall not place such responsibility with publicly funded agencies. If the court finds that the safety of any child or the protected party cannot be ensured with any form of parenting time reasonably available, the court may deny parenting time.

(II.5) The court may award interim decision-making responsibility of a child to a person entitled to bring an action for the allocation of parental responsibilities under section 14-10-123, C.R.S., when such award is reasonably related to preventing domestic abuse as defined in section 13-14-101 (2), or preventing the child from witnessing domestic abuse.

(III) The standard for the award of temporary care and control or interim decision-making responsibility shall be in accordance with section 14-10-124, C.R.S.

(f) Such other relief as the court deems appropriate;

(f.2) Restraining a party from threatening, molesting, injuring, killing, taking, transferring, encumbering, concealing, or disposing of an animal owned, possessed, leased, kept, or held by any other party, a minor child of any other party, or an elderly or at-risk adult;

(f.4) Specifying arrangements for possession and care of an animal owned, possessed, leased, kept, or held by any other party, a minor child of any other party, or an elderly or at-risk adult;

(g) (I) A temporary injunction that may be issued by the court that, upon personal service or upon waiver and acceptance of service by the defendant, is to be in effect against the defendant for a period determined to be appropriate by the court and restrains the defendant from ceasing to make payments for mortgage or rent, insurance, utilities or related services, transportation, medical care, or child care when the defendant has a prior existing duty or legal obligation or from transferring, encumbering, concealing, or in any way disposing of personal effects or real property, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life. The restrained party shall be required to account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after the injunction is in effect. Any injunction issued shall not exceed one hundred twenty days after the issuance of the permanent civil protection order.

(II) The provisions of the injunction shall be printed on the summons, and the petition and the injunction shall become an order of the court upon fulfillment of the requirements of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (g).

(III) Nothing in this paragraph (g) shall preclude either party from applying to the district court for further temporary orders, an expanded temporary injunction, or modification or revocation. Any subsequent order issued by the district court as part of a domestic matter involving the parties shall supersede an injunction made pursuant to this paragraph (g).

(16) Any order for temporary care and control issued pursuant to subsection (15) of this section shall be governed by the "Uniform Child-custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act", article 13 of title 14, C.R.S.

(17) Any order granted pursuant to paragraph (c) or (e) of subsection (15) of this section shall terminate whenever a subsequent order regarding the same subject matter is granted pursuant to the "Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act", article 10 of title 14, C.R.S., or the "Uniform Child-custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act", article 13 of title 14, C.R.S., or the "Colorado Children's Code", title 19, C.R.S.

(17.5) (a) Nothing in this section shall preclude the protected party from applying to the court at any time for modification, including but not limited to a modification of the duration of a protection order, or dismissal of a temporary or permanent protection order issued pursuant to this section. The restrained party may apply to the court for modification, including but not limited to a modification of the duration of the protection order, or dismissal of a permanent protection order pursuant to this section. However, if a permanent protection order has been issued or if a motion for modification or dismissal of a permanent protection order has been filed by the restrained party, whether or not it was granted, no motion to modify or dismiss may be filed by the restrained party within four years after issuance of the permanent order or after disposition of the prior motion.

(b) (I) (A) Notwithstanding any provision of paragraph (a) of this subsection (17.5) to the contrary, after issuance of the permanent protection order, if the restrained party is convicted of any misdemeanor other than the original misdemeanor that formed the basis for the issuance of the protection order, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by a court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as that term is defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S., or of any felony, then the protection order shall remain permanent and shall not be modified or dismissed by the court.

(B) Notwithstanding the prohibition in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), a protection order may be modified or dismissed on the motion of the protected person, or the person's attorney, parent or legal guardian if a minor, or conservator of legal guardian if one has been appointed; except that this sub-subparagraph (B) shall not apply if the parent, legal guardian, or conservator is the restrained person.

(II) A court shall not consider a motion to modify a protection order filed by a restrained party pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (17.5) unless the court receives the results of a fingerprint-based criminal history record check of the restrained party that is conducted within ninety days prior to the filing of the motion. The fingerprint-based criminal history record check shall include a review of the state and federal criminal history records maintained by the Colorado bureau of investigation and federal bureau of investigation. The restrained party shall be responsible for supplying fingerprints to the Colorado bureau of investigation and to the federal bureau of investigation and paying the costs of the record checks. The restrained party may be required by the court to provide certified copies of any criminal dispositions that are not reflected in the state or federal records and any other dispositions that are unknown.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the issuing court shall retain jurisdiction to enforce, modify, or dismiss a temporary or permanent protection order.

(d) Any motion filed pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (17.5) shall be heard by the court. The party moving for a modification or dismissal of a temporary or permanent protection order pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (17.5) shall affect personal service on the other party with a copy of the motion and notice of the hearing on the motion, as provided by rule 4 (e) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure. The moving party shall bear the burden of proof to show, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the modification is appropriate or that a dismissal is appropriate because the protection order is no longer necessary. If the protected party has requested that his or her address be kept confidential, the court shall not disclose such information to the restrained party or any other person, except as otherwise authorized by law.

(e) In considering whether to modify or dismiss a protection order issued pursuant to this section, the court shall consider all relevant factors, including but not limited to:

(I) Whether the restrained party has complied with the terms of the protection order;

(II) Whether the restrained party has met the conditions associated with the protection order, if any;

(III) Whether the restrained party has been ordered to participate in and complete a domestic violence treatment program provided by an entity approved pursuant to section 16-11.8-103 (4) (a) (III) (C), C.R.S., and whether the restrained party has completed the program;

(IV) Whether the restrained party has voluntarily participated in any domestic violence treatment program or other counseling addressing domestic violence or anger management issues;

(V) The time that has lapsed since the protection order was issued;

(VI) When the last incident of abuse or threat of harm occurred or other relevant information concerning the safety and protection of the protected person;

(VII) Whether, since the issuance of the protection order, the restrained person has been convicted of or pled guilty to a crime, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by a court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as that term is defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S., other than the original offense, if any, that formed the basis for the issuance of the protection order;

(VIII) Whether any other restraining orders or protective orders or protection orders have been subsequently issued against the restrained person pursuant to this section or any other law of this state or any other state; and

(IX) The circumstances of the parties, including the relative proximity of the parties' residences and work places and whether the parties have minor children together.

(18) A court shall not grant a mutual protection order to prevent domestic abuse for the protection of opposing parties unless each party has met his or her burden of proof as described in subsection (4) of this section and the court makes separate and sufficient findings of fact to support the issuance of the mutual protection order to prevent domestic abuse for the protection of opposing parties. No party may waive the requirements set forth in this subsection (18).

(19) Repealed.

(20) Enactment of this section shall not affect the effectiveness of any civil protection or restraining order issued prior to July 1, 1999.

(21) (a) The court may assess a filing fee against a petitioner seeking relief under this section; except that the court may not assess a filing fee against a petitioner if the court determines the petitioner is seeking the protection order as a victim of domestic abuse as defined by section 13-14-101 (2); domestic violence as defined by section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S.; stalking as described in section 18-3-602, C.R.S.; sexual assault as defined by section 18-3-402, C.R.S.; or unlawful sexual contact as defined by section 18-3-404, C.R.S. Petitioners shall be provided the necessary number of certified copies at no cost.

(b) Fees for service of process may not be assessed by a state agency or public agency against petitioners seeking relief under this section as a victim of conduct consistent with the following: Domestic abuse as defined by section 13-14-101 (2); domestic violence as defined by section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S.; stalking as described in section 18-3-602, C.R.S.; sexual assault as defined by section 18-3-402, C.R.S.; or unlawful sexual contact as defined by section 18-3-404, C.R.S.

(c) At the permanent protection order hearing, the court may require the respondent to pay the filing fee and service-of-process fees, as established by the state agency, political subdivision, or public agency pursuant to a fee schedule, and to reimburse the petitioner for costs incurred in bringing the action.

13-14-103. Emergency protection orders. (1) (a) Any county or district court shall have the authority to enter an emergency protection order pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (1).

(b) An emergency protection order issued pursuant to this subsection (1) may include:

(I) Restraining a party from threatening, molesting, injuring, or contacting any other party, a minor child of either of the parties, or a minor child who is in danger in the reasonably foreseeable future of being a victim of an unlawful sexual offense or domestic abuse;

(II) Excluding a party from the family home or from the home of another party upon a showing that physical or emotional harm would otherwise result;

(III) Awarding temporary care and control of any minor child of a party involved;

(IV) Enjoining an individual from contacting a minor child at school, at work, or wherever he or she may be found;

(V) Restraining a party from threatening, molesting, injuring, killing, taking, transferring, encumbering, concealing, or disposing of an animal owned, possessed, leased, kept, or held by any other party, a minor child of either of the parties, or an elderly or at-risk adult; or

(VI) Specifying arrangements for possession and care of an animal owned, possessed, leased, kept, or held by any other party, a minor child of either of the parties, or an elderly or at-risk adult.

(c) In cases involving a minor child, the juvenile court and the district court shall have the authority to issue emergency protection orders to prevent an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., or to prevent domestic abuse, as defined in section 13-14-101 (2), when requested by the local law enforcement agency, the county department of social services, or a responsible person who asserts, in a verified petition supported by affidavit, that there are reasonable grounds to believe that a minor child is in danger in the reasonably foreseeable future of being the victim of an unlawful sexual offense or domestic abuse, based upon an allegation of a recent actual unlawful sexual offense or domestic abuse or threat of the same. Any emergency protection order issued pursuant to this subsection (1) shall be on a standardized form prescribed by the judicial department and a copy shall be provided to the protected person.

(d) The chief judge in each judicial district shall be responsible for making available in each judicial district a judge to issue, by telephone, emergency protection orders at all times when the county and district courts are otherwise closed for judicial business. Such judge may be a district court or county court judge or a special associate, an associate, an assistant county judge, or a magistrate.

(e) When the county, district, and juvenile courts are unavailable from the close of business at the end of the day or week to the resumption of business at the beginning of the day or week and a peace officer asserts reasonable grounds to believe that an adult is in immediate and present danger of domestic abuse, based upon an allegation of a recent incident of actual domestic abuse or threat of domestic abuse, or that a minor child is in immediate and present danger of an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., or of domestic abuse, as defined in section 13-14-101 (2), a judge made available pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (1) may issue a written or verbal ex parte emergency protection order. Any written emergency protection order issued pursuant to this subsection (1) shall be on a standardized form prescribed by the judicial department and a copy shall be provided to the protected person.

(f) An emergency protection order issued pursuant to this subsection (1) shall expire not later than the close of judicial business on the next day of judicial business following the day of issue, unless otherwise continued by the court. The court may continue an emergency protection order filed to prevent domestic abuse pursuant to this subsection (1) only if the judge is unable to set a hearing on plaintiff's request for a temporary protection order on the day the complaint was filed pursuant to section 13-14-102; except that this limitation on a court's power to continue an emergency protection order shall not apply to an emergency protection order filed to protect a minor child from an unlawful sexual offense or domestic abuse. For any emergency protection order continued pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph (f), following two days' notice to the party who obtained the emergency protection order or on such shorter notice to said party as the court may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification. The motion to dissolve or modify the emergency protection order shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character, and the court shall determine such motions as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(2) (a) A verbal emergency protection order may be issued pursuant to subsection (1) of this section only if the issuing judge finds that an imminent danger in close proximity exists to the life or health of one or more persons or that a danger exists to the life or health of the minor child in the reasonably foreseeable future.

(b) Any verbal emergency protection order shall be reduced to writing and signed by the officer or other person asserting the grounds for the order and shall include a statement of the grounds for the order asserted by the officer or person. The officer or person shall not be subject to civil liability for any statement made or act performed in good faith. The emergency protection order shall be served upon the respondent with a copy given to the protected party and filed with the county or district court as soon as practicable after issuance. Any written emergency protection order issued pursuant to this subsection (2) shall be on a standardized form prescribed by the judicial department, and a copy shall be provided to the protected person.

(3) The court shall electronically transfer into the central registry of protection orders established pursuant to section 18-6-803.7, C.R.S., a copy of any order issued pursuant to this section and shall deliver a copy of such order to the protected party or his or her parent or an individual acting in the place of a parent who is not the respondent.

(4) If any person named in an order issued pursuant to this section has not been served personally with such order but has received actual notice of the existence and substance of such order from any person, any act in violation of such order may be deemed sufficient to subject the person named in such order to any penalty for such violation.

(5) Venue for filing a complaint pursuant to this section is proper in any county where the acts constituting unlawful sexual assault or domestic abuse that are the subject of the complaint occur, in any county where one of the parties resides, or in any county where one of the parties is employed. This requirement for venue does not prohibit the change of venue to any other county appropriate under applicable law.

(6) A person failing to comply with any order of the court issued pursuant to this section shall be found in contempt of court and, in addition, may be punished as provided in section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S.

(7) At any time that the law enforcement agency having jurisdiction to enforce the emergency protection order has cause to believe that a violation of the order has occurred, it shall enforce the order. If the order is written and has not been personally served, a member of the law enforcement agency shall serve a copy of said order on the person named respondent therein. If the order is verbal, a member of the law enforcement agency shall notify the respondent of the existence and substance thereof.

(8) The availability of an emergency protection order shall not be affected by the subject of domestic abuse leaving his or her residence to avoid such abuse.

(9) The issuance of an emergency protection order shall not be considered evidence of any wrongdoing.

(10) If three emergency protection orders are issued within a one-year period involving the same parties within the same jurisdiction, the court shall summon the parties to appear before the court at a hearing to review the circumstances giving rise to such emergency protection orders.

(11) The duties of peace officers enforcing orders issued pursuant to this section shall be in accordance with section 18-6-803.5, C.R.S., and any rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court pursuant to said section.

13-14-104. Foreign protection orders. (1) Definitions. As used in this section, “foreign protection order” means any protection or restraining order, injunction, or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts or harassment against, or contact or communication with or physical proximity to, another person, including temporary or final orders, other than child support or custody orders, issued by a civil or criminal court of another state, an Indian tribe, or a U.S. territory or commonwealth.

(2) Full faith and credit. A foreign protection order shall be accorded full faith and credit by the courts of this state as if the order were an order of this state, notwithstanding section 14-11-101, C.R.S., and article 53 of this title, if the order meets all of the following conditions:

(a) The foreign protection order was obtained after providing the person against whom the protection order was sought reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard sufficient to protect his or her due process rights. If the foreign protection order is an ex parte injunction or order, the person against whom it was obtained shall have been given notice and an opportunity to be heard within a reasonable time after the order was issued sufficient to protect his or her due process rights.

(b) The court that issued the order had jurisdiction over the parties and over the subject matter;

(c) The order complies with section 13-14-102 (18).

(3) Process. A person entitled to protection under a foreign protection order may, but shall not be required to, file such order in the district or county court by filing with such court a certified copy of such order, which shall be entered into the central registry of protection orders created in section 18-6-803.7, C.R.S. The certified order shall be accompanied by an affidavit in which the protected person affirms to the best of his or her knowledge that the order has not been changed or modified since it was issued. There shall be no filing fee charged. It is the responsibility of the protected person to notify the court if the protection order is subsequently modified.

(4) Enforcement. Filing of the foreign protection order in the central registry or otherwise domesticating or registering the order pursuant to article 53 of this title or section 14-11-101, C.R.S., is not a prerequisite to enforcement of the foreign protection order. A peace officer shall presume the validity of, and enforce in accordance with the provisions of this article, a foreign protection order that appears to be an authentic court order that has been provided to the peace officer by any source. If the protected party does not have a copy of the foreign protection order on his or her person and the peace officer determines that a protection order exists through the central registry, the national crime information center as described in 28 U.S.C. sec. 534, or communication with appropriate authorities, the peace officer shall enforce the order. A peace officer may rely upon the statement of any person protected by a foreign protection order that it remains in effect. A peace officer who is acting in good faith when enforcing a foreign protection order shall not be civilly or criminally liable pursuant to section 18-6-803.5 (5), C.R.S.

ARTICLE 15

Change of Name

13-15-101.	Petition - proceedings.	13-15-102.	Publication of change.
------------	-------------------------	------------	------------------------

13-15-101. Petition - proceedings. (1) (a) (I) Every person desiring to change his or her name may present a petition to that effect, verified by affidavit, to the district or county court in the county of the petitioner's residence, except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a.5) of this subsection (1). The petition shall include:

- (A) The petitioner's full name;
- (B) The new name desired; and
- (C) A concise statement of the reason for the name change.

(II) If the petitioner is over fourteen years of age, the petition shall also include the results of a certified, fingerprint-based criminal history record check conducted pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1) within ninety days prior to the date of the filing of the petition.

(III) If the petitioner is under nineteen years of age, the petition shall also include the caption of any proceeding in which a court has ordered child support, allocation of parental responsibilities, or parenting time regarding the petitioner.

(a.5) If the petitioner is under nineteen years of age and is the subject of an action concerning child support, allocation of parental responsibilities, or parenting time, then the petition for name change shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction over the action concerning child support, allocation of parental responsibilities, or parenting time.

(b) The fingerprint-based criminal history check shall include arrests, conviction records, any criminal dispositions reflected in the Colorado bureau of investigation and federal bureau of investigation records, and fingerprint processing by the federal bureau of investigation and the Colorado bureau of investigation. The petitioner shall be responsible for providing certified copies of any criminal dispositions that are not reflected in the Colorado bureau of investigation or federal bureau of investigation records and any other dispositions which are unknown.

(c) The petitioner shall be responsible for supplying fingerprints to the Colorado bureau of investigation and to the federal bureau of investigation and for obtaining the fingerprint-based criminal history record checks. The petitioner shall also be responsible for the cost of such checks.

(1.5) Unless the petitioner has shown good cause why the publication provisions of section 13-15-102 should not apply, the court shall order the petitioner to publish notice as provided in section 13-15-102 and file proof of the publication with the court.

(2) (a) Upon receipt of proof of publication or upon an order of the court stating that publication is not required, the court, except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection (2), shall order the name change to be made and spread upon the records of the court in proper form if the court is satisfied that the desired change would be proper and not detrimental to the interests of any other person.

(b) The court shall not grant a petition for a name change if the court finds the petitioner was previously convicted of a felony or adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for an offense that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult in this state or any other state or under federal law. If the certified, fingerprint-based criminal history check filed with the petition reflects a criminal charge for which there is no disposition shown, the court may grant the name change after affirmation in open court by the petitioner, or submission of a signed affidavit by the petitioner, stating he or she has not been convicted of a felony in this state or any other state or under federal law.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, the court may grant a petition for a change of name of a petitioner who was previously convicted of a felony in this state or any other state or adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for an offense that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult in this state or any other state or under federal law if the court finds that the petitioner must have a legal name change in order to be issued in that name a driver's license or identification card from the department of revenue and if all of the following requirements are met:

(a) The petitioner meets all of the requirements of subsections (1) and (1.5) of this section and paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section;

(b) The proposed name change is to a name under which the petitioner was convicted or adjudicated; except that, for good cause, the court may allow a change to a name other than a name under which the petitioner was convicted or adjudicated;

(c) Prior to filing the petition, the name change applicant:

(I) (A) Submits his or her fingerprints to the Colorado bureau of investigation and the federal bureau of investigation for purposes of obtaining a fingerprint-based criminal history records check along with a written request to add his or her proposed name as an alias to the name change applicant's criminal history record.

(B) The Colorado bureau of investigation is authorized to add an alias to a name change applicant's criminal history record upon request.

(II) (A) Notifies the district attorney's office in any district in which the applicant was convicted of a felony that he or she is requesting a name change pursuant to this subsection (3).

(B) If the district attorney's office has a record of any victim of the applicant's crime, the district attorney's office shall send notice of the proposed name change to the victim.

(III) If, at the time the petition is filed, the applicant is in custody of the department of corrections, under an order for probation or community corrections, or incarcerated in a county jail, the applicant provides written notice to the supervising agency that he or she is requesting a change of name under this section; and

(IV) Provides the court with a copy of his or her criminal history record from both the Colorado bureau of investigation and the federal bureau of investigation and the criminal history report from the Colorado bureau of investigation reflects the addition of the proposed changed name as an alias; and

(d) The court finds that:

(I) The name change is not for the purpose of fraud, to avoid the consequences of a criminal conviction, or to facilitate a criminal activity; and

(II) The desired name change would be proper and not detrimental to the interests of any other person.

(4) The department of revenue shall not issue a driver's license or an identification card in the new name of a name change applicant unless the name change applicant submits a court order changing the applicant's name pursuant to this section.

ANNOTATION

At common law a person could adopt another name at will. In re Knight, 36 Colo. App. 187, 537 P.2d 1085 (1975).

Statutes setting forth procedures to be followed in changing a name merely provide an additional method beyond the common law for making the change. In re Knight, 36 Colo. App. 187, 537 P.2d 1085 (1975); In re Nguyen, 684 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108, 105 S. Ct. 785, 83 L. Ed.2d 779 (1985).

Trial court has the power, founded in common law, to order a change of name of a minor child in a dissolution of marriage action but court should consider those factors applicable to a statutory name change in determining whether to grant a parent's request. In re Nguyen, 684 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108, 105 S. Ct. 785, 83 L. Ed.2d 779 (1985).

Statutory change encouraged. It is more advantageous to the state to have a statutory method of changing names followed, and for that reason applications under the statute should be encouraged, and generally should be granted unless made for a wrongful or fraudulent purpose. In re Knight, 36 Colo. App. 187, 537 P.2d 1085 (1975).

Basis for denial. While a court has wide discretion in matters of a name change, it should not deny the application for a change of name as being improper unless special circumstances or facts are found to exist. Included in these would be unworthy motive, the possibility of fraud on the public, the choice of a name that is bizarre, unduly lengthy, ridiculous, or offensive to common decency and good taste, or if the interests of a wife or child of the applicant would be adversely affected thereby. In re Knight, 36 Colo. App. 187, 537 P.2d 1085 (1975).

Hearing prior to denial. Before a court denies a request for a change of name under the statute, it should conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine if good and sufficient cause exists to deny the application. In re Knight, 36 Colo. App. 187, 537 P.2d 1085 (1975).

When a child was given the noncustodial parent's surname prior to the dissolution of the parent's marriage, the noncustodial parent has a continuing interest in the minor child's use of that surname. Hamman v. County Court, 753 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1988).

But, the noncustodial parent does not necessarily have the power to prevent a name change merely by making known his objections. Hamman v. County Court, 753 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1988).

Notice requirement. Noncustodial parent, as an interested party, is entitled to reasonable notice of the filing of a petition requesting name change by the custodial parent. Hamman v. County Court, 753 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1988).

Such notice should be reasonably calculated to notify the noncustodial parent of the pending action in a time and manner which allows participation in the proceeding if the noncustodial parent wishes. Hamman v. County Court, 753 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1988).

13-15-102. Publication of change. (1) Public notice of a change of name shall be given at least three times within twenty-one days after the court orders publication pursuant to section 13-15-101 (1.5). The person changing his or her name shall cause such public notice to be given in a newspaper published in the county in which the person resides. If no newspaper is published in that county, such notice shall be published in a newspaper in such county as the court directs.

(2) Public notice of such name change through publication as required in subsection (1) of this section shall not be required if the petitioner has been:

- (a) The victim of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S.;
- (b) The victim of child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401, C.R.S.; or
- (c) The victim of domestic abuse as that term is defined in section 13-14-101 (2).

(2) In all cases in law and equity where the plaintiff, or the person for whose use an action is to be commenced, is not a resident of this state, upon motion of the defendant or any officer of the court pursuant to section 13-16-102, the court may require the nonresident plaintiff to give an instrument in writing for the payment of costs of suit as described in subsection (3) of this section; except that, to ensure that access to the courts is not unreasonably denied, a court shall not require an instrument in writing for the payment of costs of suit in excess of five thousand dollars.

(3) As used in this section and section 13-16-102, "instrument in writing" means an instrument in writing of some responsible person, being a resident of this state, to be approved by the clerk, whereby such person shall acknowledge himself or herself bound to pay, or cause to be paid, all costs which may accrue in such action either to the opposite party or to any of the officers of such courts, which instrument may be in form as follows:

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Bonds in Colorado Courts: A Primer for Practitioners", see 34 Colo. Law. 59 (March 2005).

Nonresident plaintiff in suing out a writ of error must file cost bond. A writ of error is a new suit, and before it can be prosecuted, if the plaintiff in error is a nonresident, he must file a cost bond. If he fails to do so, he has no standing in court; his case cannot be heard on the merits, if objection be made. W. Union Tel. Co. v. Graham, 1 Colo. 182 (1870); Talpey v. Doane, 2 Colo. 298 (1874).

The filing of a bond for a supersedeas cannot accomplish that purpose, or in any sense waive the necessity of filing security for costs. Filley v. Cody, 3 Colo. 221 (1877); Fifer v. Fifer, 120 Colo. 10, 206 P.2d 336 (1949).

Despite plaintiff's non-citizen status, the proper determination of her residence, which is necessary for purposes of this section, was not dependent on her immigration status but, instead, on the evaluation of her place of domicile and her subjective intent to remain in the state. Munoz-Hoyos v. de Cortez, 207 P.3d 951 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court erred in ruling that plaintiff's non-citizen status alone precluded her from qualifying as a resident for purposes of this section and in requiring her to post a cost bond on that basis. Munoz-Hoyos v. de Cortez, 207 P.3d 951 (Colo. App. 2009).

In absence of judgment for costs, surety would not be liable. The payment of all costs occasioned by the plaintiff in error without regard to the ultimate judgment of the court is secured by the cost bond. The officers of the court are protected. If there were no cost bond and the officers of the court had to rely upon the supersedeas bond for the costs made by the plaintiff in error, then in the absence of a judgment against him for cost, his security would not be liable for any. Filley v. Cody, 3 Colo. 221 (1877).

Court may order that cost bond be filed within thirty days. Ferrara v. Auric Mining Co, 20 Colo. App. 411, 79 P. 302 (1905).

Where a writ was dismissed for want of a cost bond, a new writ may be prosecuted in the same cause. W. Union Tel. Co. v. Graham, 1 Colo. 182 (1870).

A bond of a corporation which is executed by an attorney in fact, appointed by the president, is well executed. W. Union Tel. Co. v. Graham, 1 Colo. 182 (1870).

There is no statutory authority to enter a summary judgment against the surety upon a cost bond, and in the absence of such statutory authority, before any judgment could be taken against a surety upon such a bond, an opportunity must be provided said surety to assert any defense which he might have to an action seeking to enforce his liability as surety. Fifer v. Fifer, 120 Colo. 10, 206 P.2d 336 (1949).

Section does not apply to actions brought in federal court. In an action in the United States district court, defendant's motion, grounded upon this section, that plaintiff, a nonresident, be required to furnish a cost bond was denied, for the federal rules of civil procedure have repealed the conformity act, and state practice in this connection may no longer be invoked under its terms. Nat'l Distillers Prods. Corp. v. Hindech, 10 F.R.D. 229 (D. Colo. 1950).

Court has no discretion under this section, but must require security from a nonresident plaintiff. Lewis v. Keim, 883 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section 13-16-103 provides judges with the authority to waive cost requirements under this section and § 13-16-102 and, therefore, provides sufficient authority to permit a plaintiff to proceed when the plaintiff is a poor person and unable to pay costs and expenses. Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996).

Husband who sought modification of prior dissolution decree was person for whose use the action was commenced and, because he was a nonresident, trial court properly required him to post bond. In re Kronbach, 757 P.2d 175 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in Glickman v. Mesigh, 200 Colo. 320, 615 P.2d 23 (1980).

13-16-102. Motion to require cost bond. If an action described in section 13-16-101 (2) is commenced by a nonresident of this state without filing an instrument in writing, or if at any time after the commencement of any suit by a resident of this state he or she shall become nonresident, and the court is satisfied that the nonresident plaintiff is unable to pay the costs of suit, the court may, on motion of the defendant or any officer of the court, order the nonresident plaintiff, on or before the day in such order named, to give an instrument in writing for the payment of costs in the suit. To ensure that access to the courts is not unreasonably denied, a court shall not require an instrument in writing for the payment of costs of suit in excess of five thousand dollars. If the nonresident plaintiff neglects or refuses, on or before the day in such rule named, to file such instrument, the court, on motion, shall dismiss the suit.

The filing of a motion for a cost bond preserves defendant's rights to answer and prevents plaintiff from seeking default judgment. McDermett v. Rosenbaum, 13 Colo. App. 444, 58 P. 880 (1899).

Requirement of cost bond is a matter of judicial discretion as to residents. Whether or not a resident plaintiff shall be required to give security for costs is a matter in the sound discretion of the court. Knight v. Fisher, 15 Colo. 176, 25 P. 78 (1890); Ward v. Williams, 16 Colo.

86, 27 P. 247 (1891); Fleming v. Breitner, 73 Colo. 250, 215 P. 133 (1923).

Court has no discretion as to nonresidents. If any action shall be commenced by a nonresident without filing the cost bond required by § 13-6-101, the court, on motion, shall dismiss the same. This court has repeatedly held that this language is unequivocal and leaves nothing to the discretion of the court. Edgar Gold & Silver Mining Co. v. Taylor, 10 Colo. 110, 14 P. 113 (1887); Lewis v. Keim, 883 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1994).

The filing of a bond by a nonresident, after commencement of suit comes too late. Filing the bond subsequently to the commencement of the suit, and whether before or after the motion to dismiss is interposed, cannot avail the non-resident plaintiff. Sutro v. Simpson, 14 F. 370 (D. Colo. 1882); Edgar Gold & Silver Mining Co. v. Taylor, 10 Colo. 110, 14 P. 113 (1887).

Defendant waives right to cost bond when no motion made in trial court. When no motion for a cost bond is made in the trial court, the defendant's right to a cost bond is waived. Payton v. Spiesberger & Son Co., 40 Colo. 289, 90 P. 605 (1907).

For the lack of authority for clerk to demand a bond for accrued costs, see Teller v. Sievers, 20 Colo. App. 109, 77 P. 261 (1904).

Security required under this section may not be excused or deferred under § 13-16-103. Lewis v. Keim, 883 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1994) (disapproved of by supreme court in Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996)).

Inability to obtain cost bond does not equate to the neglect or refusal to pay such a bond. Lewis v. Keim, 883 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1994); Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996).

The burden is on the plaintiff to file a cost bond and failure to do so for any reason other than indigency or defendant's waiver man- dates dismissal. Hytken v. Wake, 68 P.3d 508 (Colo. App. 2002).

Section 13-16-103 provides judges with the authority to waive cost requirements under this section and § 13-16-101 and, therefore, provides sufficient authority to permit a plaintiff to proceed when the plaintiff is a poor person and unable to pay costs and expenses. Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996).

Although court improperly denied defendant's motion for filing of cost bond, order appointing receiver need not be vacated. Bank of Am. Nat. Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Denver Hotel Ass'n Ltd. P'ship, 830 P.2d 1138 (Colo. App. 1992).

Although district court erred in denying cost bond for nonresident plaintiff, such error did not require that an order for appointment of receiver be vacated; under such circumstances, remand of cause with directions to set date for the filing of cost bond was appropriate remedy. Bank of Am. Nat. Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Denver Hotel Ass'n Ltd. P'ship, 830 P.2d 1138 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-16-103. Costs of poor person. (1) If the judge or justice of any court, including the supreme court, is at any time satisfied that any person is unable to prosecute or defend any civil action or special proceeding because he is a poor person and unable to pay the costs and expenses thereof, the judge or justice, in his discretion, may permit such person to commence and prosecute or defend an action or proceeding without the payment of costs; but, in the event such person prosecutes or defends an action or proceeding successfully, there shall be a judgment entered in his favor for the amount of court costs which he would have incurred except for the provision of this section, and this judgment shall be first satisfied out of any money paid into court, and such costs shall be paid to the court before any such judgment is satisfied of record.

(2) In determining whether a plaintiff in an action brought pursuant to article 4 of title 14, C.R.S., may be permitted to proceed without the payment of costs, the court shall take into account only those assets to which the plaintiff has direct access. The court shall not consider assets which the plaintiff is unable to directly access even though the plaintiff may have an ownership interest in those assets.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Motions in Forma Pauperis: The First Step in Access to Justice", see 28 Colo. Law. 29 (April 1999).

This section requires a judicial officer of any court, trial or appellate, to permit an indigent plaintiff to exercise the statutory right to appeal without the payment of costs. Bell v. Simpson, 918 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1996).

The plain language of subsection (1) requires a judicial officer of any court, trial or appellate, to permit an indigent plaintiff to exercise the right of appeal without payment of costs, and district court erred in dismissing plaintiff's appeal for failure to post an appeal bond in the amount of $250 ordered by the county court at the same time it found that he was indigent. Rodden v. Colo. State Penitentiary, 52 P.3d 223 (Colo. 2002).

The sole and only purpose of this section is to aid the indigent litigant in getting into court in effect, opening the courts of justice to the poor person. Alvarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

This section aids in administering justice "without sale". Alvarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

To be entitled to a waiver of "costs", the litigant must not only be "a poor person" who is not able to pay the costs, but also is unable to pay the expenses of the civil action or proceeding. Alvarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

The inability to pay expenses is, in effect, a test of indigency under this section. Alvarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

"In forma pauperis". Although this section does not use the term "in forma pauperis", this phrase is commonly employed to describe the petition for waiver of costs authorized by this section. Cook v. District Court ex rel. County of Weld, 670 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1983).

Whether payment of costs may be deferred is a matter of judicial discretion. From an analysis of this section it appears that, in the first instance, whether a litigant may commence or defend an action or proceeding without the payment of costs rests within the sound judicial discretion of the judge. Alvarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970); Medina v. District Court, 177 Colo. 185, 493 P.2d 367 (1972); Collins v. Jaquez, 15 P.3d 299 (Colo. App. 2000).

Judge's discretion in reviewing petition to commence without payment of costs. In the absence of factors such as bad faith or a plainly frivolous claim, the general assembly intended that the judge's discretion in reviewing a petition to commence and prosecute an action without payment of costs be limited to determining whether the petitioning party has the financial resources to pay the costs and expenses incident to the litigation. Cook v. District Court ex rel. County of Weld, 670 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1983).

Where plaintiff acted promptly to submit his amended in forma pauperis (IFP) motion, the granting of the amended motion should relate back to the filing of the original IFP motion. Fraser v. Colo. Bd. of Parole, 931 P.2d 560 (Colo. App. 1996).

In determining whether a prisoner may proceed under this section without payment of costs, the court may consider the person's complete financial condition, including the timing and nature of the prisoner's spending in the weeks immediately preceding commencement of the action. Vance v. District Ct. of Fremont County, 908 P.2d 1189 (Colo. App. 1995).

But a prisoner need not be destitute to proceed without payment of costs, nor must a prisoner develop a savings plan to provide for the possibility that he or she may want to file an action while incarcerated. Prisoners need not deprive themselves of the small amenities that they are allowed to acquire in order to qualify to proceed without payment of costs. Vance v. District Ct. of Fremont County, 908 P.2d 1189 (Colo. App. 1995).

Court must abuse discretion to reverse its order. To reverse an order denying such a request to proceed in forma pauperis, the court must have "abused its discretion". Medina v. District Court, 177 Colo. 185, 493 P.2d 367 (1972).

Finding by trial court of nonindigency not supported by record. Medina v. District Court, 177 Colo. 185, 493 P.2d 367 (1972).

This section does not apply to appeals from justice to county courts. Spain v. Murry, 77 Colo. 197, 235 P. 338 (1925).

Nor does it apply to the prosecution of writs of error. In Ferrara v. Auric Mining Co. (20 Colo. App. 411, 79 P. 302 (1905)) it is stated that the rulings of the supreme court are to the effect that this section does not apply to the prosecution of writs of error. Spain v. Murry, 77 Colo. 197, 235 P. 338 (1925).

The court is not confined to any particular stage in the progress of a case, after it is instituted, either before or after the trial is begun, in granting this permission; and certainly in the absence of any showing of an abuse by the trial court of its discretion under this section, or of injury or prejudice to the defendant, neither of which is made to appear in this case, a court of review will not interfere. Peck v. Farnham, 24 Colo. 141, 49 P. 364 (1897).

Security required under § 13-16-102 may not be excused or deferred under this section. Lewis v. Keim, 883 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1994) (disapproved of by supreme court in Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996)).

This section provides judges with the authority to waive cost requirements under §§ 13-16-101 and 13-16-102 and, therefore, provides sufficient authority to permit a plaintiff to proceed when the plaintiff is a poor person and unable to pay costs and expenses. Walcott v. District Ct., 2nd Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 163 (Colo. 1996).

II. HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS.

While habeas corpus may, of course, be found to be a civil action for procedural purposes, it does not follow that its availability in testing the state's right to detain any indigent prisoner may be subject to the payment of a filing fee. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

This section guarantees it to poor persons. The legal device existing in the state which provides this equal protection in the postconviction civil remedy of habeas corpus is contained in and governed by this section, which allows a poor person to proceed without the payment of costs in a civil action on his making a showing of poverty. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

In the administration of criminal justice the indigent must be afforded access to established channels of appellate review in such manner that he is freed from the "invidious discriminations" which attach when proceeding in penury. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

There is no higher duty than to maintain the federal writ of habeas corpus unimpaired and unsuspended save only in the cases specified in the federal constitution. When an equivalent right is granted by a state, financial hurdles must not be permitted to condition its exercise. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

Judges have restricted discretion when habeas corpus is sought. Federal constitutional standards require consideration of the "freedom writ" in a quasi-criminal light when state procedures are tested for equal protection, and the discretion normally allowed the court under this section is restricted by very tangible federal limitations. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

Courts cannot saddle defendant with costs even when habeas petition is denied. The supreme court sees no difference of substance save subtlety between the "invidious discrimination" worked by a fee imposed upon an indigent before he is allowed to petition, which he cannot pay, and a fee saddled upon him after dismissal, which he also cannot pay. Both practices are effective deterrents. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

Invidious discrimination. To fasten a financial burden only upon those unsuccessful appellants who are confined in state institutions is to make an invidious discrimination. Williams v. District Court, 160 Colo. 348, 417 P.2d 496 (1966).

III. REPORTER'S TRANSCRIPT.

Section does not give a right to a free transcript. This section does not give an individual, found to be a pauper within the meaning of the statute, a right to a trial transcript without cost in order to prosecute an appeal. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

Transcript is not, by definition, a writ, process, or proceeding. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

The fees for the preparation of a transcript by a reporter are not payable to the court and the court cannot waive them. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

This section only permits the waiver by the judge of costs chargeable by the court. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

The supreme court may find other means of affording adequate and effective appellate review to indigent defendants than through a reporter's transcript. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

Section does not violate § 6 of art. II, Colo. Const. Although this section does not require that a trial transcript without cost be provided, § 13-16-103 is not violative of § 6 of art. II, Colo. Const. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

A transcript is not an absolute necessity in the reviewing court. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

Colorado, under its rule-making power, has augmented the waiver of costs by simplifying the requirements for a record. The supreme court, consonant with the spirit of this section to ease the burden on litigants, adopted C.A.R. 10. A discussion of this rule should dispel any implications that Colorado denies an effective review of trial court judgments by not providing free reporters' transcripts. Almarez v. Carpenter, 173 Colo. 284, 477 P.2d 792 (1970).

13-16-104. When plaintiff recovers costs. If any person sues in any court of this state in any action, real, personal, or mixed, or upon any statute for any offense or wrong immediately personal to the plaintiff and recovers any debt or damages in such action, then the plaintiff or demandant shall have judgment to recover against the defendant his costs to be taxed; and the same shall be recovered, together with the debt or damages, by execution, except in the cases mentioned in this article.

ANNOTATION

The successful plaintiff is entitled to recover all costs. Wallace Plumbing Co. v. Dillon, 73 Colo. 10, 213 P. 130 (1922).

The party to be taxed must be interested in suit and before court. This section does not authorize the court to render judgment against one not interested in the litigation or the subject matter thereof, not a party to the suit and not before the court. Downs v. Reno, 53 Colo. 217, 124 P. 582 (1912).

A party who challenges the necessity and reasonableness of expert witness fees and expenses is entitled to an evidentiary hearing. Fed. Ins. Co. v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 961 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1997).

A party is entitled to have the trial court make findings sufficient to disclose the basis for its decision to award costs and to support the amount awarded. Fed. Ins. Co. v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 961 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1997).

Where there is more than one trial, he is entitled to recover costs for all the trials. Wallace Plumbing Co. v. Dillon, 73 Colo. 10, 213 P. 130 (1922).

Costs of a prior mistrial. The provisions of this section, that the prevailing party shall recover his costs to be taxed, authorize him to recover all his costs in the action, including those of a prior mistrial, as well as those of the last trial; and a defeated party who would obtain a new trial must first pay the costs of the prevailing party at a mistrial, as well as all other necessary costs he has incurred in the action. Shreve v. Cheesman, 69 F. 785 (8th Cir. 1895).

If the defendant prevails, costs in one court may be set off against those in the other. Where a judgment is reversed on review and the cause remanded for a new trial, the plaintiff in error is entitled to costs in the appellate court; and where the defendant in error thereafter prevails in the trial court, the costs in one court may be set off against those in the other. Wallace Plumbing Co. v. Dillon, 73 Colo. 10, 213 P. 130 (1922).

Plaintiff properly charged with costs where cross-complainant recovers judgment. Where a complaint was dismissed and the plaintiff objected to the dismissal of the case, but insisted on a trial on the defendant's cross-complaint and the replication, and the cross-complainant recovered judgment, the plaintiff was properly charged with the costs. Cone v. Montgomery, 25 Colo. 277, 53 P. 1052 (1898).

Successful plaintiff in error may recover cost of transcript of record. The long practice of the supreme court should not lightly be changed, and amounts to a construction of the statutes, and that thereunder the successful plaintiff in error may recover any costs properly taxable. It is claimed that the transcript of record is not a proper matter to be taxed, but what has been said above shows that we must regard it as proper. It has always been customary to tax it. Antero & Lost Park Reservoir Co. v. Lowe, 70 Colo. 467, 203 P. 265 (1921).

The bill of exceptions. For some years the bill of exceptions was not separately taxed but was included with the transcript of record, and in Phillips v. Corbin (25 Colo. 567, 56 P. 180 (1898)) a bill of costs including the costs for the transcript of the bill of exceptions, the original of which bill and not a transcript was sent to this court, was expressly approved. We cannot sustain this practice, since it is supported by no statute or rule and cannot, therefore, allow the costs of the bill of exceptions. Antero & Lost Park Reservoir Co. v. Lowe, 70 Colo. 467, 203 P. 265 (1921).

Costs in annexation proceedings in the lower court are not allowed under this section. Phillips v. Corbin, 25 Colo. 567, 56 P. 180 (1898).

This section is expressly limited to costs arising out of court actions, and it has no application to special proceedings before any boards, bureaus, or commissions unless expressly authorized by the creative act. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 116 Colo. 58, 178 P.2d 426 (1947).

Costs rarely taxed against a public officer. In the discharge of a duty imposed upon him by law, costs are rarely, if ever, taxed against a public officer. Witter v. Whipple, 26 Colo. 1, 55 P. 1081 (1899).

No costs can be taxed in the lower court against the secretary of state in a proceeding to require him to publish a list of nominees on the official ballot, and the same applies to the cost of proceeding in the supreme court where the secretary of state acted in good faith. Witter v. Whipple, 26 Colo. 1, 55 P. 1081 (1899).

An award of costs is proper against a municipal corporation. Kussman v. City & County of Denver, 671 P.2d 1000 (Colo. App. 1983).

Right of a plaintiff to select the forum for a claim less than $5,000 is not conditioned by constitution or by statute; rather, the general assembly has seen fit to permit a claimant to file such actions in district court unconstrained by considerations of whether the county court is an adequate forum for just resolution of the complaint and of any increased costs to the public incident to the district court adjudicative process. Cook v. District Court ex rel. County of Weld, 670 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1983).

Expert witness fees are recoverable as costs to prevailing parties. Graefe & Graefe v. Beaver Mesa Exploration, 695 P.2d 767 (Colo. App. 1984).

Plaintiff not entitled to costs against state pursuant to this section because there is no express authorization allowing costs to be assessed against the state. McFarland v. Gunter, 829 P.2d 510 (Colo. App. 1992); Smith v. Furlong, 976 P.2d 889 (Colo. App. 1999); Rocky Mtn. Animal Def. v. Div. of Wildlife, 100 P.3d 508 (Colo. App. 2004).

The language of § 13-16-122 describing allowable costs does not negate the mandatory provisions of this section by allowing the court to refuse all costs. Nat'l Canada Corp. v. Dikeou, 868 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1993).

A prevailing party entitled to costs should be identified by focusing on the countervailing claims and defenses asserted by the litigants and not on incidental independent factors that may affect the ultimate monetary judgement. The trial court erred by considering non-collateral source receipts in determining if real estate purchasers were prevailing parties entitled to costs. Frost v. Schroeder & Co., Inc., 876 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1994).

Determining a plaintiff to be a prevailing party on the basis of nominal damages when the defendant recovers more in damages than the nominal damages would be abuse of discretion. Plaintiff sought nominal damages and subsequent determination as the prevailing party, which carries with it an entitlement to costs. However, such determination on the basis of nominal damages would be an abuse of discretion by the court, since the nominal damages of one dollar would have been less than the $966,178 awarded to the defendant on a counterclaim, and thus the defendant would be determined the prevailing party using a "net judgment" analysis. City of Westminster v. Centric-Jones Constructors, 100 P.3d 472 (Colo. App. 2003).

13-16-105. When defendant recovers costs. If any person sues in any court of record in this state in any action wherein the plaintiff or demandant might have costs in case judgment is given for him and he is nonprossed, suffers a discontinuance, is nonsuited after appearance of the defendant, or a verdict is passed against him, then the defendant shall have judgment to recover his costs against the plaintiff, except against executors or administrators prosecuting in the right of their testator or intestate, or demandant, to be taxed; and the same shall be recovered of the plaintiff or demandant, by like process as the plaintiff or demandant might have had against the defendant, in case judgment has been given for the plaintiff or demandant.

ANNOTATION

Section 13-64-205 (1)(b) does not preclude or affect a prevailing defendant's right to recover costs and does not imply a repeal of this section. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

The trial court's right to allocate costs between defendants is discretionary. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in making the award of costs against the defendants joint and several where one of the defendants is an individual and the other is a conference of churches. Winkler v. Rocky Mountain Conference, 923 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1995).

Even though the imposition of costs is required by this section, the apportionment of costs among multiple defendants is not prescribed. It remains at the discretion of the court. Bohrer v. DeHart, 943 P.2d 1220 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other grounds, 961 P.2d 472 (Colo. 1998).

An award of costs is not prohibited under C.R.C.P. 54 (d), even if a plaintiff is not entitled to costs under this section. Weeks v. City of Colo. Springs, 928 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1996).

This statute and C.R.C.P. 54(d) are modified by § 13-17-202 (1)(a)(II), which does not allow a party who rejects a settlement offer and recovers less at trial to recover his or her costs, even though that party is determined to be the prevailing party. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999).

Plaintiff entitled to recover costs for settlement conference and trial transcript if the court made either necessary for litigation. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd on other grounds, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

Offer of settlement as to "all claims" unambiguously includes attorney fees and costs if the only claim for attorney fees and costs appears in the complaint. The offer of settlement need not explicitly reference attorney fees or costs. Bumbal v. Smith, 165 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2007).

A party challenging the reasonableness of expert fees is entitled to a hearing on the issue. Dunlap v. Long, 902 P.2d 446 (Colo. App. 1995).

Whether to award costs and what amount to award are decisions within the sound discretion of the trial court. Its ruling will not be reversed on appeal without clear abuse of discretion. Wark v. McClellan, 68 P.3d 574 (Colo. App. 2003).

Costs of third-party defendant properly divided between plaintiff and defendant or borne by two defendants when both had claims against third-party defendant since dismissal of the claims made third-party defendant the prevailing party against both. Cobai v. Young, 679 P.2d 121 (Colo. App. 1984); Poole v. Estate of Collins, 728 P.2d 741 (Colo. App. 1986).

Court construed the Health Care Availability Act in harmony with this section and C.R.C.P. 54(d) to allow a prevailing defendant to recover costs in a medical negligence action. Mullins v. Kessler, 83 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in Survey Eng'rs, Inc. v. Zoline Found., 193 Colo. 488, 568 P.2d 436 (1977); Romero v. Rossmiller, 43 Colo. App. 215, 603 P.2d 964 (1979); Gilmore v. Rubeck, 708 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1985); Bowers v. Loveland Pub. Co., 773 P.2d 595 (Colo. App. 1988).

ANNOTATION

Where a case is remanded for further proceedings by the Colorado Court of Appeals, an award of costs pursuant to this section is inappropriate. Dalton v. Miller, 984 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1999).

13-16-110. When several defendants. Where several persons are made defendants to any action of trespass, assault, false imprisonment, detinue, replevin, trover, or ejectment, and any one or more of them are upon trial acquitted by verdict, every person so acquitted shall recover his costs of suit in like manner as if such verdict or acquittal had been given in favor of the defendant.

ANNOTATION

The word "shall" in this section evinces a legislative intent that the prevailing party in a C.R.C.P. 106 (a)(4) action must be awarded reasonable costs. Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

Section allows a prevailing plaintiff in a C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) action to recover costs against the state, its officers, or agencies. Branch v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 89 P.3d 496 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section does not require an award of costs if a party achieves mixed success in a

C.R.C.P. 106 (a)(4) action involving multiple claims or issues. Any other reading would require a court to ignore §§ 13-16-108 and 13-16-109 and established case law that provides the court discretion to award costs if a party achieves some success when several matters are pleaded. Phillips v. Watkins, 166 P.3d 197 (Colo. App. 2007).

13-16-112. Number of witness fees taxed. In no case in the district court shall the fees of more than four witnesses be taxed against the party against whom judgment is given for costs, unless the court certifies on its minutes that more than four witnesses were really necessary, in which case the clerk shall tax the costs of as many witnesses as the court so certifies.

ANNOTATION

The section is confined to civil cases, and it is not the intention of the general assembly to extend it to criminal proceedings. Had it been thought necessary and proper, it would have been embraced in the criminal code. Parker v. People, 7 Colo. App. 56, 42 P. 172 (1895).

Hearing upon remand considered separate hearing. Under this section, a hearing held after remand was a separate hearing, and plaintiff would be entitled to use such witnesses as may be considered necessary by him to present his evidence, subject to the restriction contained in this section. Yeager Garden Acres, Inc. v. Summit Constr. Co., 32 Colo. App. 242, 513 P.2d 458 (1973).

Applied in Denver Urban Renewal Auth. v. Hayutin, 40 Colo. App. 559, 583 P.2d 296 (1978).

13-16-113. Costs upon dismissal or summary judgment. (1) In all cases where any action is dismissed for irregularity, or is nonprossed or nonsuited by reason that the plaintiff neglects to prosecute the same, the defendant shall have judgment for his costs.

(2) In all actions brought as a result of a death or an injury to person or property occasioned by the tort of any other person, where any such action is dismissed prior to trial under rule 12 (b) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, the defendant shall have judgment for his costs. This subsection (2) shall not apply if a motion under rule 12 (b) (5) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure is treated as a motion for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in rule 56 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

13-16-114. Costs in equity. Upon the complainant dismissing his bill in equity or the defendant dismissing the same for want of prosecution, the defendant shall recover against the complainant full costs; and, in all other cases in equity not otherwise directed by law, it is in the discretion of the court to award costs or not.

ANNOTATION

In an equity case the taxation of costs ordinarily rests in the sound discretion of the court, and its action in assessing the fees of expert witnesses as a part of the costs will not be disturbed on review where no abuse of discretion appears. Union Exploration Co. v. Moffat Tunnel Imp. Dist., 104 Colo. 109, 89 P.2d 257 (1939).

13-16-115. In suit for use of another. When any suit is commenced in the name of one person to the use of another, the person to whose use the action is brought shall be held liable and bound for the payment of all costs which the plaintiff may be adjudged or bound to pay, to be recovered by civil action.

Costs in adverse suit. In all cases where any person makes an application for a patent to any lode, claim, placer claim, millsite, or other mining property under the mining laws of the United States, and any other person claiming adversely to such applicant files an adverse claim in the proper land office or brings a suit for the purpose of determining the title, or right of possession, to such mining property, or any part thereof, if such adverse claimant, being plaintiff in such suit, prevails, so as to recover costs therein, he shall also recover and be entitled to tax as a part of his said costs all disbursements and expense necessarily incurred and paid by him for plats, abstracts, and copies of papers filed in said land office with his adverse claim, and also a reasonable counsel fee, not exceeding fifty dollars in any case, for the expense of preparing his said adverse claim.

verse, in accordance with a stipulation between the parties made before trial, the sums thus included in the judgment were a part of the judgment and not costs. Hiwassee Gold Mining Co. v. Hotchkiss Mt. Mining & Reduction Co., 16 Colo. App. 22, 63 P. 708 (1901).

No discretionary authority in clerk to determine attorney fees and expert witness fees. Discretion is a judicial function not properly delegable to the clerk of court. Davis v. Bruton, 797 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1990).

13-16-119. Costs retaxed - forfeit by clerk. If any person feels aggrieved by the taxation of any bill of costs, he may apply to the court to have the same retaxed, and, if it appears that the party aggrieved has paid any higher charge than by law is allowed, the court may order that the clerk forfeit all fees allowed to him for taxation and pay to the party aggrieved the whole amount which he has paid by reason of the allowing of any unlawful charge.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Bill of Costs", see 25 Colo. Law. 71 (November 1996).

The awarding of costs is at the discretion of the trial court. Mem'l Gardens, Inc. v. Olympian Sales & Mgt. Consultants, Inc., 661 P.2d 296 (Colo. App. 1982).

An award of costs lies within the discretion of the trial court, subject to the parameters of this section; however, the awarding of expert witness fees is not without limits but is circumscribed by the rule of reason, viz., sound judicial discretion. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

Whether to award expert witness fees and the amount, if any, to be awarded are matters within the sound discretion of the trial court. Only reasonable expert witness fees may be awarded. Steele v. Law, 78 P.3d 1124 (Colo. App. 2003).

Subject to the limitations set forth in this section, an award of costs lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Rossmiller v. Romero, 625 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1981); Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

As long as the costs incurred are incurred solely for the benefit of the litigation and are not commingled with any of the general costs of doing business or the costs of other litigation, they cannot properly be termed overhead and may be included as costs under this section. Harvey v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 983 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Slack v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 5 P.3d 280 (Colo. 2000).

Trial court abused its discretion in awarding plaintiff costs for a client fee related to contempt order because the affidavit submitted for recovery of the fee failed to establish that it was incurred solely for the related litigation. At least some portion of the fee was for general business costs; therefore, the fee is not recoverable. Mad- ison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Cost of preparing trial transcript recoverable under subsection (1)(d) where transcript was obtained for use in the case. By stipulating that the court determine liability based upon the trial transcripts, the parties reduced the costs of litigation by avoiding a retrial. The court needed the trial transcript, however, to consider all the testimony. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd on other grounds, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

Although the expenses of taking a deposition are generally not allowed as items of costs, subsection (1)(g) permits the award of the "costs of taking depositions for the perpetuation of testimony". Since the deposition transcript was used in lieu of testimony at trial to resolve the disputed claims, there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in its inclusion of the costs of the deposition in defendant's bill of costs. Spencer v. United Mortg. Co., 857 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1993).

Record of trial court was not sufficient to determine which costs were allowed and whether they were reasonable and permitted by statute, thereby requiring a remand to the trial court to make findings under this section and § 13-16-112. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

The determination of whether attorney fees are costs or damages in a particular case is, by its very nature, a fact- and context-sensitive one, which rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Ferrell v. Glenwood Brokers, Ltd., 848 P.2d 936 (Colo. 1993); Double Oak Constr., L.L.C. v. Cornerstone Dev. Int'l, L.L.C., 97 P.3d 140 (Colo. App. 2003).

The list of items awardable as costs in this section is illustrative rather than exclusive. The use of the word "includes" rather than the word "means" in a regulatory definition indicates a nonexclusive list which may be enlarged upon. Cherry Creek Sch. Dist. v. Voelker, 859 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993); Am. Water Development, Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

While deposition costs for ordinary discovery purposes are not allowable, if witness dies and his deposition is listed on the trial data certificate in lieu of his testimony, this constitutes perpetuation of testimony, and costs are allowable. Schultz v. Linden-Alimak, Inc., 734 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1986); Frontier Exploration v. Am. Nat., 849 P.2d 887 (Colo. App. 1992).

Allowance of expenses in taking discovery deposition proper where the taking of the deposition and its general content are reasonably necessary for the development of the case in light of facts known to counsel at the time it was taken. Cherry Creek Sch. Dist. v. Voelker, 859 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993); Harvey v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 983 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Slack v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 5 P.3d 280 (Colo. 2000).

Including costs of medical reports was not abuse of discretion. Absent specific prohibition, trial court has discretion in awarding costs since the list of expenses that may be awarded as costs under this section is not exclusive. Church v. Am. Standard Insurance Co., 764 P.2d 405 (Colo. App. 1988).

Accrued interest on loans taken out by prevailing parties to finance their cases is not a recoverable cost as a matter of law. Catlin v. Tormey Bewley Corp., 219 P.3d 407 (Colo. App. 2009).

Denial of costs for videotaping deposition was not abuse of discretion by court. Dorrance v. Family Athletic Club, 772 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1989).

No abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of plaintiff's request for expert witness fees when plaintiff failed to provide sufficient documentation and itemization to establish her entitlement to expert witness fees since the court was under no obligation to order a costs hearing and plaintiff expressly requested the court not hold such a hearing. Steele v. Law, 78 P.3d 1124 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court has discretion to award costs, subject to this section, and award of deposition costs is within the court's discretion. Terry v. Sullivan, 58 P.3d 1098 (Colo. App. 2002).

This section does not prohibit an award of costs that includes the expenses associated with computerized legal research, but the costs must be billed separately from attorney fees, such research must have been necessary for trial preparation, and the costs requested for such research must be reasonable. Roget v. Grand Pontiac, Inc., 5 P.3d 341 (Colo. App. 1999).

District court abused its discretion in awarding full in-house photocopying expenses, all costs billed by mediator and special master, and mileage and meal expenses. There was no evidence supporting the reasonableness or necessity of the in-house photocopying or the mileage expenses; the award of the mediator's and the special master's costs contravened an agreement between the parties; and the cost of counsel's meals was not attributable to litigation — counsel would need to eat regardless of any litigation. *Valentine v. While a mandatory settlement conference is not specifically enumerated as an award-

13-16-123. Award of fees and costs to garnishee. In any action before the court in which a garnishee incurs attorney fees in excess of the cost of preparing and filing his answer, the court may order that the costs of the proceeding, mileage fees as a witness, and reasonable attorney fees be paid to the garnishee when the court finds that the bringing, maintaining, or defense of the action involving the garnishee was frivolous, groundless, or without reasonable basis. The award of costs and fees may be allocated among the parties as the court deems just.

13-16-124. Sheriff's fees charged to judicial department. Except as provided for by section 13-16-103, in any civil action in which civil process is delivered to a county or city and county sheriff by the judicial department for service of process, the court in which the civil action is pending shall assess as costs against the party or parties requesting such service to be paid to the court the fees charged by the sheriff pursuant to section 30-1-104 (1), C.R.S. No civil action may be dismissed until such costs have been paid to the court.

13-16-125. Limit on supersedeas bond. (1) In any civil action brought under any legal theory, the amount of a supersedeas bond necessary to stay execution of a judgment granting legal, equitable, or any other relief during the entire course of all appeals or discretionary reviews of the judgment by all appellate courts shall be set in accordance with applicable law; except that the total amount of the supersedeas bonds that are required collectively of all appellants during the appeal of a civil action may not exceed twenty-five million dollars in the aggregate, regardless of the amount of the judgment that is appealed.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, if an appellee proves by a preponderance of the evidence that an appellant who has posted a supersedeas bond is intentionally dissipating or diverting assets outside the ordinary course of its business for the purpose of avoiding payment of the judgment, a court may enter orders that are necessary to protect the appellee or that require the appellant to post a supersedeas bond in an amount up to and including the total amount of the judgment that is appealed.

FRIVOLOUS, GROUNDLESS, OR VEXATIOUS ACTIONS

13-17-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly recognizes that courts of record of this state have become increasingly burdened with litigation which is straining the judicial system and interfering with the effective administration of civil justice. In response to this problem, the general assembly hereby sets forth provisions for the recovery of attorney fees in courts of record when the bringing or defense of an action, or part thereof (including any claim for exemplary damages), is determined to have been substantially frivolous, substantially groundless, or substantially vexatious. All courts shall liberally construe the provisions of this article to effectuate substantial justice and comply with the intent set forth in this section.

Suit involving money damages. Although the primary relief sought by the plaintiff was for specific performance of a contract of purchase, the defendant's counterclaim sought damages for breach of contract. Thus, even though the plaintiff's claim alone would not have supported an award for attorney fees, the defendant's counterclaim for damages clearly brought the suit within the ambit of the statute. Ault Aerial Applicators, Inc. v. Irvine, 684 P.2d 949 (Colo. App. 1984).

Post-dissolution decree proceedings were groundless for lack of jurisdiction. It would be inequitable to require divorced husband to pay wife's fees for legal services when such services should not have been performed for lack of jurisdiction over the defendants against whom relief was sought. In re Noon, 735 P.2d 884 (Colo. App. 1986).

A trial court retains jurisdiction over a motion for sanctions, even if jurisdiction has not been reserved in a stipulated motion for dismissal, because such jurisdiction is incorporated by statute in this section. Buckhannon v. U.S. West Commc'ns, 928 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1996).

A good faith presentation of a legal theory which is arguably meritorious is sufficient to avoid an award of attorney fees. SaBell's, Inc. v. City of Golden, 832 P.2d 974 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

13-17-102. Attorney fees - definitions. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, in any civil action of any nature commenced or appealed in any court of record in this state, the court may award, except as this article otherwise provides, as part of its judgment and in addition to any costs otherwise assessed, reasonable attorney fees.

(2) Subject to the limitations set forth elsewhere in this article, in any civil action of any nature commenced or appealed in any court of record in this state, the court shall award, by way of judgment or separate order, reasonable attorney fees against any attorney or party who has brought or defended a civil action, either in whole or in part, that the court determines lacked substantial justification.

(2.1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this part 1, the filing of a certificate of review pursuant to section 13-20-602 related to any licensed health care professional shall create a rebuttable presumption that the claim or action is not frivolous or groundless, but it shall not relieve the plaintiff or his attorney from ongoing obligations under rule 11 of Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(3) When a court determines that reasonable attorney fees should be assessed, it shall allocate the payment thereof among the offending attorneys and parties, jointly or severally, as it deems most just, and may charge such amount, or portion thereof, to any offending attorney or party.

(4) The court shall assess attorney fees if, upon the motion of any party or the court itself, it finds that an attorney or party brought or defended an action, or any part thereof, that lacked substantial justification or that the action, or any part thereof, was interposed for delay or harassment or if it finds that an attorney or party unnecessarily expanded the proceeding by other improper conduct, including, but not limited to, abuses of discovery procedures available under the Colorado rules of civil procedure or a designation by a defending party under section 13-21-111.5 (3) that lacked substantial justification. As used in this article, "lacked substantial justification" means substantially frivolous, substantially groundless, or substantially vexatious.

(5) No attorney fees shall be assessed if, after filing suit, a voluntary dismissal is filed as to any claim or action within a reasonable time after the attorney or party filing the dismissal knew, or reasonably should have known, that he would not prevail on said claim or action.

(6) No party who is appearing without an attorney shall be assessed attorney fees unless the court finds that the party clearly knew or reasonably should have known that his action or defense, or any part thereof, was substantially frivolous, substantially groundless, or substantially vexatious; except that this subsection (6) shall not apply to situations in which an attorney licensed to practice law in this state is appearing without an attorney, in which case, he shall be held to the standards established for attorneys elsewhere in this article.

(7) No attorney or party shall be assessed attorney fees as to any claim or defense which the court determines was asserted by said attorney or party in a good faith attempt to establish a new theory of law in Colorado.

(8) This section shall not apply to traffic offenses, matters brought under the provisions of the "Colorado Children's Code", title 19, C.R.S., or related juvenile matters, or matters involving violations of municipal ordinances.

But this test does not apply to meritorious actions that prove unsuccessful, legitimate attempts to establish a new theory of law, or good-faith efforts to extend, modify, or reverse existing law. *W. Test for "groundlessness" assumes that the proponent has a valid legal theory but can offer little or nothing in the way of evidence to support the claim. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

"Groundless and frivolous" is applied in Int'l Tech. Instruments, Inc. v. Eng'g Measurements, Inc., 678 P.2d 558 (Colo. App. 1983); Chappel v. Bonds, 677 P.2d 955 (Colo. App. 1983); E.B. Where there is a rational basis grounded in law and evidence for plaintiff's claim, the trial court's finding that these claims were frivolous is not sustainable. Hart & Trinen v. Surplus Elecs. Corp., 712 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where plaintiffs admit they have no administrative remedy because they are not taxpayers and only taxpayers have available to them the remedies provided by the tax code, they demonstrate knowledge that the bringing of the action and appeal have no rational basis in fact or law and, thus, are groundless and frivolous. Fair v. Wise, 753 P.2d 780 (Colo. App. 1987).

"Vexatious" claim is one brought or maintained in bad faith to annoy or harass and may include conduct that is arbitrary, abusive, stubbornly litigious or disrespectful of truth. Bockar v. Patterson, 899 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1994); Engel v. Engel, 902 P.2d 442 (Colo. App. 1995); O'Neill v. Simpson, 958 P.2d 1121 (Colo. 1998); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. App. 2001);

E-470 Pub. Hwy. Auth. v. Jagow, 30 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd on other grounds 49 P.3d 1151 (Colo. 2002); Mitchell v. Ryder, 104 P.3d 316 (Colo. App. 2004).

An appeal "lacks substantial justification" and is "substantially frivolous" when the appellant's brief fails to set forth, in a manner consistent with C.A.R. 28, a coherent assertion of error supported by legal authority. As a result, it is appropriate to assess attorney fees against the attorney prosecuting the appeal in this case. Castillo v. Koppes-Conway, 148 P.3d 289 (Colo. App. 2006).

Determination that an award of attorney fees based upon bringing and maintaining a frivolous or groundless claim is warranted is discretionary with the trial court, and such decision shall be upheld upon appeal if supported by the evidence. Schoonover v. Hedlund Abstract Co., Inc., 727 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1986); Romberg v. Slemon, 778 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1989); City of Littleton v. State, 832 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1991); Behr v. Burge, 940 P.2d 1084 (Colo. App. 1996); M Life Ins. Co. v. Sapers & Wallack Ins. Agency, Inc., 962 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1998); Lockett v. Garrett, 1 P.3d 206 (Colo. App. 1999); Crissey Fowler Lumber v. FCIB, 8 P.3d 531 (Colo. App. 2000); Nielson v. Scott, 53 P.3d 777 (Colo. App. 2002); Wheeler v. T.L. Roofing, Inc., 74 P.3d 499 (Colo. App. 2003).

Losing argument not necessarily groundless. A treble damages action under § 38-12-103(3)(a) could not be characterized as "frivolous" or "groundless", as used in subsection (3) of former § 13-17-101, merely because the landlord prevailed on the merits of his defense. Torres v. Portillos, 638 P.2d 274 (Colo. 1981).

Although attorney fees may be awarded in the discretion of the court, they should not be awarded merely because a party does not prevail. Torres v. Portillos, 638 P.2d 274 (Colo. 1981); State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Sanditen, 701 P.2d 876 (Colo. App. 1985); Romberg v. Slemon, 778 P.2d 315 (Colo. App. 1989).

Mere fact that appeal was taken as a matter of right, or that appellees found it necessary to cite legal authority in their answer brief, did not save an otherwise frivolous and groundless appeal. Flexisystems, Inc. v. Am. Standards Testing Bureau, Inc., 847 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1992).

A determination that plaintiffs are not entitled to relief does not make their claims frivolous. Lobato v. Taylor, 13 P.3d 821 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 71 P.3d 938 (Colo. 2002); Remote Switch Sys., Inc. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

Losing position is not necessarily groundless. Fed. Land Bank of Wichita v. Jost, 761 P.2d 270 (Colo. App. 1988).

A claim is not frivolous, groundless, or vexatious simply because it fails to survive summary judgment. The plaintiffs attempted to present evidence in good faith in support of their claims, but simply fell short of what was required to create an issue of material fact. Court did not abuse its discretion by failing to award fees. Munoz v. Measner, 247 P.3d 1031 (Colo. 2011).

Bad faith may include conduct which is arbitrary, vexatious, abusive, or stubbornly litigious and conduct aimed at unwarranted delay or disrespectful of truth and accuracy. W. United Realty, Inc. v. Isaacs, 679 P.2d 1063 (Colo. 1984); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

Section is a fee-shifting statute that authorizes the recovery of attorney fees from an opposing party when that party has pursued a substantially frivolous claim, defense, or position. E-470 Pub. Hwy. Auth. v. Revenig, 140 P.3d 227 (Colo. App. 2006).

It is well established that a federal court may consider collateral issues after an action is no longer pending, including an award of attorney fees. Although party voluntarily dismissed its case, federal district court still had jurisdiction to consider collateral issues, including an award of counsel fees. Lorillard Tobacco Co. v. Engida, 611 F.3d 1209 (10th Cir. 2010).

Award of attorney fees not mandated. Because the statute, while allowing an award of attorney fees upon a finding of frivolous claims, also grants the trial court discretion in determining whether such fees are to be awarded, the statute cannot be said to mandate an award of attorney fees. Hart & Trinen v. Surplus Elecs. Corp., 712 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1985).

Award of attorney fees in criminal cases not provided for. Neither former § 13-17-101 nor § 13-16-121 provides for an award of attorney fees in a criminal case. People v. Freeman, 196 Colo. 238, 583 P.2d 921 (1978).

Nor in garnishment. Neither former § 13-17-101 nor any other section or rule permits award of attorney fees for the garnishee in a garnishment. Commercial Claims, Ltd. v. First Nat'l Bank, 649 P.2d 736 (Colo. App. 1982).

Attorney fee requests with contingent fee arrangements should not be denied merely because such an arrangement is used. Rather, plaintiff must demonstrate the reasonableness of the fee requested, and the contingent fee arrangement is but one factor to consider in that determination. Bakehouse & Assocs., Inc. v. Wilkins, 689 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1984).

Defendant entitled to attorney fees incurred in appealing denial of attorney fees by trial court where defendant had prevailed in trial court against plaintiff who asserted frivolous and groundless claim. Carnal v. Dan Coleman, Inc., 727 P.2d 412 (Colo. App. 1986).

Failure to appeal denial of fees. Where the appellee, in the trial court, moved for and was denied an award of his attorney fees, but he did not file a notice of cross-appeal, the appellate court has no jurisdiction to consider his application for affirmative relief in excess of that afforded him by the trial court. Rocky Mt. Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Havana RV, Inc., 635 P.2d 935 (Colo. App. 1981).

Timeliness of request for attorney fees. A request is best presented to the trial court before judgment, but the request should not be denied merely because presented after judgment. Bakehouse & Assocs., Inc. v. Wilkins, 689 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1984).

Duty of trial court. When a party places a claim for attorney fees in issue, the trial court has a duty to conduct a hearing upon that claim. Zarlengo v. Farrer, 683 P.2d 1208 (Colo. App. 1984); Alessi v. Hogue, 689 P.2d 649 (Colo. App. 1984).

Defendant in legal malpractice action entitled to hearing on his or her claim for sanctions under this section and C.R.C.P. 11. When a party requests a hearing regarding the award of attorney fees and costs under this section, the trial court must conduct an evidentiary hearing. Because the trial court denied the motion without conducting a hearing on defendant's motion for sanctions, remand is required for a hearing. Brown v. Silvern, 141 P.3d 871 (Colo. App. 2005).

Determination of entitlement to attorney fees cannot be made without adequate findings of fact and conclusions of law on the issue by the trial court. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Auslaender, 745 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1987); Pedlow v. Stamp, 776 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989).

But a court need not conduct a hearing sua sponte if a hearing is not timely requested by a party. In re Aldrich, 945 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1997).

Trial court is not duty-bound to conduct a separate hearing on the issue of attorney fees before it may deny a request therefor. Hunter v. Colo. Mountain Jr. Coll., 804 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section does not require redundant hearings. It simply prohibits a trial court from awarding attorney fees in the absence of a hearing, if requested, and detailed findings of fact. Padilla v. Ghuman, 183 P.3d 653 (Colo. App. 2007).

When a trial court is requested to evaluate each claim or defense individually as substantially frivolous or groundless, it is required to do so. It cannot deny the claim "under the totality of the circumstances". Munoz v. Measner, 214 P.3d 510 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 247 P.3d 1031 (Colo. 2011).

Interrelationship of claims or defenses alone will not suffice to deny an award of attorney fees incurred relative to defense of a frivolous or groundless claim. Alessi v. Hogue, 689 P.2d 649 (Colo. App. 1984); Fountain v. Mojo, 687 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1984); Carnal v. Dan Coleman, Inc., 727 P.2d 412 (Colo. App. 1986).

For discussion of amount of attorney fee award, see Ramos v. Lamm, 539 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1982).

Trial court was without authority to award attorney fees for plaintiff's initial appeal, absent direction to do so by the appellate court, since subsection (1), consistent with C.A.R. 38(d), indicates that attorney fees incurred in an appeal may be awarded only by the court in which the appeal is brought. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

In appeals of groundless-frivolous attorney fee awards under subsection (4), the appropriate standard is to award appellate attorney fees only if that aspect of the appeal itself is frivolous. Front Range Home Enhancements, Inc. v. Stowell, 172 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2007); Padilla v. Ghuman, 183 P.3d 653 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under subsection (4), no award of attorney fees may be made based upon the motion of a nonparty. Roberts-Henry v. Richter, 802 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1990).

Subsection (4) provides for an assessment of attorney fees in favor of an improperly subpoenaed nonparty where the court finds that, with respect to the nonparty, the attorney or party had unnecessarily expanded the proceedings by abusing discovery procedures. In re Ensminger, 209 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Subsection (4) does not require a party to invoke the statute on behalf of a non-party. An improperly subpoenaed nonparty may be awarded attorney fees pursuant to this section. In re Ensminger, 209 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008) (holding contrary to Roberts-Henry v. Richter annotated above).

A request for attorney fees as a sanction for assertion of a frivolous claim may be requested by motion following entry of judgment and may even be awarded on the court's own motion. Colo. City Metro. Dist. v. Graber & Son's, Inc., 897 P.2d 874 (Colo. App. 1995).

In light of holding that the trial court erred in dismissing stepfather's petition and to the extent the award of fees was entered as a sanction, it must be set aside. In re K.M.B., 80 P.3d 914 (Colo. App. 2003).

To justify an award of attorney fees under subsection (4), a trial court must make a finding that a claim "lacked substantial justification", i.e., was substantially frivolous, substantially groundless, or substantially vexatious, and must state its reason for the finding. In re Gomez, 728 P.2d 747 (Colo. App. 1986); In re Estate of Finkelstein, 817 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1991); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001); Double Oak Constr., L.L.C. v. Cornerstone Dev. Int'l, L.L.C., 97 P.3d 140 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Substantially frivolous" or "substantially groundless" are no more demanding standards than "groundless" or "frivolous". In re Application of Talco, Ltd., 769 P.2d 468 (Colo 1989); Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991).

The "no rational argument" test of W. Realty (679 P.2d 1063 (Colo. 1984)) will be followed in determining whether the standard has been met. Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991).

A vexatious claim is one brought or maintained in bad faith to annoy or harass. A vexatious claim includes conduct that is arbitrary, stubbornly litigious, or disrespectful of truth. Bockar v. Patterson, 899 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court erred in ruling that plaintiff was stubbornly litigious merely because plaintiff disagreed with trial court's earlier rulings as to plaintiff's claims against two of three defendants in the case and where plaintiff refused to voluntarily dismiss similarly premised claims against third defendant. Plaintiff cannot be faulted for attempting to convince court to reconsider its view of the applicable law. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. Carter & Burgess, Inc., 229 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2009).

The exclusion of an expert's testimony due to lack of reliability does not subject a party to attorney fees for a groundless claim if the party reasonably relied on the expert; courts must allow parties to reasonably rely on their experts without fear of punishment for the experts' errors in judgment. In re Water Rights of Park County Sportsmen's Ranch, 105 P.3d 595 (Colo. 2005).

Aquifer storage and augmentation claims based on the natural percolation of irrigation run-off and precipitation are frivolous under § 37-92-103, because the water has not been placed in the aquifer by other than natural means. In re Water Rights of Park County Sportsmen's Ranch, 105 P.3d 595 (Colo. 2005).

The purpose of awarding attorney fees is to deter egregious conduct, and not to discourage legal theories that, while having no support in case law, nevertheless may be persuasive because of the unique character of the case. Wood Bros. Homes, Inc. v. Howard, 862 P.2d 925 (Colo. 1993); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Colo., 888 P.2d 352 (Colo. App. 1994).

When a party consistently ignored the court's admonition to not relitigate settled matters, the court was justified in finding that the party's attorney was being stubbornly litigious and the action thus lacked substantial justification. Spring Creek Ranchers Ass'n v. McNichols, 165 P.3d 244 (Colo. 2007).

Trial court may determine action was "brought or defended" in a substantially groundless manner even if dismissed on the morning of trial before the trial actually commences. Engel v. Engel, 902 P.2d 442 (Colo. App. 1995).

Claims involving novel questions of law for which no determinative authority existed at time complaint was filed were not frivolous, groundless, or vexatious. Montoya by Montoya v. Bebensee, 761 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1988); Colo. Supply Co., Inc. v. Stewart, 797 P.2d 1303 (Colo. App. 1990); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Colo., 888 P.2d 352 (Colo. App. 1994); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

Trial court erred in awarding attorney fees where municipality's defense to takings claim involved a novel question of law and municipality's conduct presented factual issues upon which reasonable triers of fact might have drawn differing inferences. The fact that the municipality did not prevail in its assertions did not make them frivolous. Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

Trial court erred in awarding attorney fees where plaintiff's claims were based largely upon federal case law and involved novel questions of law upon which there was no determinative law in this state and where the evidence presented by the plaintiff arguably supported the plaintiff's claims. Kemp v. State Bd. of Agric., 790 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1205, 111 S. Ct. 2798, 115 L. Ed.2d 972 (1990); Pedlow v. Stamp, 819 P.2d 1110 (Colo. App. 1991).

Issue of what constitutes receipt of a demand notice under § 7-113-209 (2) was a question of first impression; therefore the plaintiff's action was not "frivolous and without merit". M Life Ins. Co. v. S & W, 962 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1998).

A good faith presentation of a legal theory which is arguably meritorious is sufficient to avoid an award of attorney fees. SaBell's, Inc. v. City of Golden, 832 P.2d 974 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

In a condemnation action, good faith negotiations do not necessarily require the condemning authority to increase its offer whenever the landowner makes a counteroffer. Therefore, plaintiff failed to show bad faith and vexatious conduct on the part of the defendant and was not entitled to an award of fees under this section. City of Holyoke v. Schlachter Farms R.L.L.P., 22 P.3d 960 (Colo. App. 2001).

To the extent the provisions of subsection (7) are in conflict with the provisions of § 13-17-201 concerning a good faith tort action that is dismissed under C.R.C.P. 12(b), mandatory attorney fees award provision of § 13-17-201 controls as it is specific to such action and was enacted later in time than this section. Houdek v. Mobil Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994).

A party seeking attorney fees bears the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, his entitlement to the award. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Auslaender, 745 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1987); Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991); Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994); City of Holyoke v. Schlachter Farms R.L.L.P., 22 P.3d 960 (Colo. App. 2001).

Award of attorney fees must be made after trial court determines that all factors prove by a preponderance of the evidence that a defense was frivolous or groundless. Marinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 746 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1987).

In deciding whether to award attorney fees, a court must consider the factors set forth in § 13-17-103 (1). In re Aldrich, 945 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1997); Remote Switch Sys., Inc. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

When awarding attorney fees, a court must make findings explaining why a party's conduct was unjustified and discussing the means by which the court determined the amount of the award. Conclusory statements that a claim is frivolous, groundless, or vexatious are insufficient. In re Aldrich, 945 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1997).

Court must hold hearing and make findings on the factors prior to awarding attorney fees if requested by the party against whom fees are sought. The court erred in granting summary judgment on wife's motion for attorney fees without giving husband the opportunity to respond to wife's allegation that his position lacked substantial justification. In re Tognoni, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Award of attorney fees is discretionary with trial court, and its decision will not be disturbed on appeal if supported by the evidence. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989); Lobato v. Taylor, 13 P.3d 821 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 71 P.3d 938 (Colo. 2002); Remote Switch Sys., Inc. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

Award upheld where evidence presented to trial court with respect to father's defense against motion to change custody included findings that the mother had misled expert witnesses, that such witnesses had failed to investigate the child's circumstances with the father, that the mother had not properly assisted the child to recover from the impact of the dissolution, and that she had a scheme for obtaining custody of the child which involved actions not in the best interest of the child. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989).

Award upheld where there was record support for the trial court's determination that plaintiff's silence or refusal to properly clarify and communicate its position was “without substantial justification” and needlessly caused defendant to incur attorney fees. Front Range Home Enhancements, Inc. v. Stowell, 172 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2007).

Whether to award attorneys fees under this section is a matter ultimately committed to the discretion of the trial court. City of Holyoke v. Schlachter Farms R.L.L.P., 22 P.3d 960 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying award of attorney fees where claims made by the county did not lack substantial justification in law or in fact and were based on a rational legal argument. Bd. of County Comm’rs v. Colo., 888 P.2d 352 (Colo. App. 1994).

Findings of trial court that the plaintiff bank’s claims of fraud were not groundless or frivolous were supported by the record, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for sanctions. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff’d in part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

Findings of trial court that issues had been “fairly and vigorously litigated”, together with record demonstrating at least some evidence to support the challenged defenses, supported trial court’s denial of motion for sanctions under this section. Webster v. Boone, 992 P.2d 1183 (Colo. App. 1999).

The plaintiff’s unsuccessful claim that it was not time barred from filing a claim relied on language from the statutes as well as prior cases, and the trial court considered and denied the defendant’s motion for summary judgment three times before trial. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant attorney fees. Pat’s Constr. Serv., Inc. v. Ins. Co. of the W., 141 P.3d 885 (Colo. App. 2005).

Plaintiff’s action was not substantially frivolous, and the record provided support for trial court’s implicit determination that the action was not maintained in bad faith, therefore, the trial court’s order denying attorney fees was upheld. Berenergy Corp. v. Zab, Inc., 94 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff’d on other grounds, 136 P.3d 252 (Colo. 2006).

Trial court abused discretion in finding plaintiff’s claims frivolous where plaintiff was not successful on claims but claims were based on rational arguments. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. Carter & Burgess, Inc., 229 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2009).

The party requesting attorney fees under this section must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the claim was without substantial justification. Bd. of Comm’rs, County of Boulder v. Eason, 976 P.2d 271

(Colo. App. 1998); Remote Switch Sys., Inc. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

Decision to award attorney fees on the ground that a claim lacks substantial justification is soundly within the discretion of the trial court. Engel v. Engel, 902 P.2d 442 (Colo. App. 1995); Bd. of Comm’rs, County of Boulder v. Eason, 976 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1998); Fowler Irrevocable Trust 1992-1 v. City of Boulder, 992 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1999), aff’d in part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 17 P.3d 797 (Colo. 2001).

If a trial court’s award of attorney fees is supported by the evidence, it will not be disturbed on review. Lyons v. Teamsters Local Union No. 961, 903 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1995); Bd. of Comm’rs, County of Boulder v. Eason, 976 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1998); In re Eggert, 53 P.3d 794 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court finding that union pursued its claims “because [union president] agreed to testify”, that there was “animosity” between the parties, and that the union’s claims were “vexatious” was sufficient to award attorney fees. Lyons v. Teamsters Local Union No. 961, 903 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1995).

An award of attorney fees is supported by the record when the attorneys reviewed their records and testified, subject to cross examination, that the claimed allocations of time were fair and reasonable. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co. v. City of Golden, 113 P.3d 119 (Colo. 2005).

Trial court’s award of attorney fees cannot stand where the court failed to hold an evidentiary hearing after a party made a claim for attorney fees and a hearing was requested, because a determination of entitlement to attorney fees cannot be made without adequate findings of fact and conclusions of law. Rogers v. Westerman Farm Co., 986 P.2d 967 (Colo. App. 1998), rev’d on other grounds, 29 P.3d 887 (Colo. 2001).

The court “shall” assess attorney fees if a claim lacks substantial justification. Montrose Valley Funeral Home v. Crippin, 835 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1992).

Limitations on award of attorney fee. A trial court has the discretion to limit its award based on a finding that a party did not take all reasonable measures to extricate himself from a frivolous or groundless lawsuit at the earliest possible time. Ruffing v. Lincicome, 737 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1987).

Victim of a frivolous lawsuit has a duty to mitigate attorney fees incurred in defending the lawsuit by taking reasonable measures to extricate himself or herself from the lawsuit at the earliest possible time. Consequently, trial court should not have awarded attorney fees incurred in pursuing defendant’s counterclaims after plaintiff dismissed its original complaint against defendants. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

Award of attorney fees and costs held excessive where court found that use of two attorneys was justifiable but that the trial court had awarded fees based on hours in excess of those reported in their affidavits and where court had awarded costs for depositions taken for ordinary discovery purposes rather than perpetuation of testimony. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989); Schmidt Const. Co. v. Becker-Johnson Corp., 817 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court properly concluded that claim lacked substantial justification where court's detailed findings established that it considered the factors set forth in this section and § 13-17-103, and where court found the constitution, statutes, and case law clearly established the claims lacked "any legal foundation", that a good faith argument had not been advanced, and that the same arguments had been advanced and rejected in prior case. City of Littleton v. State, 832 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1991).

Award of attorney fees to the plaintiff was appropriate where the court found that the defense employed by the defendant lacked substantial merit and was used to delay and harass the plaintiff. Metro Nat. Bank v. Parker, 773 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1989).

Plaintiff's argument was not frivolous where she alleged the existence of an agency relationship based on a business relationship between the defendant, who was a private mortgage investor, and certain mortgage brokers. However, the argument was groundless where the only evidence of the agency was a number of similar transactions between the defendant and the brokers. Nienke v. Naiman Group, Ltd., 857 P.2d 446 (Colo. App. 1992).

Plaintiff's argument that her loan was a consumer loan was frivolous where a consumer loan must be incurred for a personal debt and the loan was incurred to pay taxes and expenses on an auto repair garage. Plaintiff's argument that the loan was personal because it was necessary to preserve the business for her son lacked a rational basis. Nienke v. Naiman Group, Ltd., 857 P.2d 446 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award of attorney fees proper where defendant has opportunity to challenge reasonableness of the amount of award. Trial court may not base award on affidavit submitted after trial. Kinsey v. Preeson, 746 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1987).

Probate court order that administrative expenses and attorney fees be paid from petitioner's distributive share upheld. The court so held because of petitioner's "relentless pursuit" of the same issues in three separate trial courts and in three appeals to this court. In re Estate of Leslie, 886 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1994).

Award of attorney fees based upon a groundless claim was appropriate where there was a lack of credible evidence presented on the essential issues of damages in negligent misrepresentation claim. Harrison v. Smith, 821 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1991).

Award of attorney fees appropriate where trial court properly determined that counterclaim for deficiency under a foreclosure lacked substantial justification because a review of the plain language of the contract would have revealed lack of support for the claim. Bernhardt v. Hemphill, 878 P.2d 107 (Colo. App. 1994).

Attorney fees and costs associated with motion to enforce injunction proper. Where injunction was no longer binding, motion to enforce injunction was substantially frivolous. Anderson v. Pursell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

Record supported trial court's award of attorney fees where the court found the defenses were substantially frivolous, groundless, and vexatious, that certain defenses were interposed for the sole purposes of delay, harassment, and to cause plaintiffs to incur legal expenses, and where defendant, even when proceeding without an attorney, clearly knew or should have known that the defenses asserted were substantially frivolous, groundless, or vexatious. Behr v. Burge, 940 P.2d 1084 (Colo. App. 1996).

Colorado Governmental Immunity Act does not shield public entities from an award for attorney fees for the filing of a frivolous claim by such entities. Colo. City Metro. Dist. v. Graber & Son's, Inc., 897 P.2d 874 (Colo. App. 1995).

County attorney is entitled to absolute immunity when filing guardianship petitions. It is illogical that an attorney could be immune from suit if brought separately under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, but not immune when fees are required in the same action under this section. In re Matter of Stepanek, 924 P.2d 1142 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 940 P.2d 364 (Colo. 1997).

The constitution, statutes, and case law clearly establish that the City of Littleton's claims lacked any legal foundation, therefore, the trial court did not err in finding that the City had not advanced a good faith argument. City of Littleton v. State, 832 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where city discovered mining waste on property during eminent domain proceeding but failed to disclose the presence of the waste or the potential remediation cost, court did not abuse discretion by finding bad faith and awarding respondent attorney fees incurred after city learned of the mining waste. City of Black Hawk v. Ficke, 215 P.3d 1129 (Colo. App. 2008).

The denial of an award of attorney fees may be grounded upon the evidence admitted at trial upon the merits absent a specific request by one of the parties for the opportunity to present further evidence on the issue. No fees may be awarded, however, without providing the party against whom such an award is sought an opportunity to present such further evidence upon the issue as such party desires. Christian v. Westmoreland, 809 P.2d 1105 (Colo. App. 1991).

Award of attorney fees is not authorized unless the claim or defense was substantially frivolous, substantially groundless, or substantially vexatious. Although this restriction is not explicitly provided for in the statute, the title, purpose, and subsequent provisions of the statute indicate the intent that it apply only to frivolous, groundless, or vexatious actions. Shaw v. Baesemann, 773 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1988).

Arbitrary, vexatious, abusive, or stubbornly litigious conduct by a pro se litigant may serve as the basis for awarding attorney fees although the action or defense is not itself frivolous or groundless. Bockar v. Patterson, 899 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1994).

Filing of certificate of review does not preclude an attorney fee award for a vexatious claim. Mitchell v. Ryder, 104 P.3d 316 (Colo. App. 2004).

Where trial court awarded attorney fees solely because party prevailed, the award was without a proper basis, and, since the legal issues involved had not been previously determined by binding precedent, the claims were not frivolous. Cohen v. Empire Cas. Co., 771 P.2d 29 (Colo. App. 1989).

The prevailing party for purposes of awarding attorney fees when a claim exists for a violation of a contractual obligation is the party in whose favor the decision or verdict on liability is rendered. Travers v. Rainey, 888 P.2d 372 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court erred in awarding fees against surety for assertion of its claim that bonds were void where such contention was a good faith presentation of a legal theory which was arguably meritorious. SaBell's, Inc. v. City of Golden, 832 P.2d 974 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Pro se litigants are entitled to protection of subsection (6) unless trial court makes an express finding that such litigants knew or reasonably should have known that their claims lacked substantial justification. Failure to respond to a motion for fees does not obviate the need for such a finding. Artes-Roy v. Lyman, 833 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1992).

A party who successfully seeks summary judgment is not necessarily entitled to attorney fees. Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991).

The fact that a claim is dismissed on summary judgment does not preclude a finding that it was substantially groundless. A claim is groundless if there is no credible evidence to support it. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. Carter & Burgess, Inc., 229 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where dismissal is reversed on appeal, award of attorney fees under this section is not appropriate. Bear Creek Dev. Corp. v. Dyer, 790 P.2d 897 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court determination of attorney fees will not be disturbed on appeal if the ruling is supported by the evidence. Nagy v. Landau, 807 P.2d 1227 (Colo. App. 1990).

The determination whether a claim or defense is groundless under this section is within the discretion of the trial court and its decision will not be disturbed on appeal if supported by the record. Travers v. Rainey, 888 P.2d 372 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court must make sufficient findings to permit meaningful appellate review of the attorney fees award. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

Award of attorney fees is appropriate after the trial court renders a decision on the merits of the case. Forness v. Blum, 796 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1990).

Fees may be awarded even when the case is dismissed shortly before trial. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

Fees may be awarded even when the trial court lacks subject matter jurisdiction. Here, the plaintiff not only lacked standing but also persisted in pursuing the claim despite knowing that it lacked admissible evidence to support the claim. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Clarion Mortgage Capital, Inc., 197 P.3d 285 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section effective in civil action commenced prior to effective date. Though dissolution of marriage proceeding was filed prior to effective date of this section, a subsequent motion to change custody of a child filed after such date which raised separate and distinct issues will be interpreted as a new civil action for the purposes of implementing the legislative intent of this section, and an award of attorney fees for costs incurred in defending the motion is proper. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section effective in any "part" of a civil action, including garnishment proceedings. Anderson Boneless Beef, Inc. v. Sunshine Health Care Ctr., Inc., 878 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1994).

Court should allocate sanctions between attorney and client according to their relative degrees of responsibility. Where attorney accepted "full responsibility" for decision to proceed with second writ of garnishment, after hearing on first such writ established the absence of a legal basis to do so, award against party jointly with attorney was erroneous. Anderson Boneless Beef, Inc. v. Sunshine Health Care Ctr., Inc., 878 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1994).

A principal may be liable for attorney fees based on its agent's litigation of a frivolous claim pursuant to the express terms of a contract. In re Water Rights of Park County Sportsmen's Ranch, 105 P.3d 595 (Colo. 2005).

Award of attorney fees was proper where party's attorney was on notice that garnishee did not hold any property of judgment debtor, although clerical error had made it appear so in a prior attempt to garnish the same account. Anderson Boneless Beef, Inc. v. Sunshine Health Care Ctr., Inc., 878 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1994).

Award of attorney fees improper where rational argument in support of the contention that exemplary damages may be awarded for bad faith breach of contract was made. William H. White Co. v. B&A Mfg. Co., 794 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where plaintiffs' counsel offered substantial legal arguments in favor of application of "discovery rule" to overcome statutory limitation of claims of sexual abuse of minors and where some of defendant's alleged acts of abuse occurred within the applicable limitation period, award of fees improper. Cassidy v. Smith, 817 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1991).

Award of attorney fees improper in abuse of process action where plaintiffs were not represented by an attorney and trial court did not make a finding that the plaintiffs knew or reasonably should have known that filing of the suit lacked substantial justification. Artes-Roy v. Lyman, 833 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where defendant made rational arguments on the law in support of its position, trial court noted that legal issue was one of first impression in Colorado, and defendant was able to cite legal authority from other jurisdictions in support of its position, award of attorney fees was improper. Eurpac Serv., Inc. v. Republic Acceptance Corp., 37 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court abused its discretion in awarding attorney fees based largely on evidence presented in a hearing to determine whether a governmental agency or employee had immunity. Such a hearing is not a substitute trial on the merits and the claimant is not required to prove the merits of its claim at such a hearing. Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. Carter & Burgess, Inc., 229 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2009).

Award of attorney fees incurred in pursuing motions for sanctions improper where the defense to the motions, while ultimately unsuccessful, had a rational basis in fact and law and did not lack substantial justification. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

Award of attorney fees and costs incurred in defending abandoned appeal of motion to enforce injunction improper. Anderson v. Purcell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

Award of attorney fees was an abuse of the trial court's discretion where the plaintiff's issue was one of first impression in Colorado, the plaintiff made a legitimate and reasoned attempt to extend the law, and the plaintiff presented some credible evidence to support her argument, even though the trial court found it was not sufficient to establish a prima facie case. Nienke v. Naiman Group, Ltd., 857 P.2d 446 (Colo. App. 1992).

An award of attorney fees under this section cannot be held to be confessed by failure to respond to a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 121. Artes-Roy v. Lyman, 833 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1992).

Active relitigation of settled issue that was clearly the law of the case is presumed to be frivolous and, thus, plaintiffs were entitled to attorney fees for frivolous second appeal of statute of limitations issue. Howard v. Wood Bros. Homes, Inc., 835 P.2d 556 (Colo. App. 1992).

When fees are awarded, the court is required to make evidentiary findings and must provide the opportunity for a hearing. Pedlow v. Stamp, 776 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989); Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991).

If plaintiff's only reference to attorney fees is in the prayer, he or she has not alleged a claim for such fees under § 13-17-101. At most, the language provides notice that such fees may be requested. Township Homeowners Ass'n v. Arapahoe Roofing, 844 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1992).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that residents' claims against a charter city were frivolous and in awarding attorney fees to the city. The trial court properly awarded attorney fees for a frivolous action where residents had no basis for a claim that the charter city's method for appointing municipal judges violated the state constitution and state statutes and no basis for a claim that the charter city violated state statutes in adopting ordinances that were of purely local concern. Artes-Roy v. City of Aspen, 856 P.2d 823 (Colo. 1993).

Trial court did not err in failing to apportion some of the fault to the attorney's clients where motion requested that sanctions be imposed only against the attorney, the attorney raised the defense that his clients should bear some of the responsibility for the plaintiffs' attorney fees, and the court implicitly rejected this argument by concluding that the attorney should be held fully accountable for his decision to ignore his obligations to opposing counsel. Parker v. Davis, 888 P.2d 324 (Colo. App. 1994).

A party is not automatically entitled to recover the expenses incurred in successfully pursuing a motion for sanctions since such fees may be awarded only if the trial court determines that the defense to the motion lacked substantial justification; however, the need for any further proof on that issue was dispensed with by defendant's judicial admissions. Parker v. Davis, 888 P.2d 324 (Colo. App. 1994).

To have standing to appeal an award of attorney fees only against a party's attorney, the attorney must file a separate appeal or be added as an appellant to the party's appeal. Anglum v. USAA Cas. Ins. Co., 166 P.3d 191 (Colo. App. 2007).

The absence of a cash outlay is insufficient cause for denying fees to an attorney simply because there has been self-representation. Reversing such an award would frustrate the intent of the general assembly in enacting this law to address the problem of increasing litigation which burdens the judicial system and interferes with the effective administration of justice and would reward plaintiffs who have filed frivolous or groundless actions. Zick v. Krob, 872 P.2d 1290 (Colo. App. 1993).

It is not appropriate for a court to award a grant of attorney fees to a pro se litigant. While there is an exception for pro se litigants who are attorneys under the appropriate circumstances, a pro se litigant who is not a licensed attorney has no "attorney fees". Smith v. Furlong, 976 P.2d 889 (Colo. App. 1999).

A pro se attorney litigant is not necessarily precluded from an attorney fee award under either this section or C.R.C.P. 107 (d)(2) in a contempt proceeding. Thus, a pro se attorney litigant may be entitled to attorney fees in a contempt proceeding if the trial court determines that an opposing party's conduct meets the requirements of the statutes in this part 1. Wimmershoff v. Finger, 74 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2003).

A pro se attorney may recover attorney fees. Giguere v. SJS Family Enters., 155 P.3d 462 (Colo. App. 2006).

The court is required to award attorney fees only if it finds that an attorney or party brought or defended an action that lacked substantial justification. United Guar. Residential Ins. Co. v. Dimmick, 916 P.2d 638 (Colo. App. 1996).

Absent a finding that the defense to a motion for fees lacks substantial justification, fees and costs may not be awarded for challenging that defense. Foxley v. Foxley, 939 P.2d 455 (Colo. App. 1996); Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

To the extent § 13-17-101 et seq. is inconsistent with the procedural safe-harbor provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 11, it is preempted. McCoy v. West, 965 F. Supp. 34 (D. Colo. 1997).

This section is preempted in a § 1983 claim brought in state court. A claim brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in state court is governed by the federal standards contained in 42 U.S.C. § 1988. State v. Golden's Concrete Co., 962 P.2d 919 (Colo. 1998).

Where plaintiff seeks attorney fees under this section and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in a declaratory judgment action the trial court's findings of due process violations as a matter of fact and as a matter of law are an insufficient basis to trigger a 42 U.S.C. § 1988 award of fees because the 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim was not properly raised or litigated during the declaratory judgment action. Bd. of Comm'rs, County of Boulder v. Eason, 976 P.2d 271 (Colo. App. 1998).

If a frivolous lawsuit includes both state law claims heard in state court proceedings and federal claims removed for federal court proceedings, a state court may award attorney fees incurred in producing work product for the federal court proceedings only to the extent that the work product was also used in the state court proceedings. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

Lack of an express grant of authority in the Colorado Rules for Magistrates to award attorney fees on review does not divest or otherwise curtail the district court's already existing authority to make such an award under this section. In re Naekel, 181 P.3d 1177 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in Moore v. DeBruine, 631 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1981); Gaddis v. McDonald, 633 P.2d 1102 (Colo. App. 1981); Herman v. Steamboat Springs Super 8 Motel, Inc., 634 P.2d 1005 (Colo. 13-17-103. Procedure for determining reasonable fee - judicial discretion. (1) In determining the amount of an attorney fee award, the court shall exercise its sound discretion. When granting an award of attorney fees, the court shall specifically set forth the reasons for said award and shall consider the following factors, among others, in determining whether to assess attorney fees and the amount of attorney fees to be assessed against any offending attorney or party:

(a) The extent of any effort made to determine the validity of any action or claim before said action or claim was asserted;

(b) The extent of any effort made after the commencement of an action to reduce the number of claims or defenses being asserted or to dismiss claims or defenses found not to be valid within an action;

(c) The availability of facts to assist a party in determining the validity of a claim or defense;

(d) The relative financial positions of the parties involved;

(e) Whether or not the action was prosecuted or defended, in whole or in part, in bad faith;

(f) Whether or not issues of fact determinative of the validity of a party's claim or defense were reasonably in conflict;

(g) The extent to which the party prevailed with respect to the amount of and number of claims in controversy;

(h) The amount and conditions of any offer of judgment or settlement as related to the amount and conditions of the ultimate relief granted by the court.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Civil Rights", which discusses the attorney fees in Ramos v. Lamm, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 71 (1985).

For discussion of amount of attorney fee award, see Ramos v. Lamm, 539 F. Supp. 730 (D. Colo. 1982) (decided under similar provisions of former § 13-17-102).

Trial court properly concluded that claim lacked substantial justification where court's detailed findings established that it considered the factors set forth in this section and § 13-17-102, and where court found the constitution, statutes, and case law clearly established the claims lacked "any legal foundation", that a good faith argument had not been advanced, and that the same arguments had been advanced and rejected in prior case. City of Littleton v. State, 832 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1991).

Attorney fees awarded from assertion of affirmative defense. Attorney fees cannot be assessed against attorney from the beginning of action solely because attorney filed the action after the expiration of the statute of limitations because statute of limitations is an affirmative defense which attorney is not required to anticipate. MacMillian v. Bruce, 900 P.2d 131 (Colo. 1995).

The requirement of this section that the court consider specified factors in determining whether to award attorney fees necessarily requires that a hearing be provided for the parties to address such factors and for the court to make an informed decision. Irwin v. Elam Const., Inc., 793 P.2d 609 (Colo. 1990).

The court is not required to make specific findings as to the factors to be determined in an order denying, rather than awarding, attorney fees. E-470 Pub. Hwy. Auth. v. Jagow, 30 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd on other grounds, 49 P.3d 1151 (Colo. 2002).

Findings not necessary when request for fees is denied. Webster v. Boone, 992 P.2d 1183 (Colo. App. 1999).

Although this section does not require a court to make a finding of fact when attorney fees are denied under § 13-17-102, C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-22 does. Stearns Mgmt. Co. v. Mo. River Servs., Inc., 70 P.3d 629 (Colo. App. 2003).

Specific factual findings on enumerated factors required only when granting an award of fees, not when denying an award. Munoz v. Measner, 247 P.3d 1031 (Colo. 2011).

Reference in subsection (7) to "a good faith attempt to establish a new theory of law" presumes that, in addition to filing a novel claim, the party will attempt to advance a plausible theory and argument for the adoption of the new legal principle; however, if a party fails to present plausible arguments in support of a novel claim, sanctions may be imposed under the statute, irrespective of the subjective state of mind of the party or the attorney at the time the claim was asserted. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court did not err in imposing sanctions under this section for fees incurred in defending plaintiff's claim where there was no legal or equitable principle that would rationally support plaintiff's claim that the law of constructive trusts should be extended to incorporate his claim. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award of attorney fees without a hearing is not proper if the reasonableness of the attorney fee award is placed in issue. City of Littleton v. State, 832 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1991).

Award of attorney fees under § 13-17-102 is discretionary with trial court, and its decision will not be disturbed on appeal if supported by the evidence. Award upheld where evidence presented to trial court with respect to father's defense against motion to change custody included findings that the mother had misled expert witnesses, that they had failed to investigate the child's circumstances with the father, that the mother had not properly assisted the child to recover from the impact of the dissolution, and that she had a scheme for obtaining custody of the child which involved actions not in the best interest of the child. Weber v. Wallace, 789 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where credible evidence existed to support plaintiff's claims but was not presented due to counsel's failure to obtain and designate witnesses upon issue of damages, court erred in including in attorney fee award those amounts attributable to the time when evidence could have been presented through proper designation of witnesses because during this interval plaintiff's claims were not groundless. Harrison v. Smith, 821 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court's findings were adequate where order indicated it properly considered evidence as to the pertinent factors under this section and findings were sufficiently explicit to permit review of its determination. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court's statement that injunction was no longer valid was sufficient for a finding that motion to enforce it was without merit and to meet requirements of this section. Anderson v. Pursell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

Attorney fee award reversed when the requisite findings required by the statute were not made. In addition, a hearing was not conducted despite the objections of the plaintiffs to the fee award. Maul v. Shaw, 843 P.2d 139 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award of reasonable attorney fees under "no fault" law. Since § 10-4-708 (1) does not provide a specific definition of "reasonable", such compensation should be determined in light of all circumstances for the time and effort reasonably expended by the prevailing party's attorney. If trial court does not make initial determination as to reasonableness of hours expended by plaintiff's counsel, the record will be insufficient for reviewing court to resolve issue of reasonableness of fees on appeal. Spensieri v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins., 804 P.2d 268 (Colo. App. 1990).

In determining whether a claim or defense is substantially frivolous or groundless, a trial court must consider the factors set forth in subsection (1) and it must specify the reasons for the award. Pedlow v. Stamp, 776 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989); Haney v. City Court, 779 P.2d 1312 (Colo. 1989); Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

Order imposing sanctions was not deficient for failure to address the factors set forth in subsection (1) and to specify the reasons for the award since none of the factors listed were placed in issue during the sanctions hearing and, consequently, the trial court was under no obligation to issue specific findings and since the order was sufficiently explicit to permit appellate review of the justification for the award. Parker v. Davis, 888 P.2d 324 (Colo. App. 1994).

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur cannot be used to avoid the requirements of this section, at least when there is no evidence or inference that the defendant had any control over the instrumentality causing the injury. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

Effectively abandoning a claim by not pursuing it through trial is insufficient to constitute an effort to reduce the number of claims being asserted under subsection (1)(b). Ranta Constr., Inc. v. Anderson, 190 P.3d 835 (Colo. App. 2008).

Plaintiffs did not have standing to challenge an award of attorney fees entered pursuant to this section against plaintiffs' counsel. Appeal properly dismissed where counsel had not filed a separate notice of appeal or added his name as an appellant to the appeal. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998).

ATTORNEY FEES IN CIVIL ACTIONS IN GENERAL

13-17-201. Award of reasonable attorney fees in certain cases. In all actions brought as a result of a death or an injury to person or property occasioned by the tort of any other person, where any such action is dismissed on motion of the defendant prior to trial under rule 12 (b) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, such defendant shall have judgment for his reasonable attorney fees in defending the action. This section shall not apply if a motion under rule 12 (b) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure is treated as a motion for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in rule 56 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "1988 Update on Colorado Tort Reform Legislation — Part II", see 17 Colo. Law. 1949 (1988). For article, "Recent Developments in Governmental Immunity: Post-Trinity Broadcasting", see 25 Colo. Law. 43 (June 1996).

Purpose of section. In enacting this section, the general assembly sought to discourage and deter the institution or maintenance of unnecessary litigation involving tort claims. Employers Ins. v. RREEF USA FUND-II, 805 P.2d 1186 (Colo. App. 1991).

Section applies only to dismissal of an entire tort action, not to dismissal of a single claim. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993); Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994); Jaffe v. City & County of Denver, 15 P.3d 806 (Colo. App. 2000); Barton v. Law Offices of John W. McKendree, 126 P.3d 313 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section applies when a tort action is dismissed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b). Statute neither explicitly nor implicitly contemplates the existence of physical harm to a person or property. Houdek v. Mobil Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section applies when an action is dismissed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act (CGIA). Smith v. Town of Snowmass Vill., 919 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section applies not only to "baseless" tort claims that are dismissed under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5), but also to any tort claim dismissed under the auspices of any provision of C.R.C.P. 12. Crow v. Penrose-St. Francis Healthcare Sys., 262 P.3d 991 (Colo. App. 2011).

Section does not apply to claims that are pleaded in contract, but are dismissed pursu- ant to the CGIA because they lie in tort or could lie in tort. Courts will not read the CGIA's concern for claims that "lie or could lie in tort" into the plain language of this section. Robinson v. Colo. State Lottery Div., 179 P.3d 998 (Colo. 2008).

For purposes of applying this section, the court relies on plaintiff's characterization of the claims in the complaint and does not consider what should or might have been pled. Although the case was dismissed based on preemption after a determination that the action was grounded on federal laws, the dismissal of plaintiff's case triggered application of this section, because plaintiff's claims were pled as torts. Kennedy v. King Soopers Inc., 148 P.3d 385 (Colo. App. 2006).

Under this section, an award of attorney fees is mandatory when a trial court dismisses an action under C.R.C.P. 12(b). Barnett v. Denver Publ'g Co., 36 P.3d 145 (Colo. App. 2001); Wark v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 47 P.3d 711 (Colo. App. 2002); Wilson v. Meyer, 126 P.3d 276 (Colo. App. 2005); Kreft v. Adolph Coors Co., 170 P.3d 854 (Colo. App. 2007).

A party who successfully defends a dismissal order under C.R.C.P. 12(b) is also entitled to recover reasonable attorney fees incurred on appeal. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998); Wark v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 47 P.3d 711 (Colo. App. 2002); Wilson v. Meyer, 126 P.3d 276 (Colo. App. 2005); Estate of Harper ex rel. Al-Hamim v. Denver Health & Hosp. Auth., 140 P.3d 273 (Colo. App. 2006); Kreft v. Adolph Coors Co., 170 P.3d 854 (Colo. App. 2007); Ferrel v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 179 P.3d 178 (Colo. App. 2007); Bristol Bay Prods., LLC v. Lampack, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

This section and § 13-16-113 mandate awards of attorney fees and costs and do not permit a reduction for work that may be used in companion litigation. Crandall v. City & County of Denver, 238 P.3d 659 (Colo. 2010).

This section is applicable where both tort and non-tort claims are pled and dismissed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12. This section applies in cases where all claims, both tort and non-tort, have been dismissed on Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 grounds. Torres v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 606 F. Supp. 2d 1286 (D. Colo. 2009).

Award of attorney fees is mandatory when trial court dismisses an action under the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Ferrel v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 179 P.3d 178 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court may award attorney fees and costs to a defendant when claims are still pending as to other defendants at the time of dismissal and, thus, the entire lawsuit has not been dismissed. By using the term "defendant" in the singular, this section necessarily applies to each defendant who has an action against it dismissed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1).

Stauffer v. Stegemann, 165 P.3d 719 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendant may not recover attorney fees under this section when (1) the action includes both tort and nontort claims and (2) defendant has obtained dismissal of the tort claims, but not of the nontort claims, under C.R.C.P. 12. Sotelo v. Hutchens Trucking Co., 166 P.3d 285 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section does not apply to a § 1983 claim. Instead, 42 U.S.C. § 1988 applies, and that section does not authorize an award of fees and costs unless the claim is properly characterized as frivolous, vexatious, unreasonable, groundless, or made in bad faith. State v. Golden's Concrete Co., 962 P.2d 919 (Colo. 1998); Berg v. Shapiro, 36 P.3d 109 (Colo. App. 2001).

Although plaintiff's action should properly have been founded in tort under § 13-21-115, plaintiff's claim was, nevertheless, framed as a contract claim, and it was the purported contract claim that was dismissed. Hence, this section, which authorizes attorney fee awards when a tort claim is dismissed prior to trial, is inapplicable. Sweeney v. United Artists Theater Circuit, 119 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2005).

Contrary to plaintiff's assertion that his action was primarily a contract action, six of eight claims against defendants, and eight of 10 claims asserted, were pleaded as tort claims within the meaning of this section. Dubray v. Intertribal Bison Coop., 192 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2008).

In determining whether section applies, the court should focus on the manner in which claims are pled. Where plaintiff pled four contract claims and four tort claims, which all arose from the same nucleus of facts, and plaintiff chose to include the tort claims to obtain relief beyond what was available solely under a breach of contract theory, court did not err in determining that the section applied. Crow v. Penrose-St. Francis Healthcare Sys., 262 P.3d 991 (Colo. App. 2011).

Trial court did not err in failing to apportion attorney fees requested based on tort versus nontort claims. Even if defendants were entitled to recover fees and costs associated with dismissal of only the tort claims, apportionment would be unwarranted because the entire action was dismissed for the same reason (lack of personal jurisdiction) and defendants would have incurred the same, or nearly the same, fees had the case involved only the tort claims. Dubray v. Intertribal Bison Coop., 192 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2008).

Mandatory attorney fees award provision of this section contains no express exclusion for claims brought in a good faith attempt to establish a new rule of law. Houdek v. Mobile Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994); Tunget v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 992 P.2d 650 (Colo. App. 1999).

Attorney fees mandatory when motion to dismiss for failure to join an indispensable party granted; consideration of evidentiary matters did not convert motion to a motion for summary judgment. Lyon v. Amoco Prod. Co., 923 P.2d 350 (Colo. App. 1996).

To the extent this section and § 13-17-102 (7) are in conflict concerning a good faith tort action that is dismissed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b), this section controls as it is more specific to such action and was enacted later in time than § 13-17-102 (7). Houdek v. Mobil Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994); Hewitt v. Rice, 119 P.3d 541 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd on other grounds, 154 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2007).

By implication, this section allows a plaintiff to escape liability for attorney fees by seeking a voluntary dismissal, filing a stipulation of dismissal, or confessing to a defense motion to dismiss under C.R.C.P. 12(b); however, section is not applicable when plaintiffs seek to maintain state law claims unless and until federal court determines that a federal cause of action exists. Houdek v. Mobil Oil Corp., 879 P.2d 417 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court is not duty-bound to conduct a separate hearing on the issue of attorney fees before it may deny a request therefor. Hunter v. Colo. Mountain Jr. Coll., 804 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1990).

When fees are awarded, the court is required to make evidentiary findings and must provide the opportunity for a hearing. Pedlow v. Stamp, 776 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1989); Little v. Fellman, 837 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court did not err in treating motion to dismiss as a C.R.C.P. 56 motion for summary judgment, despite fact that no affidavits or documents outside the pleadings were presented; thus, statute permitting award of attorney fees in actions brought as a result of death or injury to person or property, where the action is dismissed on motion of the defendant prior to trial, did not apply. Willer v. City of Thornton, 817 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1991).

When a defendant has two valid defenses to a tort claim and one meets the statutory requirements for the granting of attorney fees under this section, such fees should be awarded. Because this section precludes the recovery of attorney fees whenever a motion is converted to summary judgment, a defendant who prevails on a motion to dismiss based on first amendment immunity generally may not recover attorney fees. Here, however, because there is an alternative, independent ground upon which respondent's claim may be dismissed that comes within this section, petitioner can recover his or her attorney fees. Petitioner may recover his or her attorney fees because his or her motion to dismiss respondent's claim succeeds not only on the basis of his or her first amendment defense, but also on the independent, alternative basis under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5) that respondent failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Krystkowiak v. W.O. Brisben Cos., 90 P.3d 859 (Colo. 2004).

Defendant not entitled to attorney fees where court converted C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment under C.R.C.P. 56. The fact that the court found plaintiff's allegations of willfulness and wantonness insufficient on their face to support subject matter jurisdiction under the Governmental Immunity Act does not render the dismissal one under C.R.C.P. 12(b). In deciding the question of sovereign immunity, the court necessarily construed the act and issued a legal finding that disposed of the case. That the trial court considered no matters outside the pleadings in doing so was deemed inconsequential. Zerr v. Johnson, 905 F. Supp. 872 (D. Colo. 1995).

The exception to this section's general applicability is applicable only in the case of a C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5) motion and not in the case of a C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) motion challenging the court's subject matter jurisdiction. Crow v. Penrose-St. Francis Healthcare Sys., 262 P.3d 991 (Colo. App. 2011).

C.R.C.P. 12(b) authorizes the court to consider evidence outside the pleadings without converting the motion into a summary judgment motion for motions under subsection C.R.C.P. 12(b) other than C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5). Aztec Minerals Corp. v. State, 987 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial court erred in refusing to award a defendant attorney fees because facts had to be presented and determined by the court. Under the plain language of this section, an award of attorney fees is mandatory when a trial court dismisses an action under the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Smith v. Town of Snowmass Vill., 919 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996); Villalpando v. Denver Health & Hosp. Auth., 181 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2007).

Since the court declined to grant the defendant's motion to dismiss until it heard the evidence presented at trial, this is not a situation in which a defendant delayed seeking dismissal and incurred attorney fees that a timely motion to dismiss could have avoided. Therefore, the court is right in awarding attorney fees pursuant to this section. Abrahamson v. City of Montrose, 77 P.3d 819 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section not in conflict with § 6-1-113 of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. This section applies to a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b) while § 6-1-113 allows attorney fees when claims are groundless and in bad faith or for the purpose of harassment. The provisions can stand side by side because they mandate awards in different circumstances. US Fax Law

Ctr., Inc. v. Henry Schein, Inc., 205 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2009).

This section applies only when an action is dismissed and does not apply when only a single claim is dismissed. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993); Sundheim v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Douglas County, 904 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996); Berg v. Shapiro, 36 P.3d 109 (Colo. App. 2001); U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. T2 Techs., Inc., 183 P.3d 626 (Colo. App. 2007); Hamon Contractors, Inc. v. Carter & Burgess, Inc., 229 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2009).

The defendant is not entitled to attorney fees when only a single fraud claim was dismissed under a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim of relief. First Interstate Bank v. Berenbaum, 872 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1993).

Recovery of attorney fees not limited only to fees incurred in preparing motion to dismiss. This section does not so limit an award and instead expressly authorizes "attorney fees in defending the action". Dubray v. Intertribal Bison Coop., 192 P.3d 604 (Colo. App. 2008).

Absent a finding that the defense to a motion for fees lacks substantial justification, fees and costs may not be awarded for challenging that defense. Foxley v. Foxley, 939 P.2d 455 (Colo. App. 1996).

Plaintiffs did not have standing to challenge an award of attorney fees entered pursuant to this section against plaintiffs' counsel. Appeal properly dismissed where counsel had not filed a separate notice of appeal or added his name as an appellant to the appeal. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998).

Defamation is "an injury to person or property occasioned by the tort of any other person" and therefore an award of attorney fees is appropriate under this section upon a dismissal pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b). Barnett v. Denver Publ'g Co., Inc., 36 P.3d 145 (Colo. App. 2001).

13-17-202. Award of actual costs and fees when offer of settlement was made.

(1) (a) Notwithstanding any other statute to the contrary, in any civil action of any nature commenced or appealed in any court of record in this state:

(I) If the plaintiff serves an offer of settlement in writing at any time more than fourteen days before the commencement of the trial that is rejected by the defendant, and the plaintiff recovers a final judgment in excess of the amount offered, then the plaintiff shall be awarded actual costs accruing after the offer of settlement to be paid by the defendant.

(II) If the defendant serves an offer of settlement in writing at any time more than fourteen days before the commencement of the trial that is rejected by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff does not recover a final judgment in excess of the amount offered, then the defendant shall be awarded actual costs accruing after the offer of settlement to be paid by the plaintiff. However, as provided in section 13-16-104, if the plaintiff is the prevailing party in the action, the plaintiff's final judgment shall include the amount of the plaintiff's actual costs that accrued prior to the offer of settlement.

(III) If an offer of settlement is not accepted in writing within fourteen days after service of the offer, the offer shall be deemed rejected, and the party who made the offer is not precluded from making a subsequent offer. Evidence thereof is not admissible except in a proceeding to determine costs.

(IV) If an offer of settlement is accepted in writing within fourteen days after service of the offer, the offer of settlement shall constitute a binding settlement agreement, fully enforceable by the court in which the civil action is pending.

(V) An offer of settlement under this section shall remain open for at least fourteen days from the date of service unless withdrawn by service of withdrawal of the offer of settlement.

(VI) An offer of settlement served at any time fourteen days or less before the commencement of the trial shall not be subject to this section, and evidence thereof is not admissible for any purpose.

(b) For purposes of this section, "actual costs" shall not include attorney fees but shall mean costs actually paid or owed by the party, or his or her attorneys or agents, in connection with the case, including but not limited to filing fees, subpoena fees, reasonable expert witness fees, copying costs, court reporter fees, reasonable investigative expenses and fees, reasonable travel expenses, exhibit or visual aid preparation or presentation expenses, legal research expenses, and all other similar fees and expenses.

(2) When comparing the amount of any offer of settlement to the amount of a final judgment actually awarded, any amount of the final judgment representing interest subsequent to the date of the offer in settlement shall not be considered.

(3) When the liability of one party to another has been determined by verdict or order or judgment, but the amount or extent of the liability remains to be determined by further proceedings, the party adjudged liable may make an offer of settlement, which shall have the same effect as an offer made before trial (except with respect to costs already incurred) if it is served pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

The party must request a hearing, however. Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

The plain language of subsection (1)(a) does not require an offer of settlement to contain a reference to this section and use of the term "offer of settlement", although the better practice might be to include such terms in such an offer. Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (1)(a)(III) does not require an offer to be "final" and specifically provides that an offeror is not precluded from making subsequent offers. Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

Plaintiff entitled to award of actual costs under subsection (1)(a)(I) to the extent they constitute "costs other than attorneys' fees" under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(1) and are not preempted by a federal statute such as 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and to the extent, if at all, they constitute "related non-taxable expenses" under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2). Garcia v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 209 F.3d 1170 (10th Cir. 2000).

Court may not deny costs for expert witness fees under subsection (1)(a)(II) on the basis of the credibility of the witness, but rather must evaluate the costs based on the reasonableness of the fees. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999); Paratransit Risk Retention Group Ins. Co. v. Kamins, 160 P.3d 307 (Colo. App. 2007).

The provisions of this section are mandatory and a trial court does not have discretion to refuse to award actual costs due to a party. Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

A determination under this section that the defendant is entitled to costs does not preclude an attorney fees award to plaintiff as the prevailing party. Chartier v. Weinland Homes, Inc., 25 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001).

Prevailing party is allowed to recover costs in cases where the costs are paid or advanced by an insurance company. Hale v. Erickson, 23 P.3d 1255 (Colo. App. 2001).

Subsection (1)(a)(II) does not apply to condemnation proceedings. City of Westminster v. Jefferson Center Ass'n, 958 P.2d 495 (Colo. App. 1997).

Section does not address a prevailing party who received less than its rejected offer of settlement but never rejected an offer under the statute. Therefore, plaintiff is not barred from an award of costs under this section and is entitled to an award of reasonable costs as a prevailing party pursuant to § 13-16-104 and C.R.C.P. 54(d). Hall v. Frankel, 190 P.3d 852 (Colo. App. 2008).

Recovery pursuant to this section available to extent maximum recovery allowed under § 24-10-114 not reached. Since plaintiff had recovered maximum allowable under § 24-10-114 for injury caused to child by negligence of pharmacy at state hospital, additional recovery for costs not available under this section. DeCordova v. State, 878 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1994).

Offer, which did not unequivocally exclude costs but which was “exclusive of costs”, was an offer for settlement apart or separate from costs mandated by this section. Carpentier v. Berg, 829 P.2d 507 (Colo. App. 1992); Aberle v. Clark, 916 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1995).

Offer of a total amount “inclusive of all costs and interest to date” was valid under this section. Aberle v. Clark, 916 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (3) does not require an offer of settlement to itemize separately the respective amounts being tendered for settlement of the underlying substantive claim and for costs. Aberle v. Clark, 916 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1995).

In an offer inclusive of “all costs and interest”, trial court must consider plaintiff’s asserted preoffer costs, and the reasonableness thereof in assessing an award of costs. Rubio v. Farris, 51 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 2002).

Ordinarily, a “final judgment” includes prejudgment interest but not costs. Where settlement offer did not reference, much less explicitly include, costs, the trial court erred in including plaintiff’s costs as part of the “final judgment”. Novak v. Craven, 195 P.3d 1115 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2008 amendment).

Offer of settlement as to “all claims” unambiguously includes attorney fees if the only claim for attorney fees appears in the complaint. The offer of settlement need not explicitly reference attorney fees. Bumbal v. Smith, 165 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2007).

In calculating whether a final judgment exceeds the amount of a settlement offer that did not specifically exclude costs, a trial court is to exclude post-offer attorney fees awarded as costs, but include pre-offer fees awarded as costs. Chartier v. Weinland Homes, Inc., 25 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001).

A settlement offer should be presumed to imply include the amount of any post-verdict subrogation setoff. Ferrellgas, Inc. v. Yeiser, 247 P.3d 1022 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court need only award actual costs that are reasonably incurred after rejection of settlement offer. Prior to such award, trial court must make specific finding of reasonableness of costs. Evanson v. Colo. Farm Bur. Mut. Ins. Co., 879 P.2d 402 (Colo. App. 1993).

Unreasonable costs may be disallowed by the court under subsection (1)(a)(II). Jorgensen v. Heinz, 847 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1992); Cedar Lane Invs. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 883 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1994); Underwood v. Dillon Co., 936 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1997); Salazar v. Am. Sterlizer Co., 5 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2000).

When an expert is hired to testify but is precluded from doing so because his or her testimony is ruled inadmissible, the expert’s services are not reasonably necessary to the disposition of the case, and expert fees should not be awarded. Clayton v. Snow, 131 P.3d 1202 (Colo. App. 2006).

No requirement that costs awarded relate to any particular phase of a lawsuit so long as they are incurred after the offer of settlement. Reasonable costs may include answer and jury fees and trial preparation fees of expert witnesses, even when some work of expert witnesses is performed after entry of summary judgment but before experts can be notified to stop work. Cedar Lane Invs. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 883 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1994).

The costs for a witness’s airfare could be “reasonable travel expenses” under subsection (1)(b) of this section, even if the airfare exceeds the mileage reimbursement rate provided in § 13-33-103, depending on the circumstances that led the witness to travel by air and the type of arrangements chosen. The same would be true of “gasoline money”, even if it exceeded the mileage fees provided in § 13-33-103. The trial court should make findings on the reasonableness of such costs claimed by plaintiff. Catlin v. Tormey Bewley Corp., 219 P.3d 407 (Colo. App. 2009).

Under unusual circumstances, traveling companion expenses could be awarded under this section because the expenses of a traveling companion are “similar” to “reasonable travel expenses”, and this phrase in subsection (1)(b) is not limited to such expenses of a witness. In considering such an award, a trial court should make findings regarding the need for the traveling companion’s presence, as well as the reasonableness of his or her travel arrangements. Catlin v. Tormey Bewley Corp., 219 P.3d 407 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding a defendant only a portion of the actual costs incurred where such costs could have been avoided if defendant had availed itself of the procedures that would have limited the action to the resolution of a jurisdictional issue. Smith v. Town of Snowmass Vill., 919 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996) (decided under former law).

Court may tax costs jointly and severally. It is within the court's discretion to decide how to tax the costs. Hale v. Erickson, 23 P.3d 1255 (Colo. App. 2001).

Because the court considered the plaintiff's bill of costs and amended bill of costs in awarding minimal costs, even though both the bill and amended bill were filed more than 15 days after the entry of judgment, the trial court was required to award the plaintiff reasonable costs incurred after the offer of settlement. Borquez v. Robert C. Ozer, P.C., 923 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997).

Offers of judgment are not revocable by the offeror for the statutory period of 10 days. Centric-Jones Co. v. Hufnagel, 848 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1993).

Relief under C.R.C.P. 60(b) is available for judgments entered pursuant to this section. Domenico v. Sw. Props. Venture, 914 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1995).

An offer of settlement made to multiple plaintiffs must be apportioned among the parties to allow each to decide independently whether to settle and avoid a potential award of costs pursuant to this section. Weeks v. City of Colo. Springs, 928 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1996); Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

This section does not apply where an offer of settlement was made in a previous action, involving at least some claims that are different from those asserted in the later case, and where a timely statutory offer of settlement was not made in the action in which the judgment was obtained. Huffman v. Westmoreland Coal Co., 205 P.3d 501 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsection (3) does not apply to an unapportioned offer to multiple plaintiffs. Taylor by and through Taylor v. Clark, 883 P.2d 569 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court erred as a matter of law in holding that the entry of summary judgment for one of two offerors of an offer of judgment voided the offer of judgment. An offer of judgment is both irrevocable and absolute for the 10-day statutory period. Centric-Jones Co. v. Hufnagel, 848 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1993).

Statutory period for accepting an offer of settlement cannot be extended by rule. The additional three-day period established in C.R.C.P. 6(e) for service by e-filing does not apply to statutorily established time periods. Montoya v. Connolly's Towing, Inc., 216 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2008).

Offer made to husband and wife could only be accepted by both parties and attempt by wife to accept half constituted a material change to the terms of the offer and was therefore a rejection of the offer. Since husband did not recover more from the jury than was offered by defendant he is not entitled to recover costs. Askew v. Gerace, 851 P.2d 199 (Colo. App. 1992).

Nothing in the statute permits one to condition an offer of settlement upon dismissal of claims against a third party whose claims would not be resolved in the settlement. Because the settlement offer required defendant to dismiss all counterclaims against plaintiffs but all plaintiffs did not join in the offer to dismiss their claims, plaintiffs did not comply with this section. Lawry v. Palm, 192 P.3d 550 (Colo. App. 2008).

Offer served less than ten days before trial was not within statutory period and the trial court was correct in not entering judgment on such offer. Larson v. A.T.S.I., 859 P.2d 273 (Colo. App. 1993).

Defendant's offer of $1.00 in settlement did not violate the spirit of this section and was both permissible and within the purpose of this section since this section is designed not only to encourage settlement but also to discourage unnecessary litigation and reduce the attendant costs. Graven v. Vail Assocs., Inc., 888 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1994).

It is contrary to the purpose of this section to allow non-monetary conditions to be imposed as part of a settlement offer. Therefore, any provisions extending the scope of the offer beyond the claims at issue remove the offer from the scope of the statute. Martin v. Minnard, 862 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1993); Tallitsch v. Child Support Servs., Inc., 926 P.2d 143 (Colo. App. 1996); URS Group, Inc. v. Tetra Tech FW, Inc., 181 P.3d 380 (Colo. App. 2008).

By requiring a release of all "future claims" relating to the project that was the subject of litigation, defendant imposed a nonmonetary condition that took its offer outside the scope of this section. URS Group, Inc. v. Tetra Tech FW, Inc., 181 P.3d 380 (Colo. App. 2008).

Inclusion of subrogation interests and putative liens in a settlement offer did not create a nonmonetary condition. Rather, by including those factors, defendant explained the value of the settlement offer. Thus, the settlement offer was covered by the language of this section. Strunk v. Goldberg, 258 P.3d 334 (Colo. App. 2011).

A settlement offer conditioned upon confidentiality cannot be used as a basis for seeking costs because either party has the right to make an offer and acceptance part of the public records. Martin v. Minnard, 862 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1993).

Settlement offer provision inapplicable to condemnation proceedings in which the final judgment is less than the amount of the offer of settlement. City of Westminster v. Hart, 928 P.2d 758 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant failed to establish basis for relief under C.R.C.P. 60(b) where offer of settlement made by defendant's insurance attorney failed to specify whether the offer addressed fewer than all of the claims between the parties. Guevara v. Foxhoven, 928 P.2d 793 (Colo. App. 1996).

The intent of subsection (1)(a)(II) is to encourage the settlement of litigation by imposing upon a party who rejects a reasonable offer of settlement but recovers less than the amount of the offer, all of the post-offer costs of the offeror. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999); Rubio v. Farris, 51 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 2002).

This section modifies § 13-16-104 and C.R.C.P. 54(d) by not allowing a party who rejects a settlement offer and recovers less at trial to recover his or her costs, even though that party is determined to be the prevailing party. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999); Rubio v. Farris, 51 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 2002).

"Actual costs accruing after the offer of settlement" means due and payable or vested and thus costs that were paid prior to making an offer of settlement to plaintiff did not accrue or become due until after the settlement date and, therefore, fall within the scope of subsection (1)(a)(II). Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999).

A cost judgment under this section is to be offset from a jury award only after the pre-judgment interest has been added. Bennett v. Hickman, 992 P.2d 670 (Colo. App. 1999).

13-17-203. Limitation on attorney fees in class action litigation against public entities. If the plaintiffs prevail in any class action litigation brought against any public entity, as defined in section 24-10-103 (5), C.R.S., the amount of attorney fees which the plaintiffs' attorney is entitled to receive out of any award to the plaintiffs shall be determined by the court; except that such amount shall not exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars. Such limitation shall apply where the public entity pays the attorney fees directly to the plaintiffs' attorneys or where the public entity is required to pay the attorney fees indirectly through any program it administers by reducing the benefits or amounts due to the individual plaintiffs.

ANNOTATION

Where attorneys' right to fee award out of common fund established in class action vested before the enactment of this section, the state constitution prohibits the retrospective application of this section to defeat class counsel's right to the court-ordered fee. Kuhn v. State, 924 P.2d 1053 (Colo. 1996).

This section does not violate the equal protection guarantees of the U.S. or Colorado Constitutions because it is rationally related to the legitimate state interest of protecting class

This section details the steps a party must take in regard to offers of settlement. C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1)(C) and C.R.C.P. 26(e) exist, in part, to promote the exchange of sufficient information in order to encourage settlement. By binding plaintiff to the damage computations listed in plaintiff's initial disclosure statement merely because plaintiff did not designate the computations as estimates, the trial court effectively imposed a settlement on plaintiff and improperly involved the court in the settlement process. The trial court overemphasized plaintiff's failure to state that the initial disclosure of damages was an estimate, neglected to view the initial disclosures in the context of being information "now known and reasonably available," and was insufficiently attentive to the importance of an early exchange of information and the resulting need to update information under C.R.C.P. 26(a)(1)(C) and 26(e). Absent some indication plaintiff tried to mislead the defendants or the court in plaintiff's initial disclosure or tried to frustrate the settlement process, plaintiff not required to accept an offer limited to plaintiff's initial disclosures. By granting the defendants' joint motion for judgment for a specific amount of damages over the objection of plaintiff, the court abused its discretion. Morgan v. Genesee Co., 86 P.3d 388 (Colo. 2004).

Applied in Lasher v. Paxton, 956 P. 2d 647 (Colo. App. 1998); Goodwin v. Homeland Cent. Ins. Co., 172 P.3d 938 (Colo. App. 2007).

members' recovery for unlawful governmental action. A statute does not necessarily violate the equal protection guarantee because its classifications are imperfect. Buckley Powder Co. v. Colo., 70 P.3d 547 (Colo. App. 2002).

This section does not deny equal access to the courts. Aggrieved individuals may sue as individuals or as a class; therefore, the statutory cap does not place an unreasonable burden on class claimants. Buckley Powder Co. v. Colo., 70 P.3d 547 (Colo. App. 2002).

PART 3

RETENTION OF ATTORNEYS BY GOVERNMENTAL ENTITIES - LIMITATION ON CONTINGENT FEE CONTRACTS

13-17-301. Short title. This part 3 shall be known and may be cited as the “Government Attorney Ethics Act”.

Source: L. 2003: Entire part added, p. 924, § 1, effective August 6.

13-17-302. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that:

(a) In recent years, it has become increasingly common for governmental entities to retain attorneys pursuant to contingent fee contracts and disputes have arisen in several states regarding the amount and propriety of contingent fees;

(b) Contingent fees are intended to enable persons of modest means to obtain legal representation that they might not otherwise be able to afford but governmental entities have resources that are unavailable to individual citizens;

(c) Governmental entities should be required to fully consider the costs and risks of litigation before retaining an attorney pursuant to a contingent fee contract;

(d) The department of law ordinarily represents the interests of the state of Colorado;

(e) Governmental officials, including attorneys who represent governmental entities on a contractual basis, are entrusted to protect the health, safety, and well-being of citizens and it is the policy of the state that a person who exercises authority on behalf of a governmental entity generally should not have a personal financial stake in the outcome of litigation initiated on behalf of the governmental entity;

(f) A contingent fee contract that gives an attorney who is retained to represent a governmental entity a direct personal stake in the outcome of legal proceedings is potentially unfair to the citizens or businesses against whom the governmental entity has filed suit and may not serve the best interests of the citizens or businesses on whose behalf the governmental entity initiates legal proceedings;

(g) Because contingent fee contracts do not require the appropriation of moneys, such contracts circumvent the system of checks and balances that ordinarily provides accountability for decisions of governmental entities and it is appropriate to limit contingent fee contracts to ensure that the decision-making process is protected;

(h) A contingent fee contract may result in the payment of excessive attorney fees by a governmental entity, thereby denying citizens represented by government the full measure of justice awarded by the courts;

(i) It is in the best interest of the people of Colorado to limit the circumstances in which governmental entities may retain private attorneys pursuant to contingent fee contracts.

Source: L. 2003: Entire part added, p. 924, § 1, effective August 6.

13-17-303. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Contingent fee” means a fee for legal services that is contingent in whole or in part upon the successful outcome of the matter for which the legal services were retained.

(2) “Contingent fee contract” or “contract” means a contract for legal services in which the amount of the fee to be paid for the legal services depends in whole or in part upon the successful outcome of the matter for which the services were obtained. The term also includes any contract that specifies that fees for legal services will be determined by a court or an arbitrator or any provision of a settlement agreement that requires the opposing party to pay fees for legal services directly to a private attorney retained by a governmental entity pursuant to a contingent fee contract.

(3) “Governmental entity” means the state, any department or agency of the state, and any state-sponsored institution of higher education.

13-17-304. Limitation on contingent fees - applicability. (1) (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, and notwithstanding any other provision of law, a contingent fee contract between a governmental entity and a private attorney shall:

(I) Require the private attorney to maintain and provide to the governmental entity on a monthly basis a contemporaneous record of the hours of legal services provided by individual attorneys, the nature of such services, and any court costs incurred during each month and in the aggregate from the effective date of the contingent fee contract;

(II) Require the private attorney, upon the successful resolution of the matter for which the private attorney was retained, to provide to the governmental entity a statement of the hours of legal services provided by attorneys, the nature of such services, the amount of court costs incurred, the total amount of the contingent fee, and the average hourly rate for legal services provided by attorneys; and

(III) Specify an alternative hourly rate, not to exceed one thousand dollars per hour, at which the attorney shall be compensated in the event that the statement provided by the attorney indicates an average hourly rate for legal services provided by attorneys of more than one thousand dollars per hour.

(b) The average hourly rate for legal services provided by attorneys shall be determined by dividing the amount of the contingent fee, less the amount of court costs incurred if said amount is part of the contingent fee, by the number of hours of legal services provided by attorneys. Clerical work, including but not limited to transcription, photocopying, and document filing and organization, shall not be considered legal services provided by attorneys even if an attorney performs such work.

(2) The limitations and requirements of subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to any contingent fee contract entered into by a governmental entity prior to August 6, 2003.

(3) The limitations and requirements of subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to any contingent fee contract entered into by a governmental entity if the contract is for legal services performed by an attorney in connection with the collection of debts or taxes owed to a governmental entity and was entered into pursuant to section 23-3.1-104 (1) (f) or (2) (i), 23-5-113 (1), 24-30-202.4, or 39-21-114, C.R.S., or any other statutory provision that expressly authorizes or requires the payment of a portion of the moneys collected to an attorney retained to collect such debts or taxes.

(4) Compliance with this part 3 does not relieve a contracting attorney of any obligation or legal responsibility imposed by the Colorado rules of professional conduct or any provision of law.

13-17.5-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly declares that the state has a strong interest in limiting substantially frivolous, groundless, or vexatious inmate lawsuits that impose an undue burden on the state judicial system. While recognizing an inmate's right to access the courts for relief from unlawful state actions, the general assembly finds that a significant number of inmates file substantially frivolous, groundless, or vexatious lawsuits.

(2) The general assembly, therefore, determines that it is necessary to enact legislation that promotes efficiency in the disposition of inmate lawsuits by providing for preliminary matters to be determined by magistrates and to provide for sanctions against inmates who are allowed to file claims against public defendants and whose claims are dismissed as frivolous.

13-17.5-102. Definitions. As used in this article only:

(1) "Civil action" means the filing of a complaint, petition, writ, or motion with any court within the state, including any appellate court; except that "civil action" does not include any criminal action or an action for habeas corpus under article 45 of this title.

(1.5) "Detaining facility" means any state correctional facility, as defined in section 17-1-102 (1.7), C.R.S., including the youthful offender system, any private correctional facility housing state prisoners pursuant to part 2 of article 1 of title 17, C.R.S., any local jail, as defined in section 16-11-308.5 (1.5), C.R.S., or any community corrections program, established in article 27 of title 17, C.R.S. A detaining facility shall not include any juvenile detention facility that detains only juveniles.

(2) "Inmate" means a person who is sentenced or is awaiting sentencing to any detaining facility.

(3) "Public defendant" means any state, county, or municipal agency, any state, county, or municipal official or employee acting within the scope of his or her authority, or any agent acting on behalf of any state, county, or municipal agency.

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 478, § 1, effective July 1. L. 98: (1) amended and (1.5) added, p. 246, § 1, effective April 13.

13-17.5-102.3. Exhaustion of remedies. (1) No inmate shall bring a civil action based upon prison conditions under any statute or constitutional provision until all available administrative remedies have been exhausted in a timely fashion by the entity operating the detaining facility and inmate. For purposes of this subsection (1), an inmate shall be considered to have exhausted all available administrative remedies when the inmate has completed the last step in the inmate grievance process as set forth in the regulations promulgated by the entity operating the detaining facility. Failure to allege in the civil action that all available administrative remedies have been exhausted in accordance with this subsection (1) shall result in dismissal of the civil action.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, if a court finds that a claim filed by an inmate is frivolous, malicious, fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, or seeks monetary relief from a defendant who is immune from monetary relief, a court may dismiss the claim without first requiring exhaustion of administrative remedies.

ANNOTATION

This section requires an inmate to exhaust the last step in the inmate grievance process before proceeding to court. Glover v. State, 129 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section requires an inmate seeking access to his or her mental health records to first exhaust all available administrative remedies. Kopec v. Clements, 271 P.3d 607 (Colo. App. 2011).

An inmate's action seeking access to such records under § 24-72-305 of the Colorado Criminal Justice Records Act (CCJRA) is not exempt from this requirement. Kopec v. Clements, 271 P.3d 607 (Colo. App. 2011).

However, section does not require exhausting of administrative remedies before bringing a civil action based on prison conditions when the action consists only of claims brought under the common law. Adams v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 187 P.3d 1190 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section neither precludes plaintiffs from bringing an action in common law nor bars them from subsequently renewing a request for punitive damages if the prerequisites for such a request are met. Adams v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 187 P.3d 1190 (Colo. App. 2008).

Subsection (1) requires dismissal of the action for failure to allege the exhaustion of all administrative remedies, even if the relief sought may not be available through the administrative process. Glover v. State, 129 P.3d 1083 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in Graham v. Maketa, 227 P.3d 516 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-17.5-102.7. Successive claims. (1) No inmate who on three or more occasions has brought a civil action based upon prison conditions that has been dismissed on the grounds that it was frivolous, groundless, or malicious or failed to state a claim upon which relief may be granted or sought monetary relief from a defendant who is immune from such relief, shall be permitted to proceed as a poor person in a civil action based upon prison conditions under any statute or constitutional provision.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, an inmate may proceed as a poor person in a civil action if the judge finds that the action alleges sufficient facts which, if assumed to be true, would demonstrate that the inmate is in imminent danger of serious physical injury.

(3) (a) A copy of any court order that dismisses an inmate's civil action on the grounds that it is frivolous, groundless, or malicious or fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted or seeks monetary relief from a defendant who is immune from such relief shall be mailed by the court clerk to the Colorado attorney general, whether or not the attorney general entered an appearance in the civil action, and whether or not the civil action involved a state correctional facility or state defendant. The attorney general shall monitor the dismissals described in this paragraph (a).

(b) The attorney general shall inform the state judicial department or the chief judge of each judicial district whenever the attorney general becomes aware that an inmate has been assessed three or more dismissals as described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3). Each judicial district shall maintain a registry of such information. An inmate listed in the registry who brings a civil action shall be subject to the provisions of subsections (1) and (2) of this section.

13-17.5-103. Filing fees. (1) An inmate who seeks to proceed in any civil action without prepayment of fees, in addition to filing any required affidavit, shall submit a copy of the inmate's account statement for the six-month period immediately preceding the filing of the civil action, certified by an appropriate official at the detaining facility. If the inmate account demonstrates that the inmate has sufficient funds to pay the filing fee, or if the action on its face is frivolous, groundless, or malicious, or fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted or seeks monetary relief from a defendant who is immune from such relief, the motion to proceed as a poor person shall be denied.

(2) Any inmate who is allowed to proceed in the civil action as a poor person shall be required to pay the full amount of the filing fee and service of process fees previously paid by the court in the following installments:

(a) If the inmate has ten dollars or more in his or her inmate account, make an initial partial payment in accordance with the order of the court; and

(b) Regardless if the inmate has ten dollars in his or her inmate account at the time of the filing of the civil action, make continuing monthly payments to the court equal to twenty percent of the preceding month's deposits in the inmate's account until the filing fee and service of process fees previously paid by the court are paid in full.

(2.5) The court shall include in its order granting permission to proceed as a poor person the requirement that the inmate comply with the provisions of subsection (2) of this section.

(2.7) A copy of any order granting an inmate's motion to proceed in a civil action as a poor person shall be forwarded by the court to the detaining facility that has custody of the inmate. Upon receipt of the order, the detaining facility shall forward payments from the inmate's account to the court in accordance with the order granting leave to proceed as a poor person.

(3) In no event shall an inmate be prohibited from filing a civil action or appealing a civil or criminal judgment because the inmate has no assets and no means by which to pay the initial partial payment.

ANNOTATION

Statutory section not void for vagueness since there are no words or phrases in this section that are not readily comprehensible to persons of ordinary intelligence without further definition. Collins v. Jaquez, 15 P.3d 299 (Colo. App. 2000).

Nor does statutory section violate inmate's right to have access to the courts, since inmate has opportunity to demonstrate insufficient funds to pay filing fees in order to be permitted access to the courts without incurring those fees. Collins v. Jaquez, 15 P.3d 299 (Colo. App. 2000).

In addition, section does not violate constitutional rights to due process or equal protection under a rational basis test. Collins v. Jaquez, 15 P.3d 299 (Colo. App. 2000).

Being granted the ability to proceed as a poor person under this section, without prepayment of fees, does not relieve an inmate from liability for the filing fee. Indigent inmates are not excused from paying the filing fee. The payment of the fee is merely placed on an installment schedule. Schwartz v. Owens, 134 P.3d 455 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court was required to give copies of summons and complaint to sheriff for service of process, unless the court concluded that the claims were frivolous or filed in bad faith. It was improper for the trial court to dismiss the action for failure to prosecute. Edmond v. City of Colo. Springs, 226 P.3d 1248 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-17.5-104. Stay of state judicial proceedings. If the court determines, during the course of a state civil action by an inmate against any public defendant, that a federal civil action or grievance procedure is pending that involves the inmate and any of the same issues raised in the state civil action, the court shall stay the state civil action until the federal civil action or the grievance procedure is completed and all rights of appeal have been exhausted.

ANNOTATION

A magistrate may, without the consent of the parties, act upon an inmate's in forma pauperis request and dispose of the case in accordance with its ruling thereon. Therefore, it is appropriate for such action to be governed by

C.R.M. 7(a), which sets out procedures for review of a magistrate's orders and judgments that have been entered without consent of the parties. Bryan v. Neet, 85 P.3d 556 (Colo. App. 2003).

13-17.5-106. Assessment of costs and attorney fees - review of inmate spending from account - recovery of costs from inmate accounts - alternative sanctions - continuing garnishment authorized. (1) (a) In any action based upon prison conditions brought under any statute or constitutional provision, if attorney fees are recoverable pursuant to any state or federal statute, no attorney fees shall be awarded to an inmate, except to the extent that:

(I) The fees were directly and reasonably incurred in proving an actual violation of the inmate's rights protected by the constitution or statute; and

(II) (A) The amount of the fees is proportionately related to the court-ordered relief for the violation; or

(B) The fees were directly and reasonably incurred in enforcing the relief ordered for the violation.

(b) No award of attorney fees under paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall be based on an hourly rate in excess of one hundred fifty percent of the hourly rate paid to court-appointed counsel in the district in which the action was filed.

(c) Whenever a separate monetary judgment is awarded in an action in which attorney fees are awarded under paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), a portion of the judgment not to exceed twenty-five percent shall be applied to reduce the amount of attorney fees awarded against the defendant.

(d) Nothing in this subsection (1) shall prohibit an inmate from entering into an agreement to pay an attorney fee in excess of the amount authorized in this subsection (1), if the fee is paid by the individual rather than by a defendant.

(2) The court may also enter judgment against an inmate who has been allowed to proceed as a poor person pursuant to section 13-16-103 for the amount of court costs and fees that the inmate would have incurred except for the provisions of that section, if the court awards attorney fees pursuant to subsection (1) of this section. The judgment entered by the court shall be collected and applied in accordance with subsection (3) of this section.

(3) If judgment for costs and attorney fees is awarded to a public defendant or to the court, pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) of this section, the court, pursuant to section 13-54.5-102, shall issue a writ of continuing garnishment of the inmate's account with the detaining facility, which garnishment shall continue until the judgment is paid in full, notwithstanding the requirement set forth in section 13-54.5-103 that the garnishment be renewed.

13-17.5-106.5. Court-ordered payment. Any compensatory damages awarded to an inmate in connection with a civil action brought against any federal, state, or local jail, prison, or facility or against any official or agent of a jail, prison, or facility, after deduction for any award of attorney fees pursuant to section 13-17.5-106 (1) (c), shall be paid directly to satisfy any outstanding court-ordered payments pending against the inmate, including but not limited to restitution or child support. The remainder of the award after full payment of all pending court orders shall be forwarded to the inmate.

13-17.5-107. Construction of article - severability. Nothing in this article shall be construed to impede an inmate's constitutional right of access to the courts. If any provision of this section or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid or unconstitutional, such invalidity or unconstitutionality shall not affect other provisions or applications of this section which can be given effect without the invalid or unconstitutional provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this section are declared to be severable.

SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS

13-20-101. What actions survive. (1) All causes of action, except actions for slander or libel, shall survive and may be brought or continued notwithstanding the death of the person in favor of or against whom such action has accrued, but punitive damages shall not be awarded nor penalties adjudged after the death of the person against whom such punitive damages or penalties are claimed; and, in tort actions based upon personal injury, the damages recoverable after the death of the person in whose favor such action has accrued shall be limited to loss of earnings and expenses sustained or incurred prior to death and shall not include damages for pain, suffering, or disfigurement, nor prospective profits or earnings after date of death. An action under this section shall not preclude an action for wrongful death under part 2 of article 21 of this title.

(2) Any action under this section may be brought or the court on motion may allow the action to be continued by or against the personal representative of the deceased. Such action shall be deemed a continuing one and to have accrued to or against such personal representative at the time it would have accrued to or against the deceased if he had survived. If such action is continued against the personal representative of the deceased, a notice shall be served on him as in cases of original process, but no judgment shall be collectible against a deceased person's estate or personal representative unless a claim, for the amount of such judgment as may be recovered in such continuing action, has been presented within the time and in the manner required for other claims against an estate.

Actions of law generally do not die with the person. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959); Olmstead v. Allstate Ins. Co., 320 F. Supp. 1076 (D. Colo. 1971).

Those mentioned in this section do die with the person. All actions in law whatsoever shall survive except those specifically mentioned in the exceptions contained in the statute. Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954); People in Interest of M.E.W.F., 42 Colo. App. 495, 600 P.2d 108 (1979).

It prevents abatement of actions and causes of action. The so-called survival statute is to prevent certain actions or causes of action already accrued from abating by reason of the death of either of the parties. Micheletti v. Moidel, 94 Colo. 587, 32 P.2d 266 (1934); Brown v. Stookey, 134 Colo. 11, 298 P.2d 955 (1956); Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Claims of plaintiffs and defendants. It is inconsistent that one rule should be adopted in determining the survivability of a claim as to a plaintiff and apply an opposite rule as to the defendant. Brown v. Stookey, 134 Colo. 11, 298 P.2d 955 (1956).

The coincidence of death of both parties is immaterial. Since the medieval notion that tort actions are punitive has long been abandoned, the wrongdoer's death should not end liability, and his distributees should be made to satisfy claims against him. Since conversely, compensation is the purpose of modern tort recovery, it should accrue not only to a living person but also to his estate. On this analysis, the coincidence of the deaths of both parties is immaterial. Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954).

A right to damages under this section survives. Nemer v. Anderson, 151 Colo. 411, 378 P.2d 841 (1963).

This section was intended to create remedies. This section's form indicates an intention to create remedies rather than to kill or suppress them. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

This section modifies common law. This section was intended to modify the common law and to declare that all actions survive except those excluded. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

Section to be strictly construed. Since at common law there was no survival of personal injury actions, this section is in derogation of the common law and thus must be strictly construed. Estate of Burron v. Edwards, 42 Colo. App. 141, 594 P.2d 1064 (1979).

This section does not authorize the continuance of an action against the heirs of decedent after his death. Mills v. Saunders, 30 Colo. App. 462, 494 P.2d 1309 (1972).

Where no action accrued during lifetime of decedent, no action may be brought. Dohaish v. Tooley, 670 F.2d 934 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 826, 103 S. Ct. 60, 74 L. Ed.2d 63 (1982).

Tort claim need not relate to decedent's death. A surviving tort claim under subsection (1) need not bear a causal relation to the decedent's death. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Of necessity, an executor stands in the old shoes of a decedent and his right exists only if the survival statute authorizes its continued existence. This is due to the fact that at common law all injury actions died with the tortfeasor or the victim of the tort. Statutes in all of the states have modified this rule. However, if it does not embrace the action, it is not possible to avoid the provisions of a survival statute by opening an estate and allowing claims. This expedient does not operate to transform personal damage items into property damages. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

Recovery under survival statute requires suit be brought on behalf of decedent's estate. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Estate is beneficiary of surviving cause of action. The estate, not the deceased himself, is the real beneficiary of the surviving cause of action, which serves to compensate the estate for actual property losses it has incurred. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Personal representative stands in decedent's stead. The personal representative of the decedent's estate, by necessity, stands in the decedent's shoes in a survival action. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

This section and § 13-21-201 et seq. are not in pari materia, but relate to distinct causes of action, and provide distinct remedies. Kelley v. Union Pac. Ry., 16 Colo. 455, 27 P. 1058 (1891); Letson v. Brown, 11 Colo. App. 11, 52 P. 287 (1898); Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

If action survives, it is assignable. The test of assignability is whether or not the cause of action would survive to the executors or administrators of the party in case of his death. If it would, then the claim would be assignable; if not, the converse would be true. This is the general rule, but not universally nor strictly true, because by statute some causes of action are made to survive which are not assignable. The general rule is that assignability and descendability go hand in hand. Olmstead v. Allstate Ins. Co., 320 F. Supp. 1076 (D. Colo. 1971).

This section is inapplicable to workers' compensation claims. Estate of Huey v. J.C. Trucking Co., 824 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1991).

If a final dissolution decree affecting property rights was entered, a spouse's subsequent death during the pendency of an appeal does not abate the appeal and the court may review a property division. In re Piper, 820 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1991).

The survival statute is applicable to claims filed under the Workers' Compensation Act. The conditions of recovery under the Act were fulfilled on the date that the injury was incurred and are dependent only on whether claimant's claim is timely filed. Claimant's death by unrelated causes prior to final adjudication has no effect on the claim. Estate of Huey v. J.C. Trucking, 837 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1992).

This section does not preempt the traditional rule of abatement in divorce actions in the absence of a survivability provision under the marriage dissolution statutes. In Re Connell, 870 P.2d 632 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Sanchez v. Marquez, 457 F. Supp. 359 (D. Colo. 1978); In re Dick v. Indus. Comm'n, 197 Colo. 71, 589 P.2d 950 (1979); Pedreya v. Cornell Prescription Pharmacies, Inc., 465 F. Supp. 936 (D. Colo. 1979); Healy v. Counts, 536 F. Supp. 600 (D. Colo. 1982); Jackson v. Marsh, 551 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1982).

II. DAMAGES.

Executor may sue for funeral expenses under the survival statute. An executor may recover funeral expenses apart from a death claim, such claim being a property claim which comes into existence after the death, it being proper to claim such expenses in an action other than for the wrongful death. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

Funeral expenses, though incurred after death, can be recovered under the survival statute, and are, therefore, not included in damages under the wrongful death statute. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Death resulting from defendant's negligence. In an action for damages resulting from an automobile accident, the trial court properly included in a judgment for plaintiff funeral expenses of the party whose death resulted from the accident and was due to the alleged negligence of defendant. Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954).

Medical expenses of decedent also recoverable. An action, being a claim based on negligence, survives the death of a victim; therefore, medical, nursing, hospital expenses and the other damages which accrue during his lifetime and which would have been recoverable by him had he lived are recoverable by the executor of the estate. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

Loss of earning capacity. A claimant under this section would be entitled to reimbursement for loss of time or for loss of capacity to earn, whether or not he was receiving any salary. Nemer v. Anderson, 151 Colo. 411, 378 P.2d 841 (1963).

Compensation for any "loss of time", as usually measured by "loss of earnings", sustained by decedent prior to his death, to the extent caused by defendant's negligence, is recoverable under the survival statute and is not subject to death statute's limits. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Damages which are too speculative are not recoverable. In an action for damages resulting from automobile collision, a claim for loss of a wheat crop resulting from the plaintiff's inability to plant the crop in proper time due to injuries received in accident, the failure to make an effort to mitigate damages by the use of available help to plant such crop, together with variable factors affecting the yield, rendered the claim too speculative for allowance as an item of damage proximately caused by negligence of the defendant. Nemer v. Anderson, 151 Colo. 411, 378 P.2d 841 (1963).

Attorney fees of conservator not recoverable. Attorney fees incurred by a conservator in connection with the commencing of an action are not recoverable as expenses of litigation in an action by the executor of a deceased party, such executor being limited to elements of damage which could have been asserted by the deceased had he lived. Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

This section prohibits survival of claim for exemplary damages. Estate of Burron v. Edwards, 42 Colo. App. 141, 594 P.2d 1064 (1979).

A federal civil rights claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cannot be limited by this section or Colorado's wrongful death statute, § 13-21-201. White v. Talboys, 573 F. Supp. 49 (D. Colo. 1983); Myres v. Rask, 602 F. Supp. 210 (D. Colo. 1985).

13-20-102. Effect of repeal. The repeal of part 3 of this article concerning informed consent to medical procedures shall not have the effect of invalidating any previous judicial decision relating to requirements for informed consent or liability imposed for the lack thereof.

13-20-201. Legislative declaration. The remedies provided by law on or before April 27, 1937, for the enforcement of actions based upon alleged alienation of affections, criminal conversation, seduction, and breach of contract to marry have been subjected to grave abuses, caused extreme annoyance, embarrassment, humiliation, and pecuniary damage to many persons wholly innocent and free of any wrongdoing who were merely the victims of circumstances, and have been exercised by unscrupulous persons for their unjust enrichment, and have furnished vehicles for the commission or attempted commission of crime and in many cases have resulted in the perpetration of frauds, it is hereby declared as the public policy of the state that the best interests of the people of the state will be served by the abolition thereof. Consequently, in the public interest, the necessity for the enactment of this part 2 is hereby declared as a matter of legislative determination.

ANNOTATION

The general assembly has abolished the legal duties and rights of actions for alienation of affection even though they were recognized at common law. Goldberg v. Musim, 162 Colo. 461, 427 P.2d 698 (1967).

It can do so under inherent police power. The general assembly had the power to abolish causes of action under the inherent police power of the state. Goldberg v. Musim, 162 Colo. 461, 427 P.2d 698 (1967).

This section does not violate § 6 of art. II, Colo. Const., for the general assembly has the power to abolish substantive rights in order to attain a permissible legislative object. Goldberg v. Musim, 162 Colo. 461, 427 P.2d 698 (1967).

Heart balm statute precludes only those causes of action, such as claims for criminal conversation, alienation of affections or seduction, that are specifically listed in the statute; thus, wife's claim against Catholic clergyman with whom she and husband had met for marriage counseling, for fiduciary breach and extreme and outrageous conduct in inducing wife to engage in sexual relationship with him, was not barred by heart balm statute. Destefano v. Grabrian, 763 P. 2d 275 (Colo 1988).

Limitation on application of section. This section should be applied no further than to bar actions for damages suffered from loss of marriage, humiliation, and other direct consequences of the breach, and should not affect rights and duties determinable by common-law principles. In re Heinzman, 40 Colo. App. 262, 579 P.2d 638 (1977), aff'd, 198 Colo. 36, 596 P.2d 61 (1979).

This section cannot be relied upon to disallow recovery of conditional gift, particularly when the donee breaks the engagement to be married. In re Heinzman, 40 Colo. App. 262, 579 P.2d 638 (1977), aff'd, 198 Colo. 36, 596 P.2d 61 (1979).

13-20-203. Breach of contract to marry not actionable. No act done within this state shall operate to give rise, either within or without this state, to any of the rights of action abolished by this part 2. No contract to marry made or entered into in this state shall operate to give rise, either within or without this state, to any cause or right of action for the breach thereof, nor shall any contract to marry made in any other state give rise to any cause of action within this state for the breach thereof.

ANNOTATION

Section not applicable to recovery of gift made on condition of marriage. This section bars actions for damages suffered from breach of promise to marry and other direct consequences of the breach, such as humiliation, but it should not be extended to affect common-law principles governing a gift to a fiancée made on condition of marriage, where the condition was broken by the donee. In re Heinzman, 198 Colo. 36, 596 P.2d 61 (1979).

13-20-204. Certain contracts made in settlement of claims void. (1) All contracts and instruments of every kind, name, nature, or description which may be executed within this state in payment, satisfaction, settlement, or compromise of any claim or cause of action abolished or barred by this part 2, whether such claim or cause of action arose within or without this state, are declared to be contrary to the public policy of this state and absolutely void. It is unlawful to cause, induce, or procure any person to execute such a contract or instrument; or cause, induce, or procure any person to give, pay, transfer, or deliver any money or thing of value in payment, satisfaction, settlement, or compromise of any such claim or cause of action; or to receive, take, or accept any such money or thing of value as such payment, satisfaction, settlement, or compromise. It is unlawful to commence or cause to be commenced, either as party, attorney, or agent or otherwise in behalf of either, in any court of this state any proceeding or action seeking to enforce or recover upon any such contract or instrument, knowing it to be such, whether the same was executed within or without this state.

(2) This section shall not apply to the payment, satisfaction, settlement, or compromise of any causes of action which are not abolished or barred by this part 2, or any contracts or instruments executed on or before April 27, 1937, or to the bona fide holder in due course of any negotiable instrument which may be executed in pursuance of this statute.

13-20-205. Unlawful to file pleading. It is unlawful for any person, either as litigant or attorney, to file, cause to be filed, threaten to file, or threaten to cause to be filed in any court of this state any pleading or paper setting forth or seeking to recover upon any cause of action abolished or barred by this part 2, whether such cause of action arose within or without this state.

13-20-206. Unlawful to name corespondent. It is unlawful for any person, either as litigant or attorney, to file, cause to be filed, threaten to file, or threaten to cause to be filed in any court of this state any pleading or paper naming or describing in such manner as to identify any person as corespondent or participant in misconduct of the adverse party in any action for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, declaration of invalidity of marriage, or the allocation of parental responsibilities or support of children, or in any citation or proceeding ancillary or subsequent to such action. In all such cases it is sufficient for such pleader to designate any such corespondent or third party in general language that is not sufficient for identification, and such general language shall operate with the same legal effect as complete naming and identification of the person would do; except that the adverse party may file a motion for a bill of particulars to secure such name, identity, or other facts. The granting of such motion, in whole or in part, rests in the sound discretion of the court; and, if ordered granted, the bill of particulars shall set forth the information specifically required by said order, but no further, and when filed the same shall be sealed, not to be opened without an order of the court. If the motion for a bill of particulars is granted, the party named in said bill of particulars shall be given five days' notice in writing prior to the filing of the same, said notice to be given either by personal service or by registered mail addressed to his last-known address.

13-20-207. Corespondent not to be disclosed - cross-examination - effect. (1) No attorney appearing in any of the proceedings mentioned in section 13-20-206 on behalf of a party thereto asserting misconduct by the adverse party shall ask of any witness any question intended or calculated to disclose the name or identity of any third person charged as corespondent or participant in any such misconduct, nor shall any party or witness testifying on behalf of a party asserting misconduct by the adverse party name or identify any third person charged as a corespondent or participant in any such misconduct; except that, if the court in the exercise of sound discretion so orders, counsel for any party charged with any act of misconduct with a third person may be permitted to cross-examine a witness who has testified to any such act of misconduct concerning the identity of any such third person and, within such limits as the court may prescribe, such witness may make answer to questions so asked.

(2) In all testimony in such actions, proceedings, and citations, designation of such corespondent or other alleged participant in misconduct by general language not sufficient for identification operates with the same legal effect as complete identification. The discretion vested in the court by this section shall be exercised in such manner as to avoid injustice to litigants, while at the same time avoiding so far as possible the public revelation of the name or identity of such third person, and to this end the court, in all such cases, may impound pleadings or other documents in the case and hear such testimony in chambers. This section shall not be construed to change the grounds for dissolution of marriage or impair the substantive rights of parties in those cases, but to regulate pleading, practice, and testimony therein so as to eliminate criminal intimidation and public scandal. The provisions of this section apply as well to the taking of testimony by deposition as to proceedings before the court. The deposition of any corespondent or participant in misconduct shall be taken behind closed doors and, when filed in court, shall be sealed, not to be opened without the order of the court. Any willful violation of any provision of this section by any attorney, party, or witness constitutes a direct contempt of the court having jurisdiction of the proceedings in which the same occurs and may be punished by the court with a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars as the court deems proper.

13-20-208. Penalty for violations. Any person who violates any provision of sections 13-20-204 to 13-20-206 is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

ACTIONS AGAINST LICENSED PROFESSIONALS

13-20-601. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby declares that, in enacting this part 6, the general assembly has determined that the certificate of review requirement should be utilized in civil actions for negligence brought against those professionals who are licensed by this state to practice a particular profession and regarding whom expert testimony would be necessary to establish a prima facie case.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Negligence: The Construction Claim Panacea", see 15 Colo. Law. 1992 (1986). For article, "1986 Colorado Tort Reform Legislation", see 15 Colo. Law. 1363 (1986).

Expert testimony necessary to establish standard of professional conduct unless there is a simple factual circumstance or dereliction of duty so palpable as to be apparent without the presentation of such testimony. Where the claim involved review of attorney's efforts to negotiate a financial transaction, the ordinary knowledge of a layperson could not be relied upon to establish standard of care. Boigegrain v. Gilbert, 784 P.2d 849 (Colo. App. 1989).

No exemption for pro se litigants. The policy expressed in this section applies equally whether or not a party is represented by an attorney. Yadon v. Southward, 64 P.3d 909 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-20-602. Actions against licensed professionals and acupuncturists - certificate of review required. (1) (a) In every action for damages or indemnity based upon the alleged professional negligence of an acupuncturist regulated pursuant to article 29.5 of title 12, C.R.S., or a licensed professional, the plaintiff's or complainant's attorney shall file with the court a certificate of review for each acupuncturist or licensed professional named as a party, as specified in subsection (3) of this section, within sixty days after the service of the complaint, counterclaim, or cross claim against such person unless the court determines that a longer period is necessary for good cause shown.

(b) A certificate of review shall be filed with respect to every action described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) against a company or firm that employed a person specified in such paragraph (a) at the time of the alleged negligence, even if such person is not named as a party in such action.

(2) In the event of failure to file a certificate of review in accordance with this section and if the acupuncturist or licensed professional defending the claim believes that an expert is necessary to prove the claim of professional negligence, the defense may move the court for an order requiring filing of such a certificate. The court shall give priority to deciding such a motion, and in no event shall the court allow the case to be set for trial without a decision on such motion.

(3) (a) A certificate of review shall be executed by the attorney for the plaintiff or complainant declaring:

(I) That the attorney has consulted a person who has expertise in the area of the alleged negligent conduct; and

(II) That the professional who has been consulted pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) has reviewed the known facts, including such records, documents, and other materials which the professional has found to be relevant to the allegations of negligent conduct and, based on the review of such facts, has concluded that the filing of the claim, counterclaim, or cross claim does not lack substantial justification within the meaning of section 13-17-102 (4).

(b) The court, in its discretion, may require the identity of the acupuncturist or licensed professional who was consulted pursuant to subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) to be disclosed to the court and may verify the content of such certificate of review. The identity of the professional need not be identified to the opposing party or parties in the civil action.

(c) In an action alleging professional negligence of a physician, the certificate of review shall declare that the person consulted meets the requirements of section 13-64-401; or in any action against any other professional, that the person consulted can demonstrate by competent evidence that, as a result of training, education, knowledge, and experience, the consultant is competent to express an opinion as to the negligent conduct alleged.

(4) The failure to file a certificate of review in accordance with this section shall result in the dismissal of the complaint, counterclaim, or cross claim.

(5) These provisions shall not affect the rights and obligations under section 13-17-102.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado's Certificate of Review Statute: Considerations in Professional Negligence Cases", see 33 Colo. Law. 11 (February 2004).

Certificate of review requirement is applicable to medical malpractice claims brought under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Hill v. U.S., 751 F. Supp. 909 (D. Colo. 1990).

Certificate of review requirement is applicable to claims brought under the Consumer Protection Act. Teiken v. Reynolds, 904 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1995).

Certificate of review requirement is applicable in federal diversity cases. Trierweiler v. Croxton & Trench Holding Corp., 90 F.3d 1523 (10th Cir. 1996) (decided under former law).

Certificate of review requirement is applicable to professional negligence claims brought against the United States under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Kikumura v. Osagie, 461 F.3d 1269 (10th Cir. 2006).

No exemption for pro se litigants. Although some provisions of this section refer to conduct by attorneys, the underlying policy applies equally to a person who is not represented by an attorney. Yadon v. Southward, 64 P.3d 909 (Colo. App. 2002).

The provision in this section that a plaintiff file a certificate of review is not a jurisdictional requirement. Rather, the court has discretion to determine if a certificate of review is required. Miller v. Rowtech, LLC, 3 P.3d 492 (Colo. App. 2000).

Certificate of review requirement applies to claims based on the negligence of licensed professionals. Legislative purpose and legislative history of this section establish that plaintiff was required to file a certificate of review in order to hold state liable for malpractice of employees that are licensed professionals. State v. Nieto, 993 P.2d 493 (Colo. 2000); Hamilton v. Thompson, 23 P.3d 114 (Colo. 2001).

Certificate of review requirement is independent of the requirement to file initial disclosures under C.R.C.P. 26(a). Williams v. Boyle, 72 P.3d 392 (Colo. App. 2003).

Single certificate of review was permissible for two defendants. Claims against law firm defendant depended entirely on the alleged negligence of the lawyer defendant, and an expert qualified to evaluate the claims against one defendant would also be qualified to evaluate the claims against the other defendant. RMB Servs., Inc. v. Truhlar, 151 P.3d 673 (Colo. App. 2006).

Dismissal of a case is authorized under either subsection (1) or (2), but the court must determine whether expert testimony is required to establish a prima facie case of negligence before ordering dismissal. Badis v. Martinez, 819 P.2d 551 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 842 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to file a certificate of review stating that the plaintiff has consulted with a person with expertise in the area of the alleged negligent conduct and that an expert has concluded the claim does not lack substantial justification results in dismissal of plaintiff's complaint. Kelton v. Ramsey, 961 P.2d 569 (Colo. App. 1998).

Dismissal of complaint proper where plaintiff failed to file certificate of review in compliance with statute after having been granted an extended time for compliance. Rosenberg v. Grady, 843 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1992).

Certificate of review is deficient as a matter of law when it alleges only causation and not all of the elements of negligence sufficient to establish legal responsibility. A party must allege the basis for believing the non-party legally liable to the extent that the non-party's acts or omissions would satisfy all of the elements of a negligence claim. Redden v. SCI Colo. Funeral Servs., Inc., 38 P.3d 75 (Colo. 2001).

Although this section provides a defense, the defense is waived if not timely asserted since the certificate is not a jurisdictional requirement. Miller v. Rowtech, LLC, 3 P.3d 492 (Colo. App. 2000).

Denial of plaintiff's motion to compel discovery until plaintiff complied with order to file certificate of review held proper. Rosenberg v. Grady, 843 P.2d 25 (Colo. App. 1992).

Plaintiff may file a motion for an order determining the necessity of a certificate under this section and requesting an extended time frame in which to file such certificate, if necessary. Badis v. Martinez, 819 P.2d 551 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 842 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1992).

The language of the statute is broad enough to include every claim that requires proof of professional negligence as a predicate to recovery, whatever the formal designation of the claim might be. Martinez v. Badis, 842 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1992); Esparter v. Cramer, 903 P.2d 1171 (Colo. App. 1995); Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304 (Colo. App. 2000).

A certificate of review is required for a claim of negligent misrepresentation when the allegations reflect an underlying theory of professional negligence. RMB Servs., Inc. v. Truhlar, 151 P.3d 673 (Colo. App. 2006).

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur cannot be used to avoid the requirements of this section, at least when there is no evidence or inference that the defendant had any control over the instrumentality causing the injury. Bilawsky v. Faseehudin, 916 P.2d 586 (Colo. App. 1995).

The statute applies to all claims against licensed professionals wherein expert testimony is required to establish the scope of the professional's duty or the failure of the professional to reasonably conduct himself or herself in compliance with the responsibilities inherent in the assumption of the duty. Martinez v. Badis, 842 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1992); Tracz v. Centennial Peaks, 9 P.3d 1168 (Colo. App. 2000); Ehrlich Feedlot, Inc. v. Oldenburg, 140 P.3d 265 (Colo. App. 2006).

A plaintiff claiming breach of fiduciary duty arising from the attorney-client relationship must establish the applicable standard of care and the defendant's failure to adhere to that standard through expert testimony. Therefore, a certificate of review is required to support a claim of breach of fiduciary duty against an attorney. Ehrlich Feedlot, Inc. v. Oldenburg, 140 P.3d 265 (Colo. App. 2006).

However, no certificate of review was required where expert testimony would not be necessary to establish claims that licensed real estate brokers failed to disclose hidden damage to a home's foundation walls of which they had actual knowledge. Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304 (Colo. App. 2000).

No certificate of review was required to establish standard of care regarding an attorney's failure to file a case within the applicable statute of limitation or to show that a particular attorney was representing a client at a specified time. Giron v. Koktavy, 124 P.3d 821 (Colo. App. 2005).

Unless the court requests supplemental information, the plaintiff is not required to describe the expert's qualifications. RMB Servs., Inc. v. Truhlar, 151 P.3d 673 (Colo. App. 2006).

Plaintiff is not required to present expert testimony if allegations against professionals do not involve claims related to their professional activities. Claims against hospital employees for assault, false imprisonment, etc. are the types of claims where the subject matter is within the common knowledge and experience of an ordinary person. Siepierski v. Catholic Health Initiative Mountain Region, 37 P.3d 537 (Colo. App. 2001).

The fact that some consideration of the reasonableness of a principal's actions may be necessary in order to define the contours of an agent's apparent authority and/or whether the estoppel doctrine should come into play does not make an imputed liability claim an "action for damages or indemnity based upon . . . alleged professional negligence", within the meaning of this section. Stat-Tech Liquidating Trust v. Fenster, 981 F. Supp. 1325 (D. Colo. 1997).

"Good cause" construed. Lacking a specific statutory definition of "good cause" for which the 60-day time limit set forth in this section may be extended, the trial court acted properly in relying upon decisional law interpreting that phrase in the context of default judgment cases. Hane by and through Jabalera v. Tubman, 899 P.2d 332 (Colo. App. 1995); Williams v. Boyle, 72 P.3d 392 (Colo. App. 2003).

Good cause shown where: (1) Physician who initially provided a certificate of review later declined to verify it; (2) plaintiff made a timely request for an extension of time; and (3) no prejudice would have resulted. Yadon v. Southward, 64 P.3d 909 (Colo. App. 2002).

To determine whether good cause exists, the court must consider whether: (1) The neglect causing the late filing was excusable; (2) the moving party has alleged a meritorious claim or defense; and (3) permitting the late filing would be consistent with equitable considerations, including any prejudice to the nonmoving party.

RMB Servs., Inc. v. Truhlar, 151 P.3d 673 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court determination that the plaintiff could establish a prima facie case without the use of expert testimony, and therefore need not submit a certificate of review, is not an abuse of discretion because the position of the plaintiff had arguable merit. Shelton v. Penrose/St. Francis Healthcare Sys., 984 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1999).

Trial court should not accept plaintiff's expert reports in lieu of a certificate of review, but court will not disturb verdict where such acceptance had no impact on the defendant. Shelton v. Penrose/St. Francis Healthcare Sys., 984 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1999).

Where the "statement of review" was prepared and offered in the course of, and directly related to, a judicial proceeding, the preparer of the statement is entitled to immunity from civil liability. The doctrine of absolute immunity was applicable to the "statement of review" prepared by defendant. Merrick v. Burns, Wall, Smith & Mueller, P.C., 43 P.3d 712 (Colo. App. 2001).

ACTIONS BASED ON ENVIRONMENTAL LIABILITY

Law reviews: For comment, "Stemming the Tide of Lender Liability: Judicial and Legislative Reactions", see 67 Den. U. L. Rev. 453 (1990).

13-20-701. Legislative declaration. Federal and state environmental laws provide that the owner of real property is liable for cleanup of property contamination and define who is the owner of such property. If a borrower defaults on a loan, a lender must decide whether to foreclose and potentially become the owner. For fear of becoming liable for conditions they did not create, lenders are showing a reluctance to foreclose, thus leaving no one responsible for the cleanup. So that lenders can predict with more certainty what their costs will be when they foreclose, it is the intent of the general assembly to limit third-party liability for lenders who comply with certain conditions to the cost of cleaning up contaminants or pollution pursuant to federal, state, and local laws. In addition such limitations may also make lenders more willing to lend to certain types of businesses.

13-20-702. Definitions. As used in this part 7, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Contaminate or pollute", "contaminating or polluting", or "contamination or pollution" means contamination or pollution of air, water, real or personal property, animals, or human beings from a location in the state of Colorado, including, without limitation, contamination or pollution from hazardous waste and substances.

(2) "Lender-owner" means any person or entity which has a bona fide security interest in or mortgage or lien on, and which forecloses on or receives an assignment or deed in lieu of foreclosure and becomes the owner of, real or personal property and the foreclosure, deed in lieu, or assignment is not primarily for the purposes of avoiding third-party liability.

(3) "Representative" means any person or entity acting in the capacity of a receiver, conservator, guardian ad litem, personal representative of a deceased person, or trustee or fiduciary of real or personal property; except that the terms trustee and fiduciary shall be limited to entities acting as trustee or fiduciary and which are chartered by the division of banking or division of financial services, the office of the United States comptroller of the currency, or the office of thrift supervision.

(4) "Third parties" means persons or entities other than governmental entities seeking to enforce federal, state, or local environmental statutes, ordinances, regulations, permits, or orders.

(5) "Third-party liability" means liability to third parties for any claims arising out of or resulting from contamination or pollution, including, without limitation, claims for personal injury, consequential damages, lost profits, exemplary damages, or property damages, but does not include liability for the cost of cleaning up contamination or pollution.

13-20-703. Environmental third-party liability - ownership. (1) Except as pre-empted by federal law, no person or entity shall be deemed to be an owner or operator of real or personal property who, without participating in the management of the subject real or personal property, holds indicia of ownership primarily to protect a security or lienhold interest in the subject real or personal property or in the property in which the subject real or personal property is located.

(2) No lender-owner or representative shall, by virtue of becoming the owner of real or personal property, be liable for any third-party liability arising from contamination or pollution emanating from said property prior to the date that title vests in the lender-owner or representative.

(3) No lender-owner or representative shall, by virtue of becoming the owner of real or personal property, be liable for any third-party liability arising from contamination or pollution emanating from said property during the period of ownership so long as, and to the extent that, it does not knowingly or recklessly cause new contamination or pollution or does not knowingly or recklessly allow others to cause new contamination or pollution if lender-owner has caused an environmental professional to conduct a visual inspection of the property and a record search of the recorded chain of title documents regarding the real property for the prior fifty years to determine the presence and condition of hazardous waste or substances, obvious contamination, or pollution and, if found by the enforcing agency to be in noncompliance with federal or state laws, takes steps to assure compliance with applicable laws. This subsection (3) shall apply to the lender-owner as long as it makes reasonable efforts to resell the property.

(4) This section shall not affect any liability expressly created under federal or state health or environmental statutes, regulations, permits, or orders.

13-20-802. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds, declares, and determines that changes in the law are necessary and appropriate concerning actions claiming damages, indemnity, or contribution in connection with alleged construction defects. It is the intent of the general assembly that this part 8 apply to these types of civil actions while preserving adequate rights and remedies for property owners who bring and maintain such actions.

Source: L. 2001: Entire part added, p. 388, § 1, effective August 8. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1361, § 1, effective April 25.

13-20-802.5. Definitions. As used in this part 8, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Action” means a civil action or an arbitration proceeding for damages, indemnity, or contribution brought against a construction professional to assert a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third party claim for damages or loss to, or the loss of use of, real or personal property or personal injury caused by a defect in the design or construction of an improvement to real property.

(2) “Actual damages” means the fair market value of the real property without the alleged construction defect, the replacement cost of the real property, or the reasonable cost to repair the alleged construction defect, whichever is less, together with relocation costs, and, with respect to residential property, other direct economic costs related to loss of use, if any, interest as provided by law, and such costs of suit and reasonable attorney fees as may be awardable pursuant to contract or applicable law. “Actual damages” as to personal injury means those damages recoverable by law, except as limited by the provisions of section 13-20-806 (4).

(3) “Claimant” means a person other than the attorney general or the district attorneys of the several judicial districts of the state who asserts a claim against a construction professional that alleges a defect in the construction of an improvement to real property.

(4) “Construction professional” means an architect, contractor, subcontractor, developer, builder, builder vendor, engineer, or inspector performing or furnishing the design, supervision, inspection, construction, or observation of the construction of any improvement to real property. If the improvement to real property is to a commercial property, the term “construction professional” shall also include any prior owner of the commercial property, other than the claimant, at the time the work was performed. As used in this subsection (4), “commercial property” means property that is zoned to permit commercial, industrial, or office types of use.

(5) “Notice of claim” means a written notice sent by a claimant to the last known address of a construction professional against whom the claimant asserts a construction defect claim that describes the claim in reasonable detail sufficient to determine the general nature of the defect, including a general description of the type and location of the construction that the claimant alleges to be defective and any damages claimed to have been caused by the defect.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Construction Defect Action Reform Act", see 30 Colo. Law. 121 (October 2001).

13-20-803.5. Notice of claim process. (1) No later than seventy-five days before filing an action against a construction professional, or no later than ninety days before filing the action in the case of a commercial property, a claimant shall send or deliver a written notice of claim to the construction professional by certified mail, return receipt requested, or by personal service.

(2) Following the mailing or delivery of the notice of claim, at the written request of the construction professional, the claimant shall provide the construction professional and its contractors or other agents reasonable access to the claimant's property during normal working hours to inspect the property and the claimed defect. The inspection shall be completed within thirty days of service of the notice of claim.

(3) Within thirty days following the completion of the inspection process conducted pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, or within forty-five days following the completion of the inspection process in the case of a commercial property, a construction professional may send or deliver to the claimant, by certified mail, return receipt requested, or personal service, an offer to settle the claim by payment of a sum certain or by agreeing to remedy the claimed defect described in the notice of claim. A written offer to remedy the construction defect shall include a report of the scope of the inspection, the findings and results of the inspection, a description of the additional construction work necessary to remedy the defect described in the notice of claim and all damage to the improvement to real property caused by the defect, and a timetable for the completion of the remedial construction work.

(4) Unless a claimant accepts an offer made pursuant to subsection (3) of this section in writing within fifteen days of the delivery of the offer, the offer shall be deemed to have been rejected.

(5) A claimant who accepts a construction professional's offer to remedy or settle by payment of a sum certain a construction defect claim shall do so by sending the construction professional a written notice of acceptance no later than fifteen days after receipt of the offer. If an offer to settle is accepted, then the monetary settlement shall be paid in accordance with the offer. If an offer to remedy is accepted by the claimant, the remedial construction work shall be completed in accordance with the timetable set forth in the offer unless the delay is caused by events beyond the reasonable control of the construction professional.

(6) If no offer is made by the construction professional or if the claimant rejects an offer, the claimant may bring an action against the construction professional for the construction defect claim described in the notice of claim, unless the parties have contractually agreed to a mediation procedure, in which case the mediation procedure shall be satisfied prior to bringing an action.

(7) If an offer by a construction professional is made and accepted, and if thereafter the construction professional does not comply with its offer to remedy or settle a claim for a construction defect, the claimant may file an action against the construction professional for claims arising out of the defect or damage described in the notice of claim without further notice.

(8) After the sending of a notice of claim, a claimant and a construction professional may, by written mutual agreement, alter the procedure for the notice of claim process described in this section.

(9) Any action commenced by a claimant who fails to comply with the requirements of this section shall be stayed, which stay shall remain in effect until the claimant has complied with the requirements of this section.

(10) A claimant may amend a notice of claim to include construction defects discovered after the service of the original notice of claim. However, the claimant must otherwise comply with the requirements of this section for the additional claims.

(11) For purposes of this section, actual receipt by any means of a written notice, offer, or response prepared pursuant to this section within the time prescribed for delivery or service of the notice, offer, or response shall be deemed to be sufficient delivery or service.

(12) Except as provided in section 13-20-806, a claimant shall not recover more than actual damages in an action.

13-20-804. Restriction on construction defect negligence claims. (1) No negligence claim seeking damages for a construction defect may be asserted in an action if such claim arises from the failure to construct an improvement to real property in substantial compliance with an applicable building code or industry standard; except that such claim may be asserted if such failure results in one or more of the following:

(a) Actual damage to real or personal property;
(b) Actual loss of the use of real or personal property;
(c) Bodily injury or wrongful death; or
(d) A risk of bodily injury or death to, or a threat to the life, health, or safety of, the occupants of the residential real property.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit, limit, or impair the following:
(a) The assertion of tort claims other than claims for negligence;
(b) The assertion of contract or warranty claims; or
(c) The assertion of claims that arise from the violation of any statute or ordinance other than claims for violation of a building code.

13-20-805. Tolling of statutes of limitation. If a notice of claim is sent to a construction professional in accordance with section 13-20-803.5 within the time prescribed for the filing of an action under any applicable statute of limitations or repose, then the statute of limitations or repose is tolled until sixty days after the completion of the notice of claim process described in section 13-20-803.5.

Source: L. 2003: Entire section added, p. 1363, § 5, effective April 25.

13-20-806. Limitation of damages. (1) A construction professional otherwise liable shall not be liable for more than actual damages, unless and only if the claimant otherwise prevails on the claim that a violation of the “Colorado Consumer Protection Act”, article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., has occurred; and if:

(a) The construction professional's monetary offer, made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5 (3), to settle for a sum certain a construction defect claim described in a notice of claim is less than eighty-five percent of the amount awarded to the claimant as actual damages sustained exclusive of costs, interest, and attorney fees; or

(b) The reasonable cost, as determined by the trier of fact, to complete the construction professional's offer, made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5, to remedy the construction defect described in the notice of claim is less than eighty-five percent of the amount awarded to the claimant as actual damages sustained exclusive of costs, interest, and attorney fees.

(2) If a construction professional does not substantially comply with the terms of an accepted offer to remedy or an accepted offer to settle a claim for a construction defect made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5 or if a construction professional fails to respond to a notice of claim, the construction professional shall be subject to the treble damages provision of section 6-1-113 (2) (a) (III), C.R.S.; except that a construction professional shall be subject to the treble damages provision only if the claimant otherwise prevails on the claim that a violation of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., has occurred.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the aggregate amount of treble damages awarded in an action under section 6-1-113 (2) (a) (III), C.R.S., and attorney fees awarded to a claimant under section 6-1-113 (2) (b), C.R.S., shall not exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars in any action against a construction professional.

(4) (a) In an action asserting personal injury or bodily injury as a result of a construction defect in which damages for noneconomic loss or injury or derivative noneconomic loss or injury may be awarded, such damages shall not exceed the sum of two hundred fifty thousand dollars. As used in this subsection (4), "noneconomic loss or injury" has the same meaning as set forth in section 13-21-102.5 (2) (b), and "derivative noneconomic loss or injury" has the same meaning as set forth in section 13-21-102.5 (2) (a).

(b) The limitations on noneconomic damages set forth in this subsection (4) shall be adjusted for inflation as of July 1, 2003, and as of July 1 of each year thereafter until and including July 1, 2008. The adjustment made pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall be rounded upward or downward to the nearest ten dollar increment.

(c) As used in paragraph (b) of this subsection (4), "inflation" means the annual percentage change in the United States department of labor, bureau of labor statistics, consumer price index for Denver-Boulder, all items, all urban consumers, or its successor index.

(d) The secretary of state shall certify the adjusted limitation on damages within fourteen days after the appropriate information is available, and such adjusted limitation on damages shall be the limitation applicable to all claims for relief that accrue on or after July 1, 2003.

(5) Claims for personal injury or bodily injury as a result of a construction defect shall not be subject to the treble damages provisions of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of title 6, C.R.S.

(6) In any case in which the court determines that the issue of a violation of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., will be submitted to a jury, the court shall not disclose nor allow disclosure to the jury of an offer of settlement or offer to remedy made under section 13-20-803.5 that was not accepted by the claimant.

(7) (a) In order to preserve Colorado residential property owners' legal rights and remedies, in any civil action or arbitration proceeding described in section 13-20-802.5 (1), any express waiver of, or limitation on, the legal rights, remedies, or damages provided by the "Construction Defect Action Reform Act", this part 8, or provided by the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., as described in this section, or on the ability to enforce such legal rights, remedies, or damages within the time provided by applicable statutes of limitation or repose are void as against public policy.

(b) A waiver, limitation, or release contained in a written settlement of claims, and any recorded notice of such settlement, between a residential property owner and a construction professional after such a claim has accrued shall not be rendered void by this subsection (7).

(c) This subsection (7) applies only to the legal rights, remedies, or damages of claimants asserting claims arising out of residential property and shall not apply to sales or donations of property or services by a bona fide charitable organization that is in compliance with the registration and reporting requirements of article 16 of title 6, C.R.S.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision of this subsection (7) to the contrary, this subsection (7) shall apply only to actions that are governed by the provisions of this part 8, also known as the "Construction Defect Action Reform Act", and shall not be deemed to alter or amend the limitations on damages contained in this part 8, including the limitations on treble damages and attorney fees set forth in this section.

(e) Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to render void any requirement to participate in mediation prior to filing a suit or arbitration proceeding.

13-20-807. Express warranty - not affected. The provisions of this part 8 are not intended to abrogate or limit the provisions of any express warranty or the obligations of the provider of such warranty. The provisions of this part 8 shall apply to those circumstances where an action is filed asserting one or more claims for relief including a claim for breach of warranty; except that, in any such action, section 13-20-806 (7) shall not apply to breach of express warranty claims except to the extent that provisions of the express warranty purport to waive or limit claims for relief other than the breach of express warranty claim. The provisions of this part 8 shall not be deemed to require a claimant who is the beneficiary of an express warranty to comply with the notice provisions of section 13-20-803.5 to request ordinary warranty service in accordance with the terms of such warranty. A claimant who requires warranty service shall comply with the provisions of such warranty.

13-20-808. Insurance policies issued to construction professionals. (1) (a) The general assembly finds and determines that:

(I) The interpretation of insurance policies issued to construction professionals is of vital importance to the economic and social welfare of the citizens of Colorado and in furthering the purposes of this part 8.

(II) Insurance policies issued to construction professionals have become increasingly complex, often containing multiple, lengthy endorsements and exclusions conflicting with the reasonable expectations of the insured.

(III) The correct interpretation of coverage for damages arising out of construction defects is in the best interest of insurers, construction professionals, and property owners.

(b) The general assembly declares that:

(I) The policy of Colorado favors the interpretation of insurance coverage broadly for the insured.

(II) The long-standing and continuing policy of Colorado favors a broad interpretation of an insurer's duty to defend the insured under liability insurance policies and that this duty is a first-party benefit to and claim on behalf of the insured.

(III) The decision of the Colorado court of appeals in General Security Indemnity Company of Arizona v. Mountain States Mutual Casualty Company, 205 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2009) does not properly consider a construction professional's reasonable expectation that an insurer would defend the construction professional against an action or notice of claim contemplated by this part 8.

(IV) For the purposes of guiding pending and future actions interpreting liability insurance policies issued to construction professionals, what has been and continues to be the policy of Colorado is hereby clarified and confirmed in the interpretation of insurance policies that have been and may be issued to construction professionals.

(2) For the purposes of this section:

(a) "Insurance" has the same meaning as set forth in section 10-1-102, C.R.S.

(b) "Insurance policy" means a contract of insurance.

(c) "Insurer" has the same meaning as set forth in section 10-1-102, C.R.S.

(d) "Liability insurance policy" means a contract of insurance that covers occurrences of damage or injury during the policy period and insures a construction professional for liability arising from construction-related work.

(3) In interpreting a liability insurance policy issued to a construction professional, a court shall presume that the work of a construction professional that results in property damage, including damage to the work itself or other work, is an accident unless the property damage is intended and expected by the insured. Nothing in this subsection (3):

(a) Requires coverage for damage to an insured's own work unless otherwise provided in the insurance policy; or

(b) Creates insurance coverage that is not included in the insurance policy.

(4) (a) Upon a finding of ambiguity in an insurance policy, a court may consider a construction professional's objective, reasonable expectations in the interpretation of an insurance policy issued to a construction professional.

(b) In construing an insurance policy to meet a construction professional's objective, reasonable expectations, the court may consider the following:

(I) The object sought to be obtained by the construction professional in the purchase of the insurance policy; and

(II) Whether a construction defect has resulted, directly or indirectly, in bodily injury, property damage, or loss of the use of property.

(c) In construing an insurance policy to meet a construction professional's objective, reasonable expectations, a court may consider and give weight to any writing concerning the insurance policy provision in dispute that is not protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, work-product privilege, or article 72 of title 24, C.R.S., and that is generated, approved, adopted, or relied on by the insurer or its parent or subsidiary company; or an insurance rating or policy drafting organization, such as the insurance services office, inc., or its predecessor or successor organization; except that such writing shall not be used to restrict, limit, exclude, or condition coverage or the insurer's obligation beyond that which is reasonably inferred from the words used in the insurance policy.

(5) If an insurance policy provision that appears to grant or restore coverage conflicts with an insurance policy provision that appears to exclude or limit coverage, the court shall construe the insurance policy to favor coverage if reasonably and objectively possible.

(6) If an insurer disclaims or limits coverage under a liability insurance policy issued to a construction professional, the insurer shall bear the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that:

(a) Any policy's limitation, exclusion, or condition in the insurance policy bars or limits coverage for the insured's legal liability in an action or notice of claim made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5 concerning a construction defect; and

(b) Any exception to the limitation, exclusion, or condition in the insurance policy does not restore coverage under the policy.

(7) (a) An insurer's duty to defend a construction professional or other insured under a liability insurance policy issued to a construction professional shall be triggered by a potentially covered liability described in:

- (I) A notice of claim made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5; or
- (II) A complaint, cross-claim, counterclaim, or third-party claim filed in an action against the construction professional concerning a construction defect.
- (b) (I) An insurer shall defend a construction professional who has received a notice of claim made pursuant to section 13-20-803.5 regardless of whether another insurer may also owe the insured a duty to defend the notice of claim unless authorized by law. In defending the claim, the insurer shall:
  - (A) Reasonably investigate the claim; and
  - (B) Reasonably cooperate with the insured in the notice of claims process.
- (II) This paragraph (b) does not require the insurer to retain legal counsel for the insured or to pay any sums toward settlement of the notice of claim that are not covered by the insurance policy.
- (III) An insurer shall not withdraw its defense of an insured construction professional or commence an action seeking reimbursement from an insured for expended defense cost unless authorized by law and unless the insurer has reserved such right in writing when accepting or assuming the defense obligation.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "H.B. 10-1394: New Law Governing Insurance Coverage for Construction Defect Claims", see 39 Colo. Law. 89 (August 2010).

Because damage to property caused by poor workmanship is generally neither expected nor intended, it may qualify under state law as an occurrence, and liability coverage should apply. Greystone Constr., Inc. v. Nat'l Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 661 F.3d 1272 (10th Cir. 2011).

The definition of accident in subsection (3) does not apply retroactively to expired insurance policies that may still be subject to claims for occurrences within the policy period. Greystone Constr., Inc. v. Nat'l Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 661 F.3d 1272 (10th Cir. 2011).

This section does not apply, therefore, to homeowners' claims because the policy periods of their insurance policies had already expired. Greystone Constr., Inc. v. Nat'l Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 661 F.3d 1272 (10th Cir. 2011).

CLASS ACTIONS

13-20-901. Class actions - appellate review. (1) A court of appeals may, in its discretion, permit an interlocutory appeal of a district court's order that grants or denies class action certification under court rule so long as application is made to the court of appeals within ten days after entry of the district court's order.

(2) An appeal that is allowed under subsection (1) of this section shall not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district court or the court of appeals so orders. If a stay is ordered, all discovery and other proceedings shall be stayed during the pendency of an appeal taken pursuant to this section unless the court ordering the stay finds upon the motion of any party that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice to such party.

ANNOTATION

This section is substantially similar to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(f) and cases applying the federal rule are instructive. The five-factor test outlined in Prado-Steiman ex rel. Prado v. Bush, 221 F.3d 1266 (11th Cir. 2000), is the most inclusive and helpful in determining how the court should exercise its discretion. Clark v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 117 P.3d 26 (Colo. App. 2004).

The five-factor test includes: (1) The “death knell” factor - is the trial court’s ruling dispositive of the litigation because either it effectively prevents the plaintiff from continuing to pursue the matter in that the stakes are too low or it places the defendant in such a position that it would experience irresistible pressure to settle; (2) the substantial weakness factor - has the appellant shown that the trial court’s class certification decision likely constitutes an abuse of discretion; (3) will allowing the appeal permit resolution of an unsettled legal issue important to the particular litigation as well as important in itself; (4) the nature and status of the litigation before the trial court, including the status of discovery, the pendency of relevant motions, and the length of time the matter already has been pending; (5) the likelihood that future events could make immediate appellate review more or less appropriate as well as whether the court views its class certification decision as conditional or subject to revision. Clark v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 117 P.3d 26 (Colo. App. 2004).

Test applied in Clark v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 117 P.3d 26 (Colo. App. 2004).

“[U]nder court rule” in subsection (1) applies not just to C.R.C.P. 23 but also to court rules that prescribe the method of computing the time limit to appeal the grant or denial of class certification. Garcia v. Medved Chevrolet, Inc., 240 P.3d 371 (Colo. App. 2009), aff’d, 263 P.3d 92 (Colo. 2011).

13-20-1002. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares:

- (a) The courts of this state are overworked and subject to overloaded dockets;
- (b) Section 6 of article II of the Colorado constitution guarantees citizens of this state access to the courts of this state; and
- (c) Cases filed by nonresidents of Colorado and having no meaningful relationship to this state are clogging the dockets of the courts and causing delays in cases filed by residents of Colorado.

(2) The general assembly finds that the purposes of this part 10 are:

- (a) To ensure access of Colorado citizens to the courts of Colorado; and
- (b) To avoid burdening the courts of this state with cases involving injuries suffered outside of the state that may be resolved elsewhere.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 401, § 1, effective August 4.

13-20-1003. Definitions. As used in this part 10, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) (a) “Alternative forum” means a functioning governmental division with judicial powers that may provide redress for a claim, without regard to whether the redress provided is equivalent to the redress provided under Colorado law, and that may exercise jurisdiction over the parties.

(b) An alternative forum shall still be an alternative forum if the statute of limitations for that forum has expired.

(2) “Discovery” means the procedures described in chapter 4 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(3) “Resident” means a resident of the state of Colorado or a person who intends to return to Colorado despite establishing temporary residency elsewhere or despite a temporary absence from Colorado, without regard to the person’s country of citizenship or national origin. “Resident” does not mean a person who adopts a residence in Colorado in whole or in part to avoid the application of this part 10.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 402, § 1, effective August 4.

13-20-1004. Forum non conveniens. (1) In any action otherwise properly filed in a court of this state, a motion to dismiss without prejudice under the doctrine of forum non conveniens shall be granted if:

(a) The claimant or claimants named in the motion are not residents of the state of Colorado;

(b) An alternative forum exists;

(c) The injury or damage alleged to have been suffered occurred outside of the state of Colorado;

(d) A substantial portion of the witnesses and evidence is outside of the state of Colorado; and

(e) There is a significant possibility that Colorado law will not apply to some or all of the claims.

(2) In any action otherwise properly filed in a court of this state, a motion to dismiss without prejudice under the doctrine of forum non conveniens may be granted if the court finds that the factor specified in paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section is present and that at least one or more but fewer than all of the factors specified in paragraphs (b) to (e) of subsection (1) of this section are present, and based upon such factors, the court finds that in the interest of judicial economy or for the convenience of the parties, a party’s claim or action should be heard in a forum outside of Colorado.

(3) In determining whether the factors specified in subsection (1) of this section are present, the court may consider evidence outside of the pleadings, but no formal discovery shall be permitted.

(4) (a) The court may set conditions for dismissing a claim or action under this section as the interests of justice may require.

(b) If the statute of limitations in the alternative forum expires while the claim is pending in a court in Colorado, the court shall grant a dismissal under this section only if each defendant waives all defenses that the statute of limitation in the alternative forum has expired.

13-21-101. Interest on damages. (1) In all actions brought to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by any person resulting from or occasioned by the tort of any other person, corporation, association, or partnership, whether by negligence or by willful intent of such other person, corporation, association, or partnership and whether such injury has resulted fatally or otherwise, it is lawful for the plaintiff in the complaint to claim interest on the damages alleged from the date said suit is filed; and, on and after July 1, 1979, it is lawful for the plaintiff in the complaint to claim interest on the damages claimed from the date the action accrued. When such interest is so claimed, it is the duty of the court in entering judgment for the plaintiff in such action to add to the amount of damages assessed by the verdict of the jury, or found by the court, interest on such amount calculated at the rate of nine percent per annum on actions filed on or after July 1, 1975, and at the legal rate on actions filed prior to such date, and calculated from the date such suit was filed to the date of satisfying the judgment and to include the same in said judgment as a part thereof. On actions filed on or after July 1, 1979, the calculation shall include compounding of interest annually from the date such suit was filed. On and after January 1, 1983, if a judgment for money in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries is appealed by the judgment debtor, interest, whether prejudgment or postjudgment, shall be calculated on such sum at the rate set forth in subsections (3) and (4) of this section from the date the action accrued and shall include compounding of interest annually from the date such suit was filed.

(2) (a) If a judgment for money in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries is appealed by a judgment debtor and the judgment is affirmed, interest, as set out in subsections (3) and (4) of this section, shall be payable from the date the action accrued until satisfaction of the judgment.

(b) If a judgment for money in an action to recover damages for personal injuries is appealed by a judgment debtor and the judgment is modified or reversed with a direction that a judgment for money be entered in the trial court, interest, as set out in subsections (3) and (4) of this section, shall be payable from the date the action accrued until the judgment is satisfied. This interest shall be payable on the amount of the final judgment.

(3) The rate of interest shall be certified on each January 1 by the secretary of state to be two percentage points above the discount rate, which discount rate shall be the rate of interest a commercial bank pays to the federal reserve bank of Kansas City using a government bond or other eligible paper as security, and shall be rounded to the nearest full percent. Such annual rate of interest shall be so established as of December 31, 1982, to become effective January 1, 1983. Thereafter, as of December 31 of each year, the annual rate of interest shall be established in the same manner, to become effective on January 1 of the following year.

(4) The rate at which interest shall accrue during each year shall be the rate which the secretary of state has certified as the annual interest rate under subsection (3) of this section.

Editor's note: Portions of subsection (1) of this section were held unconstitutional in Rodriguez v. Schutt, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996). As set forth in the decision, the court held that the last sentence of § 13-21-101 (1) must be read and applied as shown by the strikes and caps as follows:

(1) In all actions brought to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by any person resulting from or occasioned by the tort of any other person, corporation, association, or partnership, whether by negligence or by willful intent of such other person, corporation, association, or partnership and whether such injury has resulted fatally or otherwise, it is lawful for the plaintiff in the complaint to claim interest on the damages alleged from the date said suit is filed; and, on and after July 1, 1979, it is lawful for the plaintiff in the complaint to claim interest on the damages claimed from the date the action accrued. When such interest is so claimed, it is the duty of the court in entering judgment for the plaintiff in such action to add to the amount of damages assessed by the verdict of the jury, or found by the court, interest on such amount calculated at the rate of nine percent per annum on actions filed on or after July 1, 1975, and at the legal rate on actions filed prior to such date, and calculated from the date such suit was filed to the date of satisfying the judgment and to include the same in said judgment as a part thereof. On actions filed on or after July 1, 1979, the calculation shall include compounding of interest annually from the date such suit was filed. On and after January 1, 1983, if a judgment for money in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries is appealed by the judgment debtor, ~~POSTJUDGMENT interest, whether prejudgment or postjudgment, shall be calculated on such sum at the rate set forth in subsections (3) and (4) of this section from the date the action accrued and shall include compounding of interest annually from the date such suit was filed.~~

Law. 1063 and 1307 (1989). For article, "Immunities from Liability for Colorado Nonprofit Organization," see 25 Colo. Law. 37 (May 1996).

Plain language of section requires a nine-percent interest rate for personal injury money judgments that the judgment debtor does not appeal and a market-determined interest rate for both pre- and post-judgment interest for judgments that the judgment debtor does appeal. Rodriguez v. Schutt, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996).

The receipt of interest is not a fundamental right and this section does not affect or create a suspect class. Therefore disparate treatment of similarly situated individuals will be upheld if it has a "rational basis." Rodriguez v. Schutt, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996).

For prejudgment interest, there is no rational basis in fact to distinguish between judgment creditors and debtors depending on whether judgment debtors later appeal. Therefore, section is unconstitutional to the extent that it changes the rate of interest on prejudgment interest if the judgment debtor appeals. Rodriguez v. Schutt, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996).

This section does not result in a deprivation of due process when the trial court based its award of prejudgment interest on future damages on this section. This section does not distinguish between past and future damage awards to calculate prejudgment interest. Prejudgment interest is to compensate the injured party for loss of use of money and to encourage settlement. Therefore, there is a rational basis for awarding prejudgment interest on future damages. Scott v. Matlack, Inc., 1 P.3d 185 (Colo.

App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 39 P.3d 1160 (Colo. 2002).

There is a rational basis for treating postjudgment interest differently depending on whether the judgment debtor appeals. The elimination of financial incentives or disincentives to appeal is a reasonable legislative purpose. Rodriguez v. Schutt, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996).

There is a rational basis for the difference in treatment between this section and § 5-12-102. Colwell v. Mentzer Invs, Inc., 973 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where plaintiff is not entitled to prejudgment interest and the judgment debtor appeals the judgment, plaintiff is entitled to an award of postjudgment interest calculated from the date judgment was entered to the date of satisfaction, and not from the date upon which the action accrued. Sperry v. Field, 133 P.3d 141 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 205 P.3d 365 (Colo. 2009).

Interest in Colorado is a creature of statute and regulated thereby. Denver Horse Importing Co. v. Schafer, 58 Colo. 376, 147 P. 367 (1915); Clark v. Hicks, 127 Colo. 25, 252 P.2d 1067 (1953).

Section must be strictly construed. "Interest statutes, being in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed". City of Boulder v. Stewardson, 67 Colo. 582, 189 P. 1 (1920); Dobbs v. Sugioka, 117 Colo. 218, 185 P.2d 784 (1947); Clark v. Hicks, 127 Colo. 25, 252 P.2d 1067 (1953).

This provision imparts no discretion to the trial court; it must be applied to any judgment resulting from an action for personal injuries. Stemple v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 430 F.2d 178 (10th Cir. 1970); Huffman v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 645 F. Supp. 909 (D. Colo. 1986); Todd v. Bear Valley Vill. Apartments, 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999).

A judgment may be composed of both principal and interest. Security Ins. Co. v. Houser, 191 Colo. 189, 552 P.2d 308 (1976).

Court may correct judgment when requested interest is omitted. It is mandatory on a trial court to include interest pursuant thereto when properly claimed upon entering judgment, and it is not error for a court to correct a judgment by including interest when the omission is called to its attention. Crosby v. Kroeger, 138 Colo. 55, 330 P.2d 958 (1958).

Under C.R.C.P. 60(a), a failure to include interest when entering judgment is an oversight or omission within the terms of the rule. Crosby v. Kroeger, 138 Colo. 55, 330 P.2d 958 (1958).

Since the statute required an award of prejudgment interest and failure to include such interest was merely a ministerial oversight, passage of five years since entry of the award would not prevent the addition of prejudgment interest, even though the original amount of the award had been satisfied. Brooks v. Jackson, 813 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1991).

Interest may be assessed in tort action under Governmental Immunity Act. Lee v. Colo. Dept. of Health, 718 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1986).

Interest recoverable in action for death caused by injuries. Under the provisions of this section, a party seeking damages for the death of his wife alleged to have been occasioned by the tort of another, is entitled to interest on any amount he may recover, the section being sufficiently comprehensive to include all actions of tort founded on injuries to the person, whether nonfatal or fatal. Am. Ins. Co. v. Naylor, 103 Colo. 461, 87 P.2d 260 (1939).

When injury is personal. An injury is personal when it impairs the well-being or the mental or physical health of the victim. Miller v. Carnation Co., 39 Colo. App. 1, 564 P.2d 127 (1977); McCafferty v. Musat, 817 P.2d 1039 (Colo. App. 1990); Herod v. Colo. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins., 928 P.2d 834 (Colo. App. 1996).

Interest is awarded from filing of first complaint when there are two trials. Where judgment in favor of a person who had suffered personal injuries was reversed and a second docket fee had been paid and a second trial had resulted in a verdict for the injured party, he might recover interest from the time the complaint was filed for the first trial, interest having been asked for from the date of the filing of the suit. Am. Ins. Co. v. Naylor, 103 Colo. 461, 87 P.2d 260 (1939); Parrish v. Smith, 109 Colo. 132, 123 P.2d 406 (1942).

Subsection (1) requires interest to be calculated from date action accrued and to be compounded annually from date suit is filed. Smith v. JBJ Ltd., 694 P.2d 352 (Colo. App. 1984).

Simple interest from accrual of cause of action until filing of complaint must be included in initial base amount on which annual compounding is calculated. To do otherwise is to deprive the plaintiff of one year's worth of compounding. Francis v. Dahl, 107 P.3d 1171 (Colo. App. 2005).

Interest on an award for annoyance and discomfort is recoverable from the date of the filing of the complaint. Miller v. Carnation Co., 39 Colo. App. 1, 564 P.2d 127 (1977) (decided prior to 1979 amendment).

Prejudgment interest is in the nature of another item of damages. Houser v. Eckhardt, 35 Colo. App. 155, 532 P.2d 54 (1974), aff'd sub nom., Security Ins. Co. v. Houser, 191 Colo. 189, 552 P.2d 308 (1976); Heid v. Destefano, 41 Colo. App. 436, 586 P.2d 246 (1978); Allstate Ins. Co. v. Starke, 797 P.2d 14 (Colo. 1990).

The legislative purpose behind awarding interest under this section is to compensate the plaintiff for the time value of the amount of his or her judgment. An award of any additional interest above the amount of the final judgement is thus inconsistent with the compensatory purpose of the statute. Morris v. Goodwin, 185 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2008).

This section must be interpreted to provide interest on the amount awarded by the final judgment, regardless of the jury's determination. Morris v. Goodwin, 185 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2008).

Interest payable only to extent of insurer's liability. This section does not obligate an insurer to pay prejudgment interest on the judgment where it would increase the liability of the insurer to an amount over that for which it had contracted. Houser v. Eckhardt, 35 Colo. App. 155, 532 P.2d 54 (1974), aff'd sub nom., Security Ins. Co. v. Houser, 191 Colo. 189, 552 P.2d 308 (1976); Allstate Ins. Co. v. Starke, 797 P.2d 14 (Colo. 1990); Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Ross, 180 P.3d 427 (Colo. 2008).

This section applies to actions which accrue before the effective date of this section but which are filed after such effective date. Briggs v. Cornwell, 676 P.2d 1252 (Colo. App. 1983); Martinez v. Jesik, 703 P.2d 638 (Colo. App. 1985); McCafferty v. Musat, 817 P.2d 1039 (Colo. App. 1990).

An injury is not personal when inflicted on property. Miller v. Carnation Co., 39 Colo. App. 1, 564 P.2d 127 (1977).

Injuries properly determined as "personal" and not "property" in case where toxic contamination to property caused homeowners inconvenience and loss of peace of mind based on their fear that contaminants could be present in portions of their homes and the perceived stigma attached to homes in the neighborhood. Therefore, the trial court was correct in awarding prejudgment interest on damages at the rate allowed for cases involving "personal injuries". Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

Statute applies to claims accruing before the effective date of statute. Briggs v. Cornwell, 676 P.2d 1252 (Colo. App. 1983).

Plaintiff entitled to interest on damages from date of accident even though it occurred prior to July 1, 1979. Application of the 1979 amendments does not violate the constitutional ban on retroactive laws. Meller v. Heil Co., 745 F.2d 1297 (10th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1206, 104 S. Ct. 2390, 81 L. Ed.2d 347 (1984).

Interest on damages were properly found to begin accruing from the date defendant discovered that contamination had crossed its property boundary and not from the date plaintiff learned of the contamination. The court found that a holding to the contrary would only encourage wrongdoers to stall or hide important information in order to avoid prejudgment interest. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

The award of prejudgment interest serves not only the purpose of compensating a party for the loss of use of money but is also used to encourage the settlement of cases both pre- and post-trial. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

Statute applies to action for strict liability in tort. Huffman v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 645 F. Supp. 909 (D. Colo. 1986).

Subsection (1) does not distinguish for the purpose of awarding interest between future and past damage awards. Because the statute itself does not distinguish between future and past damage awards, the general assembly did not intend that these concepts be applied. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992); Scholz v. Metro. Pathologists, P.C., 851 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993).

The fact that past and future damages awards are based on separate findings under § 13-64-204 does not affect the plain language of subsection (1), which requires the court to add prejudgment interest to any personal injury verdict. Mumford v. Hughes, 852 P.2d 1289 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (1) does not differentiate for the purpose of awarding interest between an award of past and future damages. The language of subsection (1) requires the court to add nine percent interest to any personal injury verdict. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

Since the interest statute does not distinguish between future and past damage awards, and damages for past and future losses were routinely awarded at the time of its enactment, it must be assumed that the general assembly intended to award prejudgment interest in all cases in which a jury verdict award was made. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992); Mumford v. Hughes, 852 P.2d 1289 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award of prejudgment interest on wrongful death damages from time of death is appropriate. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993).

Subsection (1) does not apply to damages resulting from a breach of contract. Shannon v. Colo. Sch. of Mines, 847 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1992).

Even though an underinsured motorist policy is a contract and therefore would not fall under this section, the claim under that policy may be premised upon a tort claim for bodily injury and therefore accrue interest at the nine percent interest rate dictated by this section. Here, plaintiff's underinsured motorist claim was for damages resulting from the tort of another person, even though it also involved the contract with his insurer; therefore, he was entitled to the higher interest rate set in this section rather than that for contractual claims under § 5-12-102. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

Section applies to judgments based on claims for underinsured motorist benefits resulting from personal injuries. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

This section unambiguously requires recalculation of interest at the variable rate set under subsections (3) and (4) if the verdict is appealed, even though the variable rate may be less than the nine percent statutory rate. Ackerman v. Power Equip. Co., 881 P.2d 451 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section, as amended, is clear and unambiguous in its requirement that personal injury judgment interest is to be recalculated at the variable interest rate set by the secretary of state in the event of an appeal. Ackerman v. Power Equip. Co., 881 P.2d 451 (Colo. App. 1994); Rodriguez v. Schutt, 896 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 914 P.2d 921 (Colo. 1996).

The award of prejudgment interest serves not only the purpose of compensating a party for the loss of use of money but is also used to encourage the settlement of cases both pre- and post-trial. Stevens v. Humana of Delaware, Inc., 832 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1992).

Prejudgment interest is an element of damages compensating the personal injury plaintiff for all injuries caused by defendant's tortious conduct, including the lost time value of his damages award. It is not "interest" as that term is defined and generally understood. Brabson v. United States, 859 F. Supp. 1360 (D. Colo. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 73 F.3d 1040 (10th Cir. 1996).

Plaintiffs gave up their right to interest against tortfeasor when they voluntarily settled with that tortfeasor and thereby avoided a double award of interest. McKown-Katy v. Rego Co., 776 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd in part on other grounds, 801 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1990); Gutierrez v. Bussey, 837 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1992).

"Willful intent" standard of subsection (1) is met upon a showing of "wanton" conduct, as specified in § 13-21-102, entitling the plaintiff to prejudgment interest on exemplary damages. Bradley v. Guess, 797 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991).

Court erred in denying motion for prejudgment interest as of date of accident where plaintiff's underlying injury was personal in nature and plaintiff would have been entitled to prejudgment interest absent attorney's malpractice. McCafferty v. Musat, 817 P.2d 1039 (Colo. App. 1990).

Defamation is a personal injury and not an injury to property; therefore prejudgment interest shall be automatically added to an award of damages for defamation. Brooks v. Jackson, 813 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1991).

This section authorizes interest to be compounded only on an annual basis. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993).

Interest on a damage award shall be calculated at a nine percent fixed rate per annum until the judgment is satisfied except in cases of an appeal in which case subsections (3) and (4) provide for a variable rate of interest. Evinger v. Greeley Gas Co., 902 P.2d 941 (Colo. App. 1995).

Costs not award of damages within the meaning of this section. Steele v. Law, 78 P.3d 1124 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in DeLong v. City & County of Denver, 195 Colo. 27, 576 P.2d 537 (1978); Equal Emp. Opportunity Comm'n v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 634 F.2d 1273 (10th Cir. 1980); People v. Kluver, 199 Colo. 511, 611 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1980); Martin v. Porak, 638 P.2d 853 (Colo. App. 1981); Jackson v. Marsh, 551 F. Supp. 1091 (D. Colo. 1982).

II. REQUEST IN COMPLAINT.

Interest will be awarded from filing of complaint if requested. This section expressly provides for the awarding of interest from the date of the filing of the complaint in a personal injury action if requested in the complaint. Callahan v. Slavsky, 153 Colo. 291, 385 P.2d 674 (1963).

If not requested in the complaint interest is waived. Plaintiffs not having demanded interest prior to the entry of judgment, waived this demand which the section provides must be made in the complaint. Clark v. Hicks, 127 Colo. 25, 252 P.2d 1067 (1953).

It is sufficient to demand interest in the prayer for relief. A prayer is a necessary part of a claim for relief under C.R.C.P. 8 and where the prayer is for "interest and costs of suit", it is sufficient to meet the requirements of this section entitling a plaintiff to interest on the verdict from the date of filing a complaint. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

To permit an amendment of the complaint to add interest more than 10 days after the judgment had been entered was error. Green v. Hoffman, 126 Colo. 104, 251 P.2d 933 (1952); Clark v. Hicks, 127 Colo. 25, 252 P.2d 1067 (1953).

To permit amendment of the complaint after the verdict but before judgment was entered was error. Clark v. Buhring, 761 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1988).

This section does not dictate the date to which future losses must be discounted. Four Corners Helicopters, Inc. v. Turboneca, S.A., 979 F.2d 1434 (10th Cir. 1992).

III. INAPPLICABLE ACTIONS.

This section does not apply to property or contractual damage. The Colorado statute distinguishes between damages arising from personal injury and contractual or property damages. Interest is not permitted from the date of filing of the complaint where property damages are involved. Stemple v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 430 F.2d 178 (10th Cir. 1970).

Even though an underinsured motorist policy is a contract and therefore would not fall under this section, the claim under that policy may be premised upon a tort claim for bodily injury and therefore accrue interest at the nine percent interest rate dictated by this section. Here, plaintiff's underinsured motorist claim was for damages resulting from the tort of another person, even though it also involved the contract with his insurer; therefore, he was entitled to the higher interest rate set in this section rather than that for contractual claims under § 5-12-102. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

Court may not add prejudgment interest to accepted offer of judgment. When, in a personal injury action, a plaintiff accepts an offer of judgment, the court is precluded from adding prejudgment interest to the amount agreed upon by the parties. Heid v. Destefano, 41 Colo. App. 436, 586 P.2d 246 (1978).

When a party accepts a settlement, trial court is precluded from adding prejudgment interest to the amount agreed upon by the parties. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd on other grounds, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

Interest is not recoverable in an action for damages occasioned by fraud and deceit. Moreland v. Austin, 138 Colo. 78, 330 P.2d 136 (1958); Holland Furnace Co. v. Robson, 157 Colo. 347, 402 P.2d 628 (1965).

Nor in action for breach of warranty. Interest is only recoverable in the absence of contract, in the cases enumerated in this section. An action in damage for a breach of warranty is not one of the enumerated cases. Denver Horse Importing Co. v. Schafer, 58 Colo. 376, 147 P. 367 (1915).

Nor in an action for false representations. Interest is a creature of statute, and this section makes no provision for interest on unliquidated damages which may be awarded in actions for false representations. Moreland v. Austin, 138 Colo. 78, 330 P.2d 136 (1958).

Interest will not be awarded against a municipal corporation. The word "corporation" as used in this section does not include a municipal corporation. City of Boulder v. Stewardson, 67 Colo. 582, 189 P. 1 (1920).

For inapplicability to nonresident injured in his own state with Colorado merely as forum, see Stemple v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 430 F.2d 178 (10th Cir. 1970).

This section does not apply to punitive (exemplary) component of damage award, but only to such damages as are properly deemed compensatory. Seward Const. Co., Inc. v. Bradley, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991); Burgess v. Mid-Century Ins. Co., 841 P.2d 325 (Colo. App. 1992).

A limited exception to the interest formula determining the accumulation of prefilng and prejudgment interest on an award, which formula is created in this section, can be found in § 13-64-302 (2) and applies to certain rulings under the Colorado Health Care Availability Act. Ochoa v. Vered, 212 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2009).

13-21-102. Exemplary damages. (1) (a) In all civil actions in which damages are assessed by a jury for a wrong done to the person or to personal or real property, and the injury complained of is attended by circumstances of fraud, malice, or willful and wanton conduct, the jury, in addition to the actual damages sustained by such party, may award him reasonable exemplary damages. The amount of such reasonable exemplary damages shall not exceed an amount which is equal to the amount of the actual damages awarded to the injured party.

(b) As used in this section, “willful and wanton conduct” means conduct purposefully committed which the actor must have realized as dangerous, done heedlessly and recklessly, without regard to consequences, or of the rights and safety of others, particularly the plaintiff.

(1.5) (a) A claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section may not be included in any initial claim for relief. A claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section may be allowed by amendment to the pleadings only after the exchange of initial disclosures pursuant to rule 26 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure and the plaintiff establishes prima facie proof of a triable issue. After the plaintiff establishes the existence of a triable issue of exemplary damages, the court may, in its discretion, allow additional discovery on the issue of exemplary damages as the court deems appropriate.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1.5) shall not apply to any civil action or arbitration proceeding described in section 13-21-203 (3) (c) or 13-64-302.5 (3).

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the court may reduce or disallow the award of exemplary damages to the extent that:

- (a) The deterrent effect of the damages has been accomplished; or
- (b) The conduct which resulted in the award has ceased; or
- (c) The purpose of such damages has otherwise been served.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the court may increase any award of exemplary damages, to a sum not to exceed three times the amount of actual damages, if it is shown that:

(a) The defendant has continued the behavior or repeated the action which is the subject of the claim against the defendant in a willful and wanton manner, either against the plaintiff or another person or persons, during the pendency of the case; or

(b) The defendant has acted in a willful and wanton manner during the pendency of the action in a manner which has further aggravated the damages of the plaintiff when the defendant knew or should have known such action would produce aggravation.

(4) Repealed.

(5) Unless otherwise provided by law, exemplary damages shall not be awarded in administrative or arbitration proceedings, even if the award or decision is enforced or approved in an action commenced in a court.

(6) In any civil action in which exemplary damages may be awarded, evidence of the income or net worth of a party shall not be considered in determining the appropriateness or amount of such damages.

Subsection (4) held unconstitutional. An exemplary damages award is a private property right, and the requirements of subsection (4) constitute a taking of a judgment creditor's private property without just compensation in violation of the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution and article II, section 15 of the Colorado Constitution. Kirk v. Denver Pub. Co., 818 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1991).

Section does not violate due process clauses of the federal or state constitutions. Malandris v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 703 F.2d 1152 (10th Cir. 1981); Post Office v. Portec, Inc., 913 F.2d 802 (10th Cir. 1990); Estate of Korf v. A.O. Smith Harvestore Prods., 917 F.2d 480 (10th Cir. 1990) (all cases decided under section in effect prior to 1986 amendment).

Legislative purpose behind this section is to avoid purely punitive civil awards. Wagner v.

Dan Unfug Motors, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 102, 529 P.2d 656 (1974).

It is evident from the plain language of subsection (1)(a) that the general assembly intended to limit the punitive damages awarded on a particular tort claim to the amount of actual damages awarded on that same claim. Hensley v. Tri-QSI Denver Corp., 98 P.3d 965 (Colo. App. 2004).

Legislative purpose behind subsection (6), as part of 1986 "tort reform" package, included mitigating and alleviating the need for parties to bring financial records into court for review by the opposing side. Corbetta v. Albertson's, Inc., 975 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1999).

Discovery of defendant's financial records not permitted. Corbetta v. Albertson's, Inc., 975 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1999).

Punitive damages in civil action not double punishment. Although punitive damages are awarded in civil cases in order to punish the defendant, an award of punitive damages in a civil action does not constitute a prohibited "double punishment", as the double punishment prohibition applies only to criminal actions. E. F. Hutton & Co. v. Anderson, 42 Colo. App. 497, 596 P.2d 413 (1979).

Nor violative of equal protection. Allowing punitive damages in a civil action does not violate one's right to equal protection of the law. E. F. Hutton & Co. v. Anderson, 42 Colo. App. 497, 596 P.2d 413 (1979).

Section not void for vagueness. Statutory terms "circumstances of fraud" and "a wanton and reckless disregard" are sufficiently clear to persons of ordinary intelligence to afford a practical guide for behavior and are capable of application in an even-handed manner. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Federal constitutional proscription against cruel and unusual punishment not applicable to a civil proceeding involving a punitive damages claim ancillary to a civil cause of action. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Exemplary damages are allowed, not as compensation to the injured party for the wrong done, but as a punishment of the wrongdoer as an example to others. Ark Valley Alfalfa Mills, Inc. v. Day, 128 Colo. 436, 263 P.2d 815 (1953); Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979); Seward Const. Co., Inc. v. Bradley, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991).

The purpose of punitive damages is not to compensate an injured plaintiff, but to punish the defendant and to deter others from similar conduct in the future. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Exemplary damages are awarded for the purpose of punishing persons who have in- fllicted injuries with malice. French v. Deane, 19 Colo. 504, 36 P. 609 (1894); Starkey v. Dameron, 92 Colo. 420, 21 P.2d 1112 (1933); Barnes v. Lehman, 118 Colo. 161, 193 P.2d 273 (1948); Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, 26 L. Ed.2d 60 (1970).

Purpose of entering judgment for exemplary damages against a defendant in a civil action is to punish and penalize him for certain wrongful and aggravated conduct and to serve as a warning to other possible offenders. Beebe v. Pierce, 185 Colo. 34, 521 P.2d 1263 (1974).

The general purposes of exemplary damages are punishment of the defendant and deterrence against the commission of similar offenses by the defendant or others in the future. Mince v. Butters, 200 Colo. 501, 616 P.2d 127 (1980); Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992).

This section appears to be the general assembly's means of requiring a minimum degree of civility which is necessary for a civilized society to ensure, in some small measure, that the recourse to more violent methods is not taken by its inhabitants who feel defrauded or, in a sense, destroyed by another. Mailloux v. Bradley, 643 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1982).

The nature and purposes of punitive damages are sufficiently removed from the criminal process as to render inapplicable the traditional procedural safeguards provided to one accused of crime. Furthermore, § 13-25-127 provides an additional safeguard by requiring that the statutory elements of a punitive damages claim be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Colorado law allows, but does not compel, an award of punitive damages under certain circumstances. King v. Horizon Corp., 701 F.2d 1313 (10th Cir. 1983); Vickery v. Vickery, ___ P.3d ___, (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 266 P.3d 390 (Colo. 2011).

Exemplary damages are available in Colorado only pursuant to statute. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982); Bennett v. Greeley Gas Co., 969 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1998).

Reasonable exemplary damages may be awarded injured party in addition to actual damages. Kresse v. Bennett, 151 Colo. 549, 379 P.2d 807 (1963).

In order to recover exemplary damages a plaintiff must make out a case under this section. Ark Valley Alfalfa Mills, Inc. v. Day, 128 Colo. 436, 263 P.2d 815 (1953).

Award of exemplary damages is discretionary. The award of exemplary damages is optional and rests in the discretion of the trier of fact. A judge or jury may find fraud, malice, insult or wanton and reckless disregard of the injured party's rights and feelings and still not award exemplary damages. Torrez v. Rizo, 34 Bankr. 886 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

In a trial to the court, the allowance or denial of exemplary damages is for the court's determination as the trier of fact. Sanders v. Knapp, 674 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1983).

Plaintiff has no right to any exemplary damages and award is in the discretion of the trier of fact. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Andrews, 736 P.2d 40 (Colo. App. 1987); Cook v. Rockwell Intern. Corp., 755 F. Supp. 1468 (D. Colo. 1991).

There is record support for court's findings that landlord acted with wanton and reckless disregard. Accordingly, no abuse of discretion in court's award of punitive damages. Boulder Meadows v. Saville, 2 P.3d 131 (Colo. App. 2000).

One-to-one limitation in subsection (1)(a) of exemplary damages to actual damages applies equally to bench and jury trials. No language in relevant statutory provision compels construction that only a jury may try the issue of exemplary damages. Sky Fun 1 v. Schuttloffel, 27 P.3d 361 (Colo. 2001).

Plaintiff must show actual damages. What are reasonable exemplary damages in Colorado is determined by reference to the actual damages awarded. In order to be entitled to exemplary damages, it is necessary for plaintiffs to prove that the defendant's misconduct caused them to suffer actual damages to their person or property. Failure to prove the existence of actual damages means that no exemplary damages may be recovered. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 29 Colo. App. 386, 486 P.2d 477 (1971); W. Cities Broad. v. Schueller, 830 P.2d 1074 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 849 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1993).

An award of exemplary damages cannot stand unless there has been an award of "actual damages". Wagner v. Dan Unfug Motors, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 102, 529 P.2d 656 (1974).

Punitive damages may not be awarded absent an award of actual damages. Defeyter v. Riley, 671 P.2d 995 (Colo. App. 1983); Kimmey v. Peek, 678 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section permits an award for punitive damages only in conjunction with an underlying and independent civil action in which actual damages are assessed for some legal wrong to the injured party. Palmer v. A.H. Robins, Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984); Vogel v. Carolina Intern., Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985); Denman v. Burlington Northern R. Co., 761 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1988); Bradley v. Guess, 797 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991).

Actual damages normally contemplated both general and special damages. Wagner v.

Dan Unfug Motors, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 102, 529 P.2d 656 (1974).

Exemplary damages predicated upon either special or general damages. Purpose of this section is as well fulfilled when exemplary damages are predicated upon special damages as it is when they are awarded in conjunction with general damages. Wagner v. Dan Unfug Motors, Inc., 35 Colo. App. 102, 529 P.2d 656 (1974).

Section applies only when a civil wrong has been attended by aggravating circumstances. By its own terms, it has no application in the absence of a successful underlying claim for actual damages. Harding Glass Co. v. Jones, 44 Colo. 437, 640 P.2d 1123 (1982); Adams v. Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc., 686 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1983); Moe v. Avions Marcel Dassault-Breguet Aviation, 727 F.2d 917 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 853, 105 S. Ct. 176, 83 L. Ed.2d 110 (1984).

Not every action entitling a plaintiff to actual damages gives rise to a claim for exemplary damages. Ristine v. Blocker, 15 Colo. App. 224, 61 P. 486 (1900); Ark Valley Alfalfa Mills, Inc. v. Day, 128 Colo. 436, 263 P.2d 815 (1953).

Where an action is not an action in damages, exemplary damages cannot be recovered. Aaberg v. H.A. Harman Co., 144 Colo. 579, 358 P.2d 601 (1960).

An action of a successor trustee against a former trustee for misappropriation of trust funds is suit in law that permits exemplary damages. The former trustee is under a duty to pay money immediately and unconditionally, which is one of the instances where a trust action is an action in law, not equity. Since the suit is in law, the plaintiff may recover exemplary damages. Peterson v. McMahon, 99 P.3d 594 (Colo. 2004).

Strict liability in tort. Punitive damages are recoverable in connection with a strict liability claim founded on section 402A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts where an injury results from the marketing of a product in flagrant disregard of consumer safety. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Trademark infringement. The jury finding of punitive damages on claim of trademark infringement is supported if the evidence is sufficient to warrant a determination beyond a reasonable doubt that the infringer acted with a wanton and reckless disregard of the rights of the plaintiff. Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Good-year Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F. Supp. 1219 (D. Colo. 1976), modified on other grounds and aff'd, 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977), cert. dismissed, 434 U.S. 1052, 98 S. Ct. 905, 54 L. Ed.2d 805 (1978).

The Ski Safety Act of 1979 does not preclude exemplary damages in civil actions arising out of skiing injuries. Pizza v. Wolf Creek Ski Dev. Corp., 711 P.2d 671 (Colo. 1985).

The cap on damages cap in the Ski Safety Act of 1979 does not apply to exemplary damages awarded under this section in skiing-related wrongful death actions. Stamp v. Vail Corp., 172 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007).

In an action in contract exemplary damages are not allowable. Westesen v. Olathe State Bank, 75 Colo. 340, 225 P. 837 (1924); Williams v. Speedster, Inc., 175 Colo. 73, 485 P.2d 728 (1971); Postal Instant Press v. Jackson, 658 F. Supp. 739 (D. Colo. 1987) (federal district court disagreeing with Colorado court of appeals decision allowing such damages in contract actions in Davies v. Bradley, 676 P.2d 1242 (1983); Collister v. Ashland Oil Co., Inc., 687 P.2d 525 (1984); Podleski v. Mortgage Finance, Inc., 709 P.2d 18 (1985); Denver Publ'g Co. v. Kirk, 729 P.2d 1004 (1986); Cox v. Bertsch, 730 P.2d 889 (1986); Mortgage Fin., Inc. v. Podleski, 742 P.2d 900 (Colo. 1987).

No exemplary damages in rescission action based on fraud. Under this section, the recovery of exemplary damages is limited to civil actions in which damages shall be assessed, hence an action for rescission of a contract on the ground of fraud and for return of the consideration paid is not an action in damages and exemplary damages cannot be recovered. Aaberg v. H.A. Harman Co., 144 Colo. 579, 358 P.2d 601 (1960).

Exemplary damages may be awarded though the action sounds in contract. Davies v. Bradley, 676 P.2d 1242 (Colo. App. 1983); Riva Ridge Apts. v. Robert G. Fisher Co., 745 P.2d 1034 (Colo. App. 1987).

Plaintiff's claim transcended the contract, and was not precluded by the economic loss rule, where a triable issue of fact existed regarding alarm company's willful and wanton failure to respond to a burglary and fire. U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. Sonitrol Mgmt. Corp., 192 P.3d 543 (Colo. App. 2008).

Exemplary damages awarded in breach of contract action where defendant's actions constituted a wrongful act in reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights and feelings. Collister v. Ashland Oil Co., Inc., 687 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1984).

Taking property under claim of right will not justify exemplary damages. The mere taking of property under a claim of right over the protest of one in possession is not sufficient to establish grounds for exemplary damages in a conversion action. Am. Nat'l Bank v. Etter, 28 Colo. App. 511, 476 P.2d 287 (1970).

But refusal of insurer to return stolen automobile does. Where, upon the recovery of a stolen automobile, the insurer against loss by theft refused to deliver it to the owner unless the latter accepted its terms of settlement, it was held that this constituted "a wanton and reckless disregard of the injured party's rights" as those words are used in this section. Pennsylvania Fire

Ins. Co. v. Levy, 85 Colo. 565, 277 P. 779 (1929).

Exemplary damage award upheld in a conversion action where the taking constituted a wrongful act in reckless disregard of the injured party's rights. Clark v. Morris, 710 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1985).

Since eminent domain statute nowhere provides for exemplary damages, such damages are not to be allowed in a special statutory proceeding for condemnation. Ossman v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 184 Colo. 360, 520 P.2d 738 (1974).

Nor are they allowed in inverse condemnation action. An inverse condemnation action is in the nature of a special statutory proceeding and is to be tried as if it were an eminent domain proceeding. Thus, the exemplary damages statute, which authorizes the award of exemplary damages in "all civil actions", is not applicable to an inverse condemnation action. Ossman v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 184 Colo. 360, 520 P.2d 738 (1974).

Exemplary damages are available in a suit for loss of consortium. The words, "wrong done to the person, or to personal or real property" were unquestionably intended to apply to any type of tort, and no reason is apparent why such damages should not be recoverable where the injury complained of is loss of consortium. Kohl v. Graham, 202 F. Supp. 895 (D. Colo. 1962).

The wrong done need not be a physical injury. Any one who wrongfully induces a husband to desert and abandon his wife commits an actionable injury against the wife. Such injury is a wrong done to the wife as an individual — as a person. This section does not specify that the wrong shall be a physical or bodily injury. On the contrary, it allows exemplary damages when "the injury complained of shall be attended by circumstances of fraud, malice or insult, or a wanton and reckless disregard of the injured party's rights and feelings". These words clearly import wrongs and injuries other than mere bodily wounds or pecuniary losses. They include as well injuries affecting the mind and sensibilities of the individual which are often more grievous and painful than mere material injuries. The whole language of this section, construed together, forbids that the words "wrong done to the person", should be restricted to physical or bodily injuries. Williams v. Williams, 20 Colo. 51, 37 P. 614 (1894).

Exemplary damages not available in an equitable action. The award of exemplary damages in equity actions, or incidental equitable relief, is generally not allowable. Miller v. Kaiser, 164 Colo. 206, 433 P.2d 772 (1967).

Punitive damages are not recoverable in actions in equity. Kaitz v. District Court, 650 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1982).

Plaintiff could not recover damages under this section and also recover damages under § 6-1-113 (2)(a), where purposes of both statutes are to punish and deter. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992).

Exemplary damages recoverable where conduct constituting breach of contract is also a tort for which exemplary damages are recoverable. McCrea & Co. Auctioneers, Inc. v. Dwyer Auto Body, 799 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1989).

The standard for awarding punitive damages is not the same as that for the tort of outrageous conduct, therefore, the court did not err in granting a motion to dismiss the outrageous conduct claim while denying the motion to dismiss the punitive damage claim. Orjias v. Stevenson, 31 F.3d 995 (10th Cir. 1994) (decided under law in effect prior to the 1986 amendment).

No question but that an invasion of privacy claim is for "a wrong done to the person," and exemplary damages were properly awarded. Borquez v. Robert C. Ozer, P.C., 923 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997).

Exemplary damages may be awarded on civil conspiracy claim, an independent tort that seeks actual damages. Double Oak Constr., L.L.C. v. Cornerstone Dev. Int'l, L.L.C., 97 P.3d 140 (Colo. App. 2003).

Exemplary damages may be awarded if the injury is attended by circumstances of fraud, malice, or willful and wanton conduct. Where plaintiff testified that she believed the defendant was holding her money and that it would be available for her future medical and burial expenses and her other daughter's medical expenses, but where defendant put plaintiff's money into her own account and then used it to buy an annuity in her own name and to make a loan to a third party, the court properly awarded exemplary damages. Eads v. Dearing, 874 P.2d 474 (Colo. App. 1993).

Evidence supports jury's finding that manufacturer acted with wanton and reckless disregard of injured plaintiff's rights. Gruntmeir v. Mayrath Indus., Inc., 841 F.2d 1037 (10th Cir. 1988) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

Disallowance of punitive damages under the theory that the award would serve no purpose cannot take place until such damages have actually been awarded. Cook v. Rockwell Intern. Corp., 755 F. Supp. 1468 (D. Colo. 1991).

Portion of exemplary damage award from malicious prosecution suit that was awarded to state pursuant to subsection (4) was not subject to attorney fee claim under equitable common fund doctrine. Since state had no legal interest in award until after judgment, it was not afforded any opportunity to intervene before judgment. Schenck v. Minolta Office Sys., Inc., 873 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1993).

Employer waived statutory right to be free from arbitral award of punitive damages. Employer sought order compelling arbitration under rules of national association of security dealers, which permitted arbitrator to award damages and other relief, and did not challenge employee's right to recover punitive damages through the arbitration proceedings. Padilla v. D.E. Frey & Co., Inc., 939 P.2d 475 (Colo. App. 1997).

Court is given authority to increase the award if defendant is shown to have continued the behavior or repeated the action which is the subject of the claim against the defendant in a willful and wanton manner during the pendency of the case, thus the court may consider actions of the defendant after the alleged negligence, but only actions that occurred during the pendency of the case. Bennett v. Greeley Gas Co., 969 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1998).

To increase an award of exemplary damages under subsection (3)(b), the actions of defendant need not relate to "the action which is the subject of the claim". Martin v. Union Pac. R.R., 186 P.3d 61 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 209 P.3d 185 (Colo. 2009).

Despite supreme court decision that subsection (4) was unconstitutional, plaintiff's attorney, who failed to cross-appeal the award, was not entitled to claim a right to attorney fees payable from award granted to state. Schenck v. Minolta Office Sys., Inc., 873 P.2d 18 (Colo. App. 1993).

This section does not preclude an award against one who has also been charged with criminal misconduct. Moreover, because an exemplary damages award is authorized in order to serve as an example to others, a finding by the trial court that the defendant will not repeat the conduct does not preclude the trial court from exercising its discretion to award exemplary damages. Razi v. Schmitt, 36 P.3d 102 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Miller v. Carnation Co., 33 Colo. App. 62, 516 P.2d 661 (1973); Butler v. Behaeghe, 37 Colo. App. 282, 548 P.2d 934 (1976); Roberts v. Bucher, 41 Colo. App. 138, 584 P.2d 97 (1978); Campbell v. Jenkins, 43 Colo. App. 458, 608 P.2d 363 (1979); Dorney v. Harris, 482 F. Supp. 323 (D. Colo. 1980); Rodriguez v. Bar-S Food Co., 539 F. Supp. 710 (D. Colo. 1982); Winters v. City of Commerce City, 648 P.2d 175 (Colo. App. 1982); Shriver v. Carter, 651 P.2d 436 (Colo. App. 1982); H & K Auto. Supply Co. v. Moore & Co., 657 P.2d 986 (Colo. App. 1982); Sunward Corp. v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 568 F. Supp. 602 (D. Colo. 1983); Asplin v. Mueller, 34 Bankr. 869 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983); Dodds v. Frontier Chevrolet Sales & Serv. Inc., 676 P.2d 1237 (Colo. App.

1983); Holter v. Moore and Co., 681 P.2d 962 (Colo. App. 1983); Bill Manning, Inc. v. Denver West Bank and Trust, 697 P.2d 403 (Colo. App. 1984); Florey v. District Court, 713 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1985); Francis v. Steve Johnson Pontiac-GMC-Jeep, 724 P.2d 84 (Colo. App. 1986); Padilla v. Ghuman, 183 P.3d 653 (Colo. App. 2007).

II. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS.

To justify exemplary damages there must be some wrong motive accompanying the wrongful act, or a reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights. Eisenhart v. Ordean, 3 Colo. App. 162, 32 P. 495 (1893); French v. Deane, 19 Colo. 504, 36 P. 609 (1894); Republican Publ'g Co. v. Conroy, 5 Colo. App. 262, 38 P. 423 (1894); Gray v. Linton, 38 Colo. 175, 88 P. 749 (1906); Carlson v. McNeil, 114 Colo. 78, 162 P.2d 226 (1945); Ellis v. Buckley, 790 P.2d 875 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 920, 111 S. Ct. 296, 112 L. Ed.2d 249 (1990).

The act causing the injuries must be done with an evil intent and with the purpose of injuring the plaintiff, or with such a wanton and reckless disregard of his rights as evidences a wrongful motive. Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979); Mari v. Wagner Equip. Co., Inc., 721 P.2d 1208 (Colo. App. 1986).

Malice may be inferred from reckless and wanton acts. Malice, as used in this section, may be found by the jury or the court from the reckless and wanton acts of the injuring party, such as disclose an utter disregard of consequences, aside from any intentional malice in its odious or malevolent sense. Cohen v. Fox, 26 Colo. App. 55, 141 P. 504 (1914).

Or willful misconduct or an entire want of care. Willful misconduct or that entire want of care which would raise the presumption of a conscious indifference to consequences is necessary to support a claim for punitive damages. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Lundin, 3 Colo. 94 (1876) (decided prior to the earliest source of § 13-21-102, L. 1899, p. 64, § 1).

Malice may be actual or implied, and in general it may be implied whenever there is a deliberate intention to do a grievous wrong without legal justification or excuse. Williams v. Williams, 20 Colo. 51, 37 P. 614 (1894).

Where the defendant was conscious of his conduct and the existing conditions, and knew or should have known that injury would result, the statutory requirements of this section are met. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Conduct which is merely negligent cannot serve as basis for exemplary damages. Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979).

An assumption that malice is an essential element in a finding of exemplary damages is incorrect. Clark v. Small, 80 Colo. 227, 250 P. 385 (1926).

It is sufficient if defendant knew or should have known injury would probably result.

"If, conscious of his conduct and existing conditions, defendant knew, or should have known, that the injury would probably result, the requirements of this section (wanton and reckless disregard) are met". Clark v. Small, 80 Colo. 227, 250 P. 385 (1926); Foster v. Redding, 97 Colo. 4, 45 P.2d 940 (1935); Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979); Bodah v. Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., 724 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1986).

Evidence showing a reckless disregard for plaintiff's rights and feelings. From the language of this section it will be seen that that part of the verdict assessing exemplary damages could be upheld if malice, fraud, or insult were entirely wanting. It would be sufficient if the jury believed that the injury inflicted on defendant was attended by circumstances showing a wanton and reckless disregard of his rights and feelings. Coryell v. Lawson, 25 Colo. App. 432, 139 P. 25 (1914).

Evidence of conduct occurring after the event creating liability is material to the jury's assessment of punitive damages if the entire course of conduct, including the portion that occurred after the accident, tended to show that the defendant had acted heedlessly, recklessly, and without regard to the consequences or the safety of others. Jones v. Cruzan, 33 P.3d 1262 (Colo. App. 2001).

The feelings mentioned in this section may be physical as well as mental, and "wanton" means wilful and intentional. Clark v. Small, 80 Colo. 227, 250 P. 385 (1926).

"Wanton and reckless" disregard as used in this statute means conduct that creates a substantial risk of harm to another and is purposefully performed with an awareness of the risk in disregard of the consequences. Tri-Aspen Constr. Co. v. Johnson, 714 P.2d 484 (Colo. 1986); Juarez v. United States, 798 F.2d 1341 (10th Cir. 1986); Miller v. Solaglas California, Inc., 870 P.2d 559 (Colo. App. 1993); Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

Employer's act of sending supervisors to deliver employee's notice of termination at home where he was recovering from an apparent heart attack, of which the employer knew and stated that he did not care, and without prior warning to or discussion with the employee, supported an award of exemplary damages. Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

"Wanton and reckless disregard" question for jury. Whether a defendant's intoxication constitutes wanton and reckless disregard for the rights and safety of others is generally a question of fact for the jury, and, where there is supportive evidence, the court should instruct the jury on this issue. Butters v. Mince, 43 Colo. App. 89, 605 P.2d 922 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 200 Colo. 501, 616 P.2d 127 (1980); Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

The sufficiency of evidence to justify an award of punitive damage is a question of law, in which the totality of the evidence should be viewed in the light most supportive of the verdict. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Malice not element of trademark infringement claim. Viewing the award of punitive damages as relating to a trademark infringement claim, it is not necessary that there be proof of "evil intent" because malice is not an element of that claim. Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 408 F. Supp. 1219 (D. Colo. 1976), modified on other grounds and aff'd, 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977), cert. dismissed, 434 U.S. 1052, 98 S. Ct. 905, 54 L. Ed.2d 805 (1978).

Prima facie proof of triable issue on liability for punitive damages is necessary to discover information relating to the defendant's financial status, and it may be established through discovery, by evidentiary means, or by an offer of proof. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Relevancy threshold for evidence in punitive damages claim. In the context of a punitive damages claim, the relevancy threshold is satisfied if the offered evidence tends to make more probable than not the existence of any of the statutory elements. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Evidence that manufacturer hired an advertising agency to encourage media publicity favorable to all of its products, including its intrauterine device, demonstrated a motive on the part of the manufacturer to profit by making exaggerated statements regarding the safety and efficacy of its product and therefore such evidence of the lay publicity campaign was relevant in establishing the statutory predicate for an award of punitive damages. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Standard of proof. Evidence in consolidated actions for injuries arising from the use of intrauterine contraceptive devices manufactured and marketed by the defendant supported findings that the devices were defective and were misrepresented with respect to safety and efficacy and that the defendant was negligent, but did not support a finding beyond a reasonable doubt, as required by § 13-25-127 (2), that the defendant caused injury to plaintiffs by fraud, malice or insult, or wanton and reckless disregard of their rights and feelings so as to award exemplary damages to the plaintiffs. Hawkinson

v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 595 F. Supp. 1290 (D. Colo. 1984).

Allowance or denial of exemplary damages rests in discretion of trier of fact. While the question of the sufficiency of evidence to justify an award of exemplary damages is a question of law, the allowance or denial of such damages rests in the discretion of the trier of fact. Mince v. Butters, 200 Colo. 501, 616 P.2d 127 (1980).

While mere negligence cannot support an award of exemplary damages, repeated failure to correct a known dangerous condition may convert mere negligence into wanton and reckless disregard. Jacob v. Commonwealth Highland Theatres, Inc., 738 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1986); Concord Realty v. Cont'l Funding, 776 P.2d 1114 (Colo. 1989).

This is so if the failure to act creates a substantial risk of harm to another and purposefully occurs with awareness of the risk in disregard of consequences or if the defendant, while conscious of its conduct and cognizant of existing conditions, knew or should have known that injury would probably result from its omission. Jacob v. Commonwealth Highland Theatres, Inc., 738 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1986).

Evidence regarding a defendant's economic status is not an essential element of proof for an award of exemplary damages. Evans v. Thompson, 762 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988).

Court shall submit the question of punitive damages to the jury where the plaintiff has shown evidence of fraud, malice, or wanton and reckless conduct on the part of the defendant. There is no need to show proof of the defendant's financial condition to make out a claim for punitive damages. Amber Props. v. Howard Elec. & Mech., 775 P.2d 43 (Colo. App. 1988).

Evidence held sufficient to support finding of "willful and wanton" misconduct. Hence, directed verdict for defendant was improper. Miller v. Byrne, 916 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1995).

Wrongful motive was shown, in case alleging bad-faith breach of insurance contract, by evidence that defendant insurer knew or should have known that injury would result from its actions. S. Park Aggregates, Inc. v. Nw. Nat. Ins. Co., 847 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1992).

The "circumstances of fraud" required for punitive damages under subsection (1)(a) are established if, in a fraudulent concealment case, a jury finds that the elements of fraud are established. Berger v. Sec. Pac. Info. Sys., Inc., 795 P.2d 1380 (Colo. App. 1990).

Willful and wanton conduct includes conduct that creates a substantial risk of harm to another and is purposefully performed with an awareness of the risk in disregard of the consequences. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

"Willful and wanton" standard held satisfied where evidence supported a finding that defendant negotiated liability releases for himself to the detriment of a corporation of which he was a director, and disregarded the corporation's solvency on the date of a distribution of assets. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

"Wanton and reckless" standard held satisfied by defendants' conduct in supervision (or lack of supervision) of company-sponsored Christmas party at which plaintiff was injured in a fight. Bradley v. Guess, 797 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1989).

Wanton and reckless disregard of tenant's rights and feelings shown where mobile park owner continued to request tenant to perform maintenance it knew she was unable to perform and made no attempt to accommodate her before posting notice to quit. Punitive damages award necessary to deter landlord and other landlords from discriminating against persons with disabilities. Boulder Meadows v. Saville, 2 P.3d 131 (Colo. App. 2000).

Award of exemplary damages against defendant cannot stand since verdict was for defendant based on the jury's finding that plaintiff was more than fifty percent negligent. White v. Hansen, 837 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1992).

An award of exemplary damages rests in the discretion of the trier of fact, be that the jury or the trial court. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

In an action based upon the unintentional conduct of the defendant, it is not relevant that the trier of fact decides that the defendant engaged in willful and wanton conduct for purposes of awarding exemplary damages under this section. If the trier of fact determines the plaintiff's negligence is greater or equal to defendant's negligence, judgment must be entered in favor of the defendant. White v. Hansen, 837 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1992).

The statutory reference to damages assessed is synonymous with the total compensatory amount prior to adjustments for any negligence of the plaintiff and the reference to damages awarded equates to the reduced compensatory amount. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Exemplary damages are limited to damages recovered in accordance with an order for judgment, or the reduced compensatory amount. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Subsection (1) mandates a one-to-one limitation of exemplary damages to "actual damages awarded", measured by the amount of compensatory damages after reduction for comparative negligence and pro rata liability by the court. Sprung v. Adcock, 903 P.2d 1224 (Colo. App. 1995).

While evidence of a continuing course of conduct may buttress a claim for exemplary damages, the absence of such evidence does not preclude such an award if the statutory elements are met by other sufficient proof. Bonidy v. Vail Valley Ctr. for Aesthetic Dentistry, P.C., 186 P.3d 80 (Colo. App. 2008).

III. AMOUNT.

Exemplary damages cannot be accurately measured. Carlson v. McNeil, 114 Colo. 78, 162 P.2d 226 (1945).

There is no definite, precise ratio governing the relationship of actual damages to exemplary damages. Mailloux v. Bradley, 643 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1982).

Jury may apportion exemplary damages among multiple defendants, recognizing the differing degree of culpability or the existence or nonexistence of malice on an individual basis. The amounts need not be identical. Ajay Sports, Inc. v. Casazza, 1 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2000).

Exemplary damages must bear some relation to the compensatory damages awarded. Starkey v. Dameron, 92 Colo. 420, 22 P.2d 640 (1933); Barnes v. Lehman, 118 Colo. 161, 193 P.2d 273 (1948); Ark Valley Alfalfa Mills, Inc. v. Day, 128 Colo. 436, 263 P.2d 815 (1953); Montgomery v. Tufford, 165 Colo. 18, 437 P.2d 36 (1968); Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, 26 L. Ed.2d 60 (1970); Big O Tire Dealers, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 561 F.2d 1365 (10th Cir. 1977), cert. dismissed, 434 U.S. 1052, 98 S. Ct. 905, 54 L. Ed.2d 805 (1978); Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979).

Nominal damages alone are sufficient to support an award of exemplary damages. Carey v. After the Gold Rush, 715 P.2d 803 (Colo. App. 1986).

Factors which guide determination of reasonable award. Although no precise formula can be utilized in the determination of the reasonableness of an award of exemplary damages the factors which guide the determination are: (1) The nature of the act which caused the injury; (2) the economic status of the defendant; and (3) the deterrent effect of the award on others. Frick v. Abell, 198 Colo. 508, 602 P.2d 852 (1979); Mailloux v. Bradley, 643 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1982); Vogel v. Carolina Intern., Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985).

In determining the amount which should be awarded as punitive damages, the severity of the defendant's wrong, as well as the extent of the defendant's assets, must be considered to ensure that the award will punish the defendant. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980); Mailloux v. Bradley, 643 P.2d 797 (Colo. App. 1982).

Reasonableness of the award must be ascertained by examining the facts of the case to discover if the jury was impermissibly motivated by prejudice or properly guided by the purposes for exemplary damages, namely to deter and punish wrongful conduct. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984); Vogel v. Carolina Intern, Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985).

Test for excessiveness of award. The crucial question is whether the punitive award is so excessive that it shocks the judicial conscience or leads to an inescapable inference that it resulted from improper passion or prejudice on the part of the jury. Malandris v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 703 F.2d 1152 (10th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 824, 104 S. Ct. 92, 78 L. Ed.2d 99 (1983).

Test applied in Post Office v. Portec, Inc., 913 F.2d 802 (10th Cir. 1990); Estate of Korf v. A.O. Smith Harvestore Prods., 917 F.2d 480 (10th Cir. 1990) (both cases decided under section in effect prior to 1986 amendment).

Costs of litigation and attorney fees which were the consequence of the aggravated nature of the offense may under certain circumstances be considered in setting the amount of exemplary damages. Beebe v. Pierce, 185 Colo. 34, 521 P.2d 1263 (1974); Davies v. Bradley, 676 P.2d 1242 (Colo. App. 1983).

Behavior during the pendency of the case may be considered. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Widely disproportionate exemplary damages indicate jury prejudice. Exemplary damages must be fairly proportionate to actual damages and if there is a wide disproportion, it shows that the jury was motivated by prejudice. Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, 26 L. Ed.2d 60 (1970).

This rule requires that a verdict for exemplary damages be separately stated, in order to provide a basis for determining its reasonableness. Montgomery v. Tufford, 165 Colo. 18, 437 P.2d 36 (1968).

In most jurisdictions the requirement that there be proportion between the general award and the exemplary award is used as a test so as to allow the court to set aside verdicts which it regards as excessive under the facts and the evidence presented. Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, 26 L. Ed.2d 60 (1970).

The proportion must be substantially equal but it does not have to be a fixed or definite mathematical ratio. The courts invariably examine and use the ratio, together with the particular facts presented, in order to ascertain whether the exemplary damage award seems unreasonable. Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, 26 L. Ed.2d 60 (1970).

Generally greater exemplary damages are allowed in defamation cases. There is no definitive Colorado case dealing with defamation. Other jurisdictions which generally require a reasonable relationship between exemplary and general damages have upheld exemplary award in libel cases in much higher proportion than the 4 to 1 ratio awarded. The Colorado court has not laid down a hard and fast rule which requires that the present verdict be upset. The jury was at liberty to conclude that the defendants deliberately and premeditatedly set out to discredit the plaintiff so as to deter him in his effort to establish a competing organization. There is no basis for concluding that the jury verdict resulted from passion or prejudice, and the disproportion in the award does not by itself or in conjunction with the other evidence raise any such inference. Wegner v. Rodeo Cowboys Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 369 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd and reh'g denied, 417 F.2d 881 (10th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 903, 90 S. Ct. 1688, L. Ed.2d 60 (1970).

Defendant's financial status inadmissible in assessing compensating damages. In suits involving the assessment of compensatory damages, evidence of a defendant's financial status is inadmissible. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Discovery of defendant's financial records not permitted. In view of legislative intent to end practice of requiring parties to bring financial records into court for review by the opposing side, in connection with punitive damages as well as with compensatory damages, discovery of the defendant's tax returns could not have led to admissible evidence and should not have been allowed. Corbetta v. Albertson's, Inc., 975 P.2d 718 (Colo. 1999).

New trial warranted where verdict manifestly inadequate. If the verdict is manifestly inadequate, or so small in amount as to clearly and definitely indicate that the jury neglected to take into consideration evidence of the plaintiff's injuries, pain and suffering, and resulting disability, if any; or if the record indicates that the jury was influenced by prejudice, passion, or other improper considerations; or if the jury was improperly instructed on the elements of compensatory damages, then a new trial on the issue of damages would be warranted. Mince v. Butters, 200 Colo. 501, 616 P.2d 127 (1980).

If damages are excessive plaintiff may consent to reduction and avoid reversal. It is not error in such a case to rule that a judgment be reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial; provided, however, that if plaintiff so elect he may consent to the reduction of said damages and final amended judgment will then be entered accordingly. Barnes v. Lehman, 118 Colo. 161, 193 P.2d 273 (1948).

For when unreasonable exemplary damages will not be sustained; see Starkey v. Dameron, 92 Colo. 420, 21 P.2d 1112 (1933); Kresse v. Bennett, 151 Colo. 549, 379 P.2d 807 (1963); Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 29 Colo. App. 386, 486 P.2d 477 (1971); W. Cities Broad. v. Schueller, 830 P.2d 1074 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 849 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1993).

Evidence regarding a defendant's economic status is not an essential element of proof for an award of exemplary damages but merely a factor to be considered. Evans v. Thompson, 762 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1988).

"Wanton" conduct under subsection (1)(a) is equivalent to "willful" conduct under § 13-21-101 (1). Bradley v. Guess, 797 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991).

But prejudgment interest may not be added to exemplary component of damage award. The victim's right to compensation for an injury suffered accrues before judgment, making prejudgment interest appropriate; however, the right to an award of punitive damages, which serves an entirely different purpose, does not exist until time of judgment. The fact that both components are part of a single claim tied to a single act of the defendant does not alter their separate character. Seward Const. Co., Inc. v. Bradley, 817 P.2d 971 (Colo. 1991); Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Exemplary damages are not directly subject to reduction under comparative negligence statute. Reduction of award under § 13-21-111 is based on plaintiff's own conduct, whereas an award of exemplary damages under this section is based on the defendant's misconduct and different principles apply. However, interplay among this section, § 13-21-111, and § 13-21-111.5 may produce a similar result. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

The plaintiff's comparative negligence should not be directly applied to reduce exemplary damages. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

The amount of reasonable exemplary damages may not exceed the amount of the actual damages awarded. Graphic Directions, Inc. v. Bush, 862 P.2d 1020 (Colo. App. 1993).

The amount of exemplary damages — statutorily limited to the amount of "actual damages awarded" — should not exceed the amount of compensatory damages after such damages have been reduced by judicial application of the comparative negligence and pro rata damages statutes. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Exemplary damages are not subject to prejudgment interest. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Amount of actual damages awarded includes prejudgment interest. The award of compensatory damages includes the application of statutorily mandated additions and reductions to the jury's assessment of total damages. Vickery v. Evans, 266 P.3d 390 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court erred by increasing exemplary damages award without granting a hearing to defendant. Under subsection (3)(a), exemplary damages can be increased only if defendant continued the behavior in a willful and wanton manner. Without a hearing concerning conduct during the pendency of the case, the trial court could not have determined whether "willful and wanton manner" had been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Blood v. Qwest Servs. Corp., 224 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 252 P.3d 1071 (Colo. 2011).

Trial court committed error when it considered, over defendant's objections, evidence of defendant's income and net worth in its determination of punitive damages. This section expressly prohibits consideration of a party's net worth or income in deciding whether exemplary damages are appropriate. Accordingly, upon remand, such evidence may not be considered. Razi v. Schmitt, 36 P.3d 102 (Colo. App. 2001).

IV. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

The one-year limitation of former § 13-80-104 applied to prayers for punitive damages. Sherwood v. Graco, Inc., 427 F. Supp. 155 (D. Colo. 1977).

Punitive damages can only be obtained in action for wrongful death upon proper averment and proof under this section. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

The jury is charged with the responsibility of determining the proper amount of exemplary damages. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 29 Colo. App. 386, 486 P.2d 477 (1971).

The award of exemplary damages may be excessive or unreasonable as a matter of law. Leo Payne Pontiac, Inc. v. Ratliff, 29 Colo. App. 386, 480 P.2d 477 (1971).

Whether there is any evidence to justify the finding of exemplary damages, is a question for the court. If there is none, it is error to submit the question to the jury. Eisenhart v. Ordean, 3 Colo. App. 162, 32 P. 495 (1893); Moody v. Sindlinger, 27 Colo. App. 290, 149 P. 263 (1915); Reyher v. Mayne, 90 Colo. 586, 10 P.2d 1109 (1932).

Where record demonstrated sufficient evidence from which a juror could conclude, beyond a reasonable doubt, that insurer's actions were willful and wanton, decision of trial court to submit question of punitive damages to jury would be upheld. Surdyka v. DeWitt, 784 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1989).

Because reliance on advice of counsel or consultants was only relevant to, not dispositive of, the element of intent in engaging in the acts that led to damages, and proof of such reliance would not require that defendant prevail on, or the court dismiss, plaintiffs' claim, it was not an affirmative defense. Trial court did not err, therefore, in admitting the reliance evidence and instructing the jury that it could consider that evidence in regard to punitive damages. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

It is error to submit the question of punitive damages to the determination of the jury in the absence of evidence of any requisite element for the application of the rule. Reyher v. Mayne, 90 Colo. 586, 10 P.2d 1109 (1932).

Bifurcated trial on issue of liability for punitive damages in products liability suit. In products liability claim, defendant did not make an adequate showing of past punitive damages awards arising out of the same course of conduct to warrant granting a bifurcated trial on the issue of punitive damages in order to avoid any prejudice to the defendant on the issue of liability. Palmer v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 684 P.2d 187 (Colo. 1984).

Court's following instruction to jury approved: "Malice may be implied when there is a deliberate intention to do a grievous wrong without legal justification or excuse". McAllister v. McAllister, 72 Colo. 28, 209 P. 788 (1922).

Erroneous instruction. An instruction that "in law a wrongful act done intentionally, without a legal justification, is done maliciously", is erroneous. To justify exemplary damages there must be some wrong motive accompanying the wrongful act, or a reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights. French v. Deane, 19 Colo. 504, 36 P. 609 (1894).

When an action for damages is tried to the court without a jury by consent of the parties, the court may, in a proper case, award exemplary damages under this section. Calvat v. Franklin, 90 Colo. 444, 9 P.2d 1061 (1932).

Evidence of malice met the requirement of this section in an action for injuries allegedly sustained in an assault upon plaintiff by defendant. Minowitz v. Failing, 109 Colo. 182, 123 P.2d 417 (1942).

Evidence held insufficient. Evidence of "fraud, malice or insult, or a wanton and reckless disregard of the injured party's rights and feelings", held insufficient to support a judgment for exemplary damages under this section. Rosenbaum v. Mathews, 113 Colo. 307, 156 P.2d 843 (1945); Spurlock v. United Airlines, 330 F. Supp. 228 (D. Colo. 1971).

Admissibility of evidence in libel action to mitigate exemplary damages. Where the plaintiff in a libel action seeks exemplary damages he can recover such damages only upon proof of actual malice upon the part of the defendant, or a reckless disregard by him of the plaintiff's rights and feelings and in such case, the defendant, not as a justification, but for the sole purpose of mitigating exemplary damages, may introduce evidence to the contrary. Bearman v. People, 91 Colo. 486, 16 P.2d 425 (1932).

Evidence of potential nonparty harm may be considered in a reprehensibility analysis as part of a due process test for exemplary damages awards, as set forth in BMW of N. Am., Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559 (1996). The decision of the U.S. supreme court in Philip Morris USA v. Williams, 549 U.S. 346 (2007), does not preclude such use of potential nonparty harm evidence. Blood v. Qwest Servs. Corp., 224 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 252 P.3d 1071 (Colo. 2011).

Right to damages under this section must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. S. Park Aggregates, Inc. v. Nw. Nat. Ins. Co., 847 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1992); Sky Fun 1, Inc. v. Schuttloffel, 8 P.3d 570 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 27 P.3d 361 (Colo. 2001).

Failure of trial court to specifically state that the evidence supported findings leading to imposition of punitive damages beyond a reasonable doubt was not fatal, where the findings otherwise led inexorably to that conclusion. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Where evidence supported findings leading to imposition of punitive damages under this section, as well as under another statute, the fact that the other statute was held not to apply did not affect the validity of the award. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Award of punitive damages was proper, and punitive damages were not impermissibly awarded on a breach-of-contract claim, where the complaint alleged not only breach of a contract of sale but also conversion of the property subject to the contract and where the trial court specifically found that the defendants had acted willfully and wantonly in connection with the conversion claim. Flexisystems, Inc. v. Am. Standards Testing Bureau, Inc., 847 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1992).

Sufficient evidence was shown to uphold the award of exemplary damages where there was evidence that defendant, a nursing home administration firm, actively sought to recruit its clients' patients for defendants' own facility. Life Care Centers v. E. Hampden Assoc., 903 P.2d 1180 (Colo. App. 1995).

Evidence was sufficient to uphold jury award of exemplary damages against creditor to company whose goods were held in debtor's warehouse for sale on consignment where: Creditor who had seized and sold all goods in the warehouse had not relied on the consigned goods in extending credit to debtor; creditor knew of debtor's consignment business and required debtor to keep separate inventories of owned goods and consignment goods; creditor knew that goods seized included consigned goods; creditor kept no records of seized goods it sold despite actual knowledge that others claimed ownership of such goods; creditor had sent letters containing false and misleading information to consigners; and creditor had withheld information from its own attorneys when seeking advice on how to proceed. However, trebling of exemplary damages was improper because creditor's retention of sale proceeds under a claim of right was not a continuation of objectionable behavior during the pendency of the lawsuit. Eurpac Serv. Inc. v. Republic Acceptance Corp., 37 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2000).

No abuse of discretion where trial court denied a motion for a mistrial made on the ground of references to insurer's assets where jury did not award exemplary damages, the statement was made on cross examination, the question was not repeated, and the court directed the jury to disregard the question. Lunsford v. W. States Life Ins., 919 P.2d 899 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court abused its discretion when it denied plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint to add a claim for exemplary damages where amended complaint satisfied the burden of proof set forth in § 13-21-203 (3)(c)(I). Stamp v. Vail Corp., 172 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007).

Summary judgment was improper where a triable issue of fact existed on alarm company's willful and wanton failure to respond to burglary and fire, notwithstanding contractual limitation of liability that precluded a claim based on simple negligence. U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. Sonitrol Mgmt. Corp., 192 P.3d 543 (Colo. App. 2008).

V. AGAINST WHOM AWARDED.

Exemplary damages cannot be awarded against one who has not participated in the offense. Ristine v. Blocker, 15 Colo. App. 224, 61 P. 486 (1900).

A principal is not liable for such damages because of the acts of his agent. All the cases discussing the question proceed on the hypothesis that punitive damages are not awarded by way of compensation to the sufferer, but are visited as a punishment on the offender and to serve as a warning to subsequent wrongdoers. Such being the fundamental basis of the doctrine it has always been adjudged and we have been cited to no case, and know of none, wherein a principal has been held liable for exemplary damages because of the wanton and oppressive act or of the malicious intent of his agent. Ristine v. Blocker, 15 Colo. App. 224, 61 P. 486 (1900); Holland Furnace Co. v. Robson, 157 Colo. 347, 402 P.2d 628 (1965).

Unless such acts are authorized or ratified. The general assembly did not intend to enact that in all civil actions for wrongs done to the person or to property, exemplary damages might be assessed, but only in those cases where the circumstances show fraud, malice, insult or a wanton reckless disregard of the injured party's rights or feelings. On well settled principles, this can only occur where the suit is brought directly against the wrongdoer who alone can exhibit the intent, and to whom alone can be imputed, and against whom only can be proved the fraud, the malice, the insult or the wantonness which is a condition precedent to the assessment of such damages. This section therefore, does not extend to actions brought against a principal for wrongs committed by his servant unless the record exhibits a mandate from which the authority to thus act can be deduced or the principal afterwards confirms what has been done. Ristine v. Blocker, 15 Colo. App. 224, 61 P. 486 (1900).

When principal may be liable for act of agent. A principal cannot be held liable in exemplary damages for the act of an agent unless it is shown that it (a) authorized or approved the servant's tortious act; or (b) approved of or participated in the act; or (c) failed to exercise proper care in the selection of its servant. Malandris v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 703 F.2d 1152 (10th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 824, 104 S. Ct. 92, 78 L. Ed.2d 99 (1983).

This rule applies to actions against railroads. This section neither directs nor permits the assessment of exemplary damages against a principal for the wrong done by his agent, and it follows the same rule should be applied, the same principle invoked, and the same result reached in an action brought against a railroad company when the basis for the assessment of exemplary damages is to be found only in circumstances showing fraud, malice, insult or reckless disregard of consequences by the agent in which the employer, the railroad company, could not participate. Admitting always the exception unless there be some order, direction or affirmance which is a prerequisite in the case of a suit against an individual principal, the rule must be the same in both cases. Ristine v. Blocker, 15 Colo. App. 224, 61 P. 486 (1900).

Absent an agreement by the parties that state arbitration law should govern, subsection (5) restricting an arbitrator's power to award punitive damages does not apply to an action under the Federal Arbitration Act. Pyle v. Sec. U.S.A., Inc., 758 F. Supp. 638 (D. Colo. 1990).

13-21-102.5. Limitations on damages for noneconomic loss or injury. (1) The general assembly finds, determines, and declares that awards in civil actions for noneconomic losses or injuries often unduly burden the economic, commercial, and personal welfare of persons in this state; therefore, for the protection of the public peace, health, and welfare, the general assembly enacts this section placing monetary limitations on such damages for noneconomic losses or injuries.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Derivative noneconomic loss or injury" means nonpecuniary harm or emotional stress to persons other than the person suffering the direct or primary loss or injury.

(b) "Noneconomic loss or injury" means nonpecuniary harm for which damages are recoverable by the person suffering the direct or primary loss or injury, including pain and suffering, inconvenience, emotional stress, and impairment of the quality of life. "Noneconomic loss or injury" includes a damage recovery for nonpecuniary harm for actions brought under section 13-21-201 or 13-21-202.

(3) (a) In any civil action other than medical malpractice actions in which damages for noneconomic loss or injury may be awarded, the total of such damages shall not exceed the sum of two hundred fifty thousand dollars, unless the court finds justification by clear and convincing evidence therefor. In no case shall the amount of noneconomic loss or injury damages exceed five hundred thousand dollars. The damages for noneconomic loss or injury in a medical malpractice action shall not exceed the limitations on noneconomic loss or injury specified in section 13-64-302.

(b) In any civil action, no damages for derivative noneconomic loss or injury may be awarded unless the court finds justification by clear and convincing evidence therefor. In no case shall the amount of such damages exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars.

(c) (I) The limitations on damages set forth in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection (3) shall be adjusted for inflation as of January 1, 1998, and January 1, 2008. The adjustments made on January 1, 1998, and January 1, 2008, shall be based on the cumulative annual adjustment for inflation for each year since the effective date of the damages limitations in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection (3). The adjustments made pursuant to this subparagraph (I) shall be rounded upward or downward to the nearest ten-dollar increment.

(II) As used in this paragraph (c), “inflation” means the annual percentage change in the United States department of labor, bureau of labor statistics, consumer price index for Denver-Boulder, all items, all urban consumers, or its successor index.

(III) The secretary of state shall certify the adjusted limitation on damages within fourteen days after the appropriate information is available, and:

(A) The adjusted limitation on damages shall be the limitation applicable to all claims for relief that accrue on or after January 1, 1998, and before January 1, 2008; and

(B) The adjusted limitation on damages as of January 1, 2008, shall be the limitation applicable to all claims for relief that accrue on and after January 1, 2008.

(IV) Nothing in this subsection (3) shall change the limitations on damages set forth in section 13-64-302, or the limitation on damages set forth in section 33-44-113, C.R.S.

(4) The limitations specified in subsection (3) of this section shall not be disclosed to a jury in any such action, but shall be imposed by the court before judgment.

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the recovery of compensatory damages for physical impairment or disfigurement.

(6) (a) (I) In any claim for breach of contract, damages for noneconomic loss or injury or for derivative noneconomic loss or injury are recoverable only if:

(A) The recovery for such damages is specifically authorized in the contract that is the subject of the claim; or

(B) In any first-party claim brought against an insurer for breach of an insurance contract, the plaintiff demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant committed willful and wanton breach of contract.

(II) For purposes of this paragraph (a), “willful and wanton breach of contract” means that:

(A) The defendant intended to breach the contract;

(B) The defendant breached the contract without any reasonable justification; and

(C) The contract clearly indicated that damages for noneconomic loss or injury or for derivative noneconomic damages or loss were within the contemplation or expectation of the parties.

(b) Except for the breach of contract damages that are permitted pursuant to subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (6), nothing in this subsection (6) shall be construed to prohibit one or more parties from waiving the recovery of damages for noneconomic loss or injury or for derivative noneconomic loss or injury on a breach of contract claim so long as the waiver is explicit and in writing.

(c) The limitations on damages set forth in subsection (3) of this section shall apply in any civil action to the aggregate sum of any noneconomic damages awarded under this section for breach of contract including but not limited to bad faith breach of contract.

(d) In any civil action in which an award of damages for noneconomic loss or injury or for derivative noneconomic loss or injury is made on a breach of contract claim, the court shall state such award in the judgment separately from any other damages award.

(e) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (6), nothing in this subsection (6) shall be construed to govern the recovery of noneconomic damages on a tort claim for bad faith breach of contract.

Constitutionality of limitation. The provisions of subsection (3) limiting the amount recoverable for noneconomic damages does not violate equal protection or due process under either the state or federal constitutions or access to the courts under the state constitution. Scharrel v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 949 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1997); Stewart v. Rice, 25 P.3d 1233 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 47 P.3d 316 (Colo. 2002).

Limitation in this section is subject to waiver. Where defendant insurance company did not argue for applicability of this section at trial, did not object to a jury instruction on special damages, and made no significant argument concerning the issue on appeal, the issue was deemed waived and the jury's award of $900,000 in special damages was allowed to stand. Giampapa v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 64 P.3d 230 (Colo. 2003).

Cap on noneconomic damages imposed by this section applies to the liability share of each defendant and does not act as cap on the total amount a plaintiff may recover. General Elec. Co. v. Niemet, 866 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant cannot be held liable for more than its pro rata share of damages even where it is permissible to exceed the damages cap. Hoffman v. Ford Motor Co., 690 F. Supp. 2d 1179 (D. Colo. 2010).

The intent of this section is to limit the amount of damages for which each party must account, not to allow persons to escape accountability. Niemet v. General Elec. Co., 843 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section does not limit a defendant's liability based upon the number of plaintiffs. Several claimants, each of whom suffered separate and distinct injuries caused by the same tortious conduct of the same liable party, may each recover noneconomic damages up to the statutory cap. Palmer v. Diaz, 214 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2009).

In order to harmonize subsections (2)(b) and (3)(a) with (5), it is necessary to determine separately damages of a noneconomic nature for physical impairment and disfigurement from the noneconomic loss or injury defined in subsection (2)(b). By such means, the limitation on recoverable damages contained in subsection (3)(a) and the unlimited recovery for physical impairment and disfigurement as provided for in subsection (5) can be harmonized. Herrera v. Gene's Towing, 827 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1992); Ledstrom by and through Ledstrom v. Keeling, 10 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 1998).

"Thin-skulled plaintiff" rule applies to damages under this section. Award of damages for non-economic loss should not have been reduced because of the plaintiff's unique psychological makeup or preexisting degenerative bone condition. Giampapa v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 12 P.3d 839 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 64 P.3d 230 (Colo. 2003).

The Health Care Availability Act, §§ 13-64-101 through 13-64-503, limits the total recovery for all noneconomic loss or injury to $250,000, including any such loss or injury resulting from physical impairment or disfigurement. Plaintiffs may not recover for a separate category of damages for physical impairment and disfigurement in addition to the statutory categories set forth in §13-64-204. Ledstrom by and through Ledstrom v. Keeling, 10 F. Supp.2d 1195 (D. Colo. 1998) (disagreed in Preston v. Dupont, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001), where Colorado supreme court disagreed with federal court).

However, damages for physical impairment and disfigurement are subject to the Health Care Availability Act's one million dollar damages limitation. Wallbank v. Rothenberg, 74 P.3d 413 (Colo. App. 2003).

Noneconomic damages in the Health Care Availability Act in § 13-64-302 are not limited by the general damages cap in this section nor by the damages cap in § 13-64-302. Damages for physical impairment and disfigurement in a medical malpractice action are not limited and properly constitute a separate category for the jury's deliberation. Preston v. Dupont, 35 P.3d 433 (Colo. 2001).

Enhanced award not available in wrongful death actions pursuant to § 13-21-203 (1). Aiken v. Peters, 899 P.2d 382 (Colo. App. 1995).

Pro rata liability, provided for in § 13-21-111.5, should be apportioned before damages are capped as required by this section. A construction of this section that caps each separate noneconomic award, rather than awards for entire actions, averts subversion of the intended effect of § 13-21-111.5 (2). Niemet v. General Elec. Co., 843 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where award for noneconomic loss exceeded total allowable by subsection (3) but a reduction of the award was to be calculated to allow for the negligence of persons other than defendant, proper method of calculation of award was to reduce award by negligence attributed to others first without regard to total allowable in subsection (3). Cooley v. Paraho Dev. Corp., 851 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1992).

Neither this section nor C.R.C.P. 52 required the trial court to make specific findings of clear and convincing evidence for not reducing the award of noneconomic damages. Herrera v. Gene's Towing, 827 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-21-103. Damages for selling liquor to drunkard. Every husband, wife, child, parent, guardian, employer, or other person who is injured in person, or property, or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication of any person, has a right of action, in his name, against any person who, by selling or giving away intoxicating liquors to any habitual drunkard, causes the intoxication, in whole or in part, of such habitual drunkard; and all damages recovered by a minor under this section shall be paid either to the minor or to his parent, guardian, or next friend, as the court directs. The unlawful sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors works a forfeiture of all rights of the lessee or tenant under any lease or contract of rent upon the premises. No liability shall accrue against any such person as provided unless the husband, wife, child, parent, guardian, or employer first, by written or printed notice, has notified such person, or his agents or employees, not to sell or give away any intoxicating liquors to any habitual drunkard.

ANNOTATION

This section evidently aims at people who keep public places. Its specific language is "a public ranch or stable". This language can only be taken as intended by the general assembly to apply to those who keep stables or ranches for general use, and take, the contract being otherwise acceptable, whatever stock may be offered and by whomsoever it may be offered, so long as the parties are unobjectionable and willing to pay. Manifestly, it does not include all ranchmen nor all stable keepers. Harper v. Lockhart, 9 Colo. App. 430, 48 P. 901 (1897).

A keeper who has used some of the animals entrusted to him may nevertheless retain a lien upon those not used. Harper v. Lockart, 9 Colo. App. 430, 43 P. 901 (1897).

Burden of proving reduction in amount of lien is on plaintiff in replevin. A plaintiff in replevin, to recover animals from an agister, who desires to rely on the provision of this section, is bound to state the number of animals used, and to offer his proof for the definite purpose of reducing the amount of the lien which the defendant would be entitled to insist on. Harper v. Lockhart, 9 Colo. App. 430, 48 P. 901 (1897).

13-21-105. Damages from fire set in woods or prairie - treble damages during drought conditions. (1) If any person sets fire to any woods or prairie so as to damage any other person, such person shall make satisfaction for the damage to the party injured, to be recovered in an action before any court of competent jurisdiction.

(2) (a) If a state of emergency or disaster due to drought has been declared by the governor at the time a person knowingly sets fire to any woods or prairie as described in subsection (1) of this section, such person may be held liable for treble damages to any injured party.

(b) (I) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not apply to any open burning conducted in the course of agricultural operations or to any state, municipal, or county fire management operations.

(II) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not apply to any other person seeking to conduct other prescribed or controlled fires such as grassland, forest, or habitat management activities, if such person has first obtained written authority from the state forester.

ANNOTATION

Statutory interpretation. "Sets fire to" may be words of strict liability, but the phrase refers to setting fire as an act whose purpose is to start a fire, not to an act whose purpose is otherwise. This section contains no language indicating that the general assembly intended to impose liability on those who do not seek to start a fire.

Minto v. Sprague, 124 P.3d 881 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section available to United States as landowner. No reason appears why the United States as a landowner should not avail itself of Colorado statutory provisions which are available to other landowners under like circumstances, including this section. United States v. Boone, 476 F.2d 276 (10th Cir. 1973).

In cases of this character exemplary or punitive damages have no place. Recovery can only be had for damages actually sustained. Spencer v. Murphy, 6 Colo. App. 453, 41 P. 841 (1895).

Attorney fees and compensation for plaintiff's services in fighting fire are not recover- able. The damage must be confined to loss by fire, and could not include compensation for services. In regard to the second, attorney's fees are no part of the damage. There is no law for such allowance. They are only given when provided for by statute, and courts are averse to extending the rule, even legally permissible. Spencer v. Murphy, 6 Colo. App. 453, 41 P. 841 (1895).

13-21-105.5. Infant crib safety act - legislative declaration - definitions - safety standards - exemptions - action for damages. (1) This section shall be known and may be cited as the "Infant Used Crib Safety Act of 1998".

(2) The general assembly hereby finds that parents' use of used infant cribs occasionally results in crib accidents that may lead to infants' injuries or deaths, and therefore such used cribs pose a serious threat to the public health, safety, and welfare. The general assembly further finds that the majority of parents use secondhand, hand-me-down, or heirloom cribs for their infants and therefore it is especially important to raise public awareness of the dangers of used cribs in order to prevent the injuries or deaths that may result from their use. The general assembly finds that the design and construction of infant cribs must ensure that they are safe for an infant's use, thereby providing the infant's parent or other caregiver some degree of confidence in using the crib. The general assembly therefore concludes that discouraging the sale, lease, or subletting of unsafe used cribs will significantly reduce the number of injuries and deaths caused by used infant cribs.

(3) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Commercial dealer" means any person or entity who:

(I) Regularly deals in used full-size or nonfull-size cribs; or

(II) Regularly sells, leases, sublets, or otherwise places in the stream of commerce used full-size or nonfull-size cribs; or

(III) Purchases one or more used full-size or nonfull-size cribs for the purpose of resale.

(b) "Crib" means a bed or containment designed to accommodate an infant.

(c) "Full-size crib" means a full-size crib as defined in 16 CFR sec. 1508.1 (a), regarding the requirements for full-size cribs.

(d) "Infant" means any person less than thirty-five inches tall and less than three years of age.

(e) "Nonfull-size crib" means a nonfull-size crib as defined in 16 CFR sec. 1509.2 (b), regarding the requirements for nonfull-size cribs.

(f) "Used" means previously owned by a consumer.

(4) No commercial dealer may sell, contract to sell or resell, lease, sublet, or otherwise place in the stream of commerce a used full-size or nonfull-size crib that is unsafe at the time of sale or lease, as provided in subsection (6) of this section.

(5) (a) The consumer protection division of the Colorado department of public health and environment shall make available to the public a copy of the federal standards and a copy of the voluntary standards of the American society for testing materials as specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (5). One copy shall also be provided to the state publications depository and distribution center. The state librarian shall retain a copy of the material and shall make a copy available for interlibrary loans.

(b) The provisions of this subsection (5) apply to the following materials:

(I) 16 CFR sec. 1508 et seq., and any subsequent amendments or additions to said sections;

(II) 16 CFR sec. 1509 et seq., and any subsequent amendments or additions to said sections;

(III) 16 CFR sec. 1303 et seq., and any subsequent amendments or additions to said sections; and

(IV) The voluntary standards of the American society for testing materials or any successor organization.

(6) Any used crib that has any of the following dangerous features or characteristics at the time of sale or lease shall be presumed to be unsafe pursuant to this section:

- (a) Corner posts that extend more than one-sixteenth of an inch;
  - (b) Spaces between side slats that are wider than two and three-eighths inches;
  - (c) Mattress supports that may be easily dislodged from any point of the crib. A mattress segment may be easily dislodged if it cannot withstand at least a twenty-five pound upward force from underneath the crib.
  - (d) Cutout designs on the end panels of the crib;
  - (e) Rail height dimensions that do not conform to the following:
    - (I) The height of the rail and end panel as measured from the top of the rail or panel in its lowest position to the top of the mattress support in its highest position is at least twenty-two and eight tenths centimeters or nine inches;
    - (II) The height of the rail and end panel as measured from the top of the rail or panel in its highest position to the top of the mattress support in its lowest position is at least sixty-six centimeters or twenty-six inches;
  - (f) Any screws, bolts, or hardware that are loose and not secured;
  - (g) Sharp edges, points, or rough surfaces or any wood surfaces that are not smooth and free from splinters, splits, or cracks;
  - (h) Nonfull-size cribs with tears in mesh or fabric sides.
- (7) A crib is exempt from the provisions of this section if:
- (a) It is not intended for use by an infant; and
  - (b) At the time of selling, reselling, leasing, or subletting the crib or otherwise placing the crib in the stream of commerce, the commercial dealer attaches a written notice to the crib declaring that it is not intended to be used for an infant and is unsafe for use by an infant.

(8) (a) A person who is a parent or guardian of an infant and who purchases a used crib on or after July 1, 1998, that, at the time of sale or lease, is presumed to be unsafe as provided in subsection (6) of this section may bring an action, on the parent's or guardian's own behalf and on behalf of the infant, against the commercial dealer from whom the parent or guardian purchased the used crib. In such action, the parent or guardian may seek to enjoin the commercial dealer from selling, contracting to sell, contracting to resell, leasing, or subletting any used full-size or nonfull-size crib that, at the time of sale or lease, is presumed to be unsafe as provided in subsection (6) of this section.

(b) In addition to an injunction, the parent or guardian may seek return of the purchase price of the crib, reasonable attorney fees and costs, and, if the infant has sustained injury or death as a result of using the crib, such additional damages as are provided by law.

ANNOTATION

The commonly understood meaning of the term “any person”, which is not defined in this section, could include either an individual or a corporation, as well as a person signing on behalf of a corporation. Mountain States Commercial v. 99¢ Liquid., 940 P.2d 934 (Colo. App. 1996).

If the general assembly had intended to limit the liability of a person signing a check in a representative capacity, it could have so stated. This section provides no such exception, however. Thus, a corporate officer could be found individually liable under this section. Mountain States Commercial v. 99¢ Liquid., 940 P.2d 934 (Colo. App. 1996) (decided under § 13-21-109 prior to enactment of § 4-3-402 (c)).

The general assembly’s enactment of § 4-3-402 (c) directs that an authorized corporate officer who signs his or her name to a check issued on an account of a corporation is not liable for that check so long as the corporation is identified as the owner of the account on the check, and it would be incongruous for a corporate officer to be relieved of personal liability on a check pursuant to § 4-3-402 (c), but still be liable for three times the face amount of the check pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. Kunz v. Cycles West, Inc., 969 P.2d 781 (Colo. App. 1998).

The general assembly intended the phrases “any person”, “the person”, and “the maker” in this section to refer to the corporation when the owner of the account is a corporation and the signature on the check is that of an authorized corporate officer. Kunz v. Cycles West, Inc., 969 P.2d 781 (Colo. App. 1998).

The general assembly intended the word “made” to mean when a check is written, not when the check was delivered, mailed, or drawn. Suncor Energy (USA) v. Aspen Petroleum, 178 P.3d 1263 (Colo. App. 2007).

The maker’s liability for damages under subsection (2) is not affected by subsection (5) nor by the doctrine of election of remedies. Where the maker satisfies the underlying debt after the 15-day deadline, liability for the statutory penalty is partially offset but is not negated. Singer v. Strauss, 851 P.2d 256 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court erred in finding that a letter returned as “unknown” was not “returned as undeliverable” under subsection (3). Stadler v. DeVito, 931 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1996).

Even assuming that markings of “attempted, unknown” and “moved” on notice of presentment means that notice was undeliverable, the only consequence of assumption is that assignee of debt cannot avail itself of conclusive presumption under subsection (3) that notice was given on the date of mailing. Mountain States Commercial v. 99¢ Liquid, 940 P.2d 934 (Colo. App. 1996).

Strict compliance with notice requirements in this section is necessary. Group, Inc. v. Spanier, 940 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1997).

Failure to comply with notice provisions precludes the collection of treble damages. Group, Inc. v. Spanier, 940 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1997).

Attorney fees are not “collection costs” under this section. Group, Inc. v. Spanier, 940 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Berckefeldt v. Hammer, 44 Colo. App. 320, 616 P.2d 183 (1980).

13-21-109.5. Recovery of damages for fraudulent use of social security numbers.

(1) No person shall buy or otherwise obtain or sell, offer for sale, take or give in exchange, pledge or give in pledge, or use any individual’s social security account number, or any derivative of such number, for the purpose of committing fraud or fraudulently using or assuming said individual’s identity.

(2) Any individual aggrieved by the act of any person in violation of subsection (1) of this section may bring a civil action in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover:

- (a) Such preliminary and equitable relief as the court determines to be appropriate; and
- (b) The greater of:
  - (I) Actual damages; or
  - (II) Liquidated damages of up to ten thousand dollars.

(3) In addition to any damages and other relief awarded pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, if the aggrieved individual prevails, the court may assess against the defendant reasonable attorney fees and any other litigation costs and expenses, including expert fees, reasonably incurred by the aggrieved individual.

(4) Any action brought pursuant to this section shall be in addition to, and not in lieu of, any criminal prosecution that may be brought under any state or federal law.

13-21-110. Medical committee - privileged communication - limitation on liability.

(1) Any information, data, reports, or records made available to a utilization review committee of a hospital or other health care facility, as required by state or federal law, is confidential and shall be used by such committee and the members thereof only in the exercise of the proper functions of the committee. It shall not be a violation of a privileged communication for any physician, dentist, podiatrist, hospital, or other health care facility or person to furnish information, data, reports, or records to any such utilization review committee concerning any patient examined or treated by the same or confined in such hospital or facility, which information, data, reports, or records relate to the proper functions of the utilization review committee. No member of such a committee shall be liable for damages to or for any such patient by reason of recommendations made by the committee in the exercise of the proper function of the committee, except for willful or reckless disregard of the patient’s safety.

(2) As used in this section, “utilization review committee” means a committee established for the purpose of evaluating the quantity, quality, and timeliness of health care services rendered under the “Colorado Medical Assistance Act” and in compliance with Titles XVIII and XIX of the federal “Social Security Act”, as amended.

(3) The privilege created by subsection (1) of this section shall not prevent any such information, data, reports, or records which have been made available to a utilization review committee from being admitted in evidence or otherwise made available for use in the review process referred to in section 13-90-107 (1) (d) (III) and (1) (d) (IV).

ANNOTATION

Requirements for privilege. To be privileged under this section the information sought must meet two requirements: (1) It must be furnished to a utilization review committee, defined as a committee formed for the purpose of evaluating the quantity, quality and timeliness of services rendered under the Colorado medical assistance act and Titles XVIII and XIX of the federal Social Security Act; and (2) it must be information provided to that utilization review committee in order to satisfy requirements of state or federal law. Sherman v. District Court, 637 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1981).

13-21-111. Negligence cases - comparative negligence as measure of damages.

(1) Contributory negligence shall not bar recovery in any action by any person or his legal representative to recover damages for negligence resulting in death or in injury to person or property, if such negligence was not as great as the negligence of the person against whom recovery is sought, but any damages allowed shall be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person for whose injury, damage, or death recovery is made.

(2) In any action to which subsection (1) of this section applies, the court, in a nonjury trial, shall make findings of fact or, in a jury trial, the jury shall return a special verdict which shall state:

(a) The amount of the damages which would have been recoverable if there had been no contributory negligence; and

(b) The degree of negligence of each party, expressed as a percentage.

(3) Upon the making of the finding of fact or the return of a special verdict, as is required by subsection (2) of this section, the court shall reduce the amount of the verdict in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person for whose injury, damage, or death recovery is made; but, if the said proportion is equal to or greater than the negligence of the person against whom recovery is sought, then, in such event, the court shall enter a judgment for the defendant.

(3.5) and (4) Repealed.

Traditional theories of loss allocation in tort altered. The general assembly has altered traditional theories of loss allocation in tort with the passage of the uniform contribution among tortfeasors act, §§ 13-50.5-101 to 13-50.5-106, and with the introduction of a comparative negligence scheme into Colorado law by this section. Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

General assembly has decided that comparative negligence rule is more just. By the enactment of this act, the general assembly has given legislative recognition to the argument that the comparative negligence rule is superior to the contributory negligence rule in tending to effect more just results in negligence actions. Heafer v. Denver-Boulder Bus Co., 176 Colo. 157, 489 P.2d 315 (1971).

Ameliorates harsh results of contributory negligence doctrine. Comparative negligence statutes have been enacted to ameliorate the harsh results which sometimes occur under the doctrine of contributory negligence. Darnell Photographs, Inc. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 33 Colo. App. 256, 519 P.2d 1225 (1974).

This section eliminates the requirement that the plaintiff be free from contributory negligence in a suit based on res ipsa loquitur. Montgomery Elevator Co. v. Gordon, 619 P.2d 66 (Colo. 1980).

This section precludes the plaintiff's recovery if his negligence was as great as or greater than the defendant's. Graf v. Tracy, 194 Colo. 1, 568 P.2d 467 (1977).

Applicability to res ipsa doctrine. Even if the jury were to find that plaintiff was negligent and that his negligence contributed to his injury, plaintiff's negligence does not preclude the operation of the res ipsa doctrine because, under the comparative negligence system, the jury could infer from the circumstances that the defendant's negligence exceeded the plaintiff's negligence, thus permitting plaintiff to recover in spite of his contributing negligence. Gordon v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 42 Colo. App. 426, 599 P.2d 953 (1979), aff'd sub nom. Montgomery Elevator Co. v. Gordon, 619 P.2d 66 (Colo. 1980).

This section eliminates the requirements that the plaintiff be free from contributory negligence in a suit based on res ipsa loquitur. Montgomery Elevator Co. v. Gordon, 619 P.2d 66 (Colo. 1980).

Choice of laws analysis. In applying the particular interests and policies of Colorado to comparative negligence controversies, and in endeavoring to minimize a case-by-case, ad hoc, approach for the solution of comparative negligence conflicts questions, the specific approach to applying the choice of law rule should be that the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties, and the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered, are to be weighed more heavily and are to be given more importance in such a choice of law determination, than the contacts of the place where the injury occurred, and the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred. Sabell v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co., 36 Colo. App. 60, 536 P.2d 1160 (1975).

Although there are no Colorado cases holding that the comparative negligence statute is applicable to accidents occurring outside of the state of Colorado, neither are there any cases requiring the Colorado courts to follow the public policy of another state in determining the relative quanta of negligent conduct between the parties as it relates to the recovery of damages. Sabell v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co., 36 Colo. App. 60, 536 P.2d 1160 (1975).

Imputed comparative negligence is based upon a legal fiction in direct opposition to valid policy considerations. Comparative negligence applies to an owner-passenger of a vehicle only when the owner-passenger is negligent and such negligence is the proximate cause of owner-passenger's injuries. Watson v. Reg'l Transp. Dist., 762 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1988) (overruling Moore v. Skiles, 130 Colo. 191, 274 P.2d 311 (1954), and the cases following the Moore holding).

Doctrine of momentary forgetfulness or justifiable distraction no longer applicable. Comparative negligence statute did away with need for doctrine that was used under former contributory negligence law. Rodriguez v. Morgan County R.E.A., Inc., 878 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Hover v. Clamp, 40 Colo. App. 410, 579 P.2d 1181 (1978); Bloxson v. San Luis Valley Crop Care, Inc., 198 Colo. 113, 596 P.2d 1189 (1979); Rael v. Motor Vehicle Div., 42 Colo. App. 66, 589 P.2d 515 (1979); Huydts v. Dixon, 199 Colo. 260, 606 P.2d 1303 (1980);

Painter, 925 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1996); Huntoon v. TCI Cablevision of Colo., 969 P.2d 681 (Colo. 1998); McCall v. Meyers, 94 P.3d 1271 (Colo. App. 2004).

II. APPLICABILITY.

Law reviews. For article, "Health Care Litigation in Colorado: A Survey of Recent Decisions", see 30 Colo. Law. 91 (August 2001).

Evidence must substantiate that both parties are at fault before comparative negligence rule is used. Comparative negligence rules are applicable only where there is evidence presented which would substantiate a finding that both parties are at fault, and the inability to prove any negligence on the part of plaintiff eliminates the operation of the rule. Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973); Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

Contributory negligence principles apply to the recipient of a negligent misrepresentation. Robinson v. Poudre Valley Fed. Credit Union, 654 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1982).

And to negligence resulting in pecuniary loss. Comparative negligence principles set forth in this section also apply to negligence which results in pecuniary loss. Robinson v. Poudre Valley Fed. Credit Union, 654 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1982).

In an action arising out of a rear-end automobile collision, evidence that the plaintiff negligently backed her car into defendant's vehicle was sufficient to entitle defendant to an instruction on comparative negligence. Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

The comparative negligence statute is inapplicable where no negligence on the part of the plaintiff can be proven. Dunham v. Kampman, 37 Colo. App. 233, 547 P.2d 263 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

This section has no application where an innocent party seeks recovery from a party adjudged negligent. Kampman v. Dunham, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

Section inapplicable to products liability cases. Comparative negligence as embodied in this section has no application to products liability cases under restatement (second) of torts § 402A. Kinard v. Coats Co., 37 Colo. App. 555, 553 P.2d 835 (1976).

Section inapplicable to exemplary damages. Bodah v. Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., 724 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1986).

And finding of intentional wrongdoing on part of defendant renders statute inapplicable. Carman v. Heber, 43 Colo. App. 5, 601 P.2d 646 (1979).

This section does not deal with relationship between tortfeasors but only provides for the reduction of the amount of damages owed by the tortfeasor to the injured party in proportion to the percentage of fault attributed to the injured party by the jury. Bass v. United States, 379 F. Supp. 1208 (D. Colo. 1974).

This section has no relation to the apportionment of damages among joint tortfeasors. Bass v. United States, 379 F. Supp. 1208 (D. Colo. 1974).

Joint and several liability still viable. The common-law doctrine of joint and several liability is not inconsistent with this section's system of comparative negligence, but rather, the doctrine of joint and several liability in the context of comparative negligence continues to ensure that negligently injured persons will be able to obtain adequate compensation for their injuries from those tortfeasors who have negligently inflicted the harm. Martinez v. Stefanich, 195 Colo. 341, 577 P.2d 1099 (1978).

Liability of joint tortfeasors remains joint and several with respect to a third party injured by their actions. Kampman v. Dunham, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

Judgment against joint tortfeasors is enforced jointly and severally, rather than apportioned according to percentage of fault attributed to each tortfeasor. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 645 P.2d 1321 (Colo. App. 1981).

An innocent plaintiff can recover the entirety of the damages suffered from any of the individuals whose negligent acts resulted in a single indivisible injury. Dunham v. Kampman, 37 Colo. App. 233, 547 P.2d 263 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

Comparative negligence rule inapplicable where plaintiff is not negligent. Issue of minor counselee's comparative negligence as a defense to claim that church was negligent in hiring and supervising church counselor should not have been submitted to the jury because the evidence failed to establish, as a matter of law, any negligence on the minor's part. DeBose v. Bear Valley Church of Christ, 890 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1994), rev'd on other grounds, 928 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

When the evidence would support a finding that both parties are at fault, the court must instruct the jury on comparative negligence and allow the jury to assess the relative degrees of the parties' fault. Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

Patient who is treated by health care providers for suicidal ideations, and who later commits suicide, may be found comparatively negligent or at fault in a subsequent wrongful death action based upon that treatment. Sheron v. Lutheran Med. Center, 18 P.3d 796 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where common-law claim was permitted against tavern owner for serving intoxicated person who injures himself, comparative negligence principles may be asserted as a defense by tavern owner, and the issue of comparative negligence should, absent extraordinary circumstances, be submitted to a jury. Lyons v. Nasby, 770 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1989).

The degree of the parties' fault is to be determined by the fact-finder and only in the clearest of cases, when the facts are undisputed and reasonable minds can draw but one inference, should relative degrees of fault be determined as a matter of law. Bennett v. Greeley Gas Co., 969 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1998).

A passenger in an automobile driven by an intoxicated person may be negligent for having entered the automobile in the first place. Thus, an instruction on comparative negligence is proper when a plaintiff is injured while a passenger in an automobile driven by someone who the plaintiff has reason to know is intoxicated. Wark v. McClellan, 68 P.3d 574 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section applies to tort actions based on all forms of negligent conduct. Failure of the general assembly to preclude application of this section in cases involving willful and wanton negligence leads to the conclusion that this section requires the comparison of each party's fault irrespective of whether such fault is attributable to simple negligence, gross negligence, or willful and reckless negligence. G.E.C. Minerals v. Harrison Western, 781 P.2d 115 (Colo. App. 1989); White v. Hansen, 813 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1990).

Exemplary damages are not directly subject to reduction under this section. Reduction of award under this section is based on plaintiff's own conduct, whereas an award of exemplary damages under § 13-21-102 is based on the defendant's misconduct and different principles apply. However, interplay among this section, § 13-21-102, and § 13-21-111.5 may produce a similar result. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

Exemplary damages are not subject to reduction by application of the comparative negligence statute. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

The solatium award of $50,000 pursuant to § 13-21-203.5 is exempt from reduction by operation of the comparative fault statute. Dewey v. Hardy, 917 P.2d 305 (Colo. App.

1995); B.G.'s Inc. v. Gross, 23 P.3d 691 (Colo. 2001).

III. DEGREE OF NEGLIGENCE.

"Negligence" construed. Negligence is a deviation by the defendant from the reasonable standards of care owed to the plaintiff, which naturally and foreseeably results in injury to the plaintiff; it is failure to act as a reasonably prudent person would under the same or similar circumstances. McCormick v. United States, 539 F. Supp. 1179 (D. Colo. 1982).

Violation of statute is negligence as matter of law. The violation of a statute or ordinance regulating the use of roadways, proximately resulting in injury to one for whom the statute was designed to protect, is negligence as a matter of law. McCormick v. United States, 539 F. Supp. 1179 (D. Colo. 1982).

Injury to property defined. "Injury to property" in this section is not necessarily limited to a physical injury to tangible property, but rather includes any damage resulting from invasion of one's property rights by actionable negligence. Darnell Photographs, Inc. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 33 Colo. App. 256, 519 P.2d 1225 (1974).

Where a landlord has actual knowledge of the vicious actions of a tenant's animal prior to entering into a rental agreement, and where the animal's vicious actions have created a clear potential for injury, the landlord has a duty to take reasonable precautions to protect third persons from the animal. Vigil v. Payne, 725 P.2d 1155 (Colo. App. 1986).

The negligence of multiple defendants or designated nonparties must be combined and compared with the plaintiff's negligence. Painter v. Inland/Riggle Oil Co., 911 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1995).

Comparison of negligence only between parties. Colorado's comparative negligence statute contemplates that the comparison of negligence be made only between parties to the tort action. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 645 P.2d 1321 (Colo. App. 1981); Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 650 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

The interrelation of this section and § 13-50.5-101 et seq., does not allow an insurer of a tortfeasor found liable in a prior action to recover contribution from a nonparty to that prior action. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 650 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1981), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

This section precludes consideration of the negligence of absent tortfeasors by the trier of fact. Nat'l Farmers Union Prop. & Cas. Co. v. Frackelton, 662 P.2d 1056 (Colo. 1983).

Degree of fault of multiple defendants combined for comparison with plaintiff's negligence. In cases where there are multiple defendants who proximately cause the injury, the degree of fault of each defendant will be combined and compared with the degree of fault of the plaintiff. If the plaintiff is less than 50 percent at fault, each defendant will be jointly and severally liable for the plaintiff's damages even if the degree of fault of a particular defendant is less than that of the plaintiff. Mountain Mobile Mix, Inc. v. Gifford, 660 P.2d 883 (Colo. 1983).

Seat belt defense is not available for purposes of determining degree of plaintiff's negligence under this section. Churning v. Staples, 628 P.2d 180 (Colo. App. 1981).

Evidence of motorcyclist's failure to wear helmet inadmissible. In a wrongful death suit, evidence of plaintiff's failure to wear a protective helmet while riding a motorcycle is inadmissible to show negligence on the part of the injured party or to mitigate damages. Dare v. Sobule, 674 P.2d 960 (Colo. 1984).

This section applies only to the degree of negligence of the parties to the suit, and therefore it does not require allocation of negligence to nonparties not properly designated. Thompson v. Colo. and Eastern R.R. Co., 852 P.2d 1328 (Colo. App. 1993).

IV. AWARD.

An award of zero damages is consistent with the view that the jury intended that plaintiffs recover no award because jury found that plaintiff's negligence was at least equal to that of the defendant. Lonardo v. Litvak Meat Co., 676 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court's failure to determine degree of negligence of parties not error where trial court concluded that plaintiff's negligence was equal to that of defendant. Comcast v. Express Concrete, Inc., 196 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2007).

Fact that jury found plaintiff 70% at fault would have precluded his recovery under this section. Graf v. Tracy, 194 Colo. 1, 568 P.2d 467 (1977).

Verdict held inadequate. Where the damages set by the jury were no greater than the special damages, in light of the undisputed evidence of pain, suffering, and permanent disability, the verdict was manifestly inadequate and indicates that the jury disregarded the court's instruction on damages. Reynolds v. Farber, 40 Colo. App. 467, 577 P.2d 318 (1978).

Consortium claim is derivative for purposes of determining recovery under comparative negligence. Lee v. Colo. Dept. of Health, 718 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1986).

Juries are required to fix the precise, mathematical degree of fault under this comparative negligence statute. Zimmerman v. Baca, 346 F. Supp. 172 (D. Colo. 1972).

"Person against whom recovery is sought" includes a settling non-party defendant. Wong v. Sharp, 734 F. Supp. 943 (D. Colo. 1990).

V. PROCEDURE.

Responsibility for result divided between jury and judge. The general assembly, when it enacted this section, intended to establish a system in negligence cases which divides the responsibility for a fair and good result between the jury and the judge. Avery v. Wadlington, 186 Colo. 158, 526 P.2d 295 (1974).

Percentage of negligence issue for jury, usually. The issue of percentage of negligence is one for the jury, and only in the clearest of cases where the facts are undisputed and reasonable minds can draw but one inference from them should such issues be determined as a matter of law. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Pueblo Gas & Fuel Co., 33 Colo. App. 92, 519 P.2d 1201 (1973).

Once the trial court rules that the doctrine is of res ipsa loquitur is applicable, the jury must then compare any evidence of negligency of the plaintiff with the inferred negligence of the defendant and decide what percentage of negligence is attributable to each party. Montgomery Elevator Co. v. Gordon, 619 P.2d 66 (Colo. 1980).

The issue of relative fault is one for the jury and only in the clearest of cases where the facts are undisputed and reasonable minds can draw only one inference from them should relative fault be determined as a matter of law. Whitlock v. Univ. of Denver, 712 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds in Univ. of Denver v. Whitlock, 744 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1987); Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

Stipulation of total damages substitute for jury determination. Where the total damages are stipulated, the stipulation operates as a substitute for the jury's determination of damages under subsection (2)(b). Darnell Photographs, Inc. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 33 Colo. App. 256, 519 P.2d 1225 (1974).

Effect of 1975 amendment. The 1975 amendment, which added subsection (4), imposes an independent duty upon the court to instruct the jury on the statute's effect. Use of the word "shall" is mandatory in effect. Appelgren v. Agri Chem, Inc., 39 Colo. App. 158, 562 P.2d 766 (1977).

It is now incumbent upon the trial court in a comparative negligence case to give instructions that apprise the jury on the effects of its findings. Loup-Miller v. Brauer & Associates-Rocky Mt., 40 Colo. App. 67, 572 P.2d 845 (1977).

The failure of a party's attorney to request an instruction on the effects of the comparative negligence statute does not waive this right which the statute requires the court to protect — the right to an informed jury. Appelgren v. Agri Chem, Inc., 39 Colo. App. 158, 562 P.2d 766 (1977).

Defendant's failure to assert a contributory negligence defense in the theory of the case instruction and his failure to object to the theory of the case instruction did not constitute a waiver of his contributory negligence defense where defendant properly requested the trial court to submit a contributory negligence instruction to the jury. Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

It is improper to instruct the jury on assumption of risk in a case tried under this section. Loup-Miller v. Brauer & Associates-Rocky Mt., 40 Colo. App. 67, 572 P.2d 845 (1977).

Special verdict form not required in FELA cases. In Federal Employers Liability Act cases brought in Colorado, a special verdict form is not required by either statute or necessity. Felder v. Union Pac. R.R., 660 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1982).

Defendant is not required to present evidence of his or her own negligence or to argue that he or she was negligent in order to avoid a finding of abandonment of a comparative negligence defense. Gordon v. Benson, 925 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1996).

VI. SCOPE OF REVIEW.

Scope of review. The scope of review is limited to a determination as to whether the jury acted capriciously or arbitrarily, or was swayed by emotion in assessing the damages incurred. Dunham v. Kampman, 37 Colo. App. 233, 547 P.2d 263 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977); Robinson v. Poudre Valley Fed. Credit Union, 680 P.2d 241 (Colo. App. 1984).

Jury determination on appeal. An appeal court may only overturn the jury's allocation where reasonable minds could not have apportioned the negligence of the parties in the manner in which it was done. Dunham v. Kampman, 37 Colo. App. 233, 547 P.2d 263 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

The issue of the percentage of negligence is for the jury's determination and is not to be disturbed in the absence of a clear showing of passion or prejudice. Dunham v. Kampman, 37 Colo. App. 233, 547 P.2d 263 (1975), aff'd, 192 Colo. 448, 560 P.2d 91 (1977).

In comparative negligence cases, a jury's verdict can be set aside on the ground of inadequate damages. Reynolds v. Farber, 40 Colo. App. 467, 577 P.2d 318 (1978).

13-21-111.5. Civil liability cases - pro rata liability of defendants - shifting financial responsibility for negligence in construction agreements - legislative declaration.

(1) In an action brought as a result of a death or an injury to person or property, no defendant shall be liable for an amount greater than that represented by the degree or percentage of the negligence or fault attributable to such defendant that produced the claimed injury, death, damage, or loss, except as provided in subsection (4) of this section.

(2) The jury shall return a special verdict, or, in the absence of a jury, the court shall make special findings determining the percentage of negligence or fault attributable to each of the parties and any persons not parties to the action of whom notice has been given pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (3) of this section to whom some negligence or fault is found and determining the total amount of damages sustained by each claimant. The entry of judgment shall be made by the court based on the special findings, and no general verdict shall be returned by the jury.

(3) (a) Any provision of the law to the contrary notwithstanding, the finder of fact in a civil action may consider the degree or percentage of negligence or fault of a person not a party to the action, based upon evidence thereof, which shall be admissible, in determining the degree or percentage of negligence or fault of those persons who are parties to such action. Any finding of a degree or percentage of fault or negligence of a nonparty shall not constitute a presumptive or conclusive finding as to such nonparty for the purposes of a prior or subsequent action involving that nonparty.

(b) Negligence or fault of a nonparty may be considered if the claimant entered into a settlement agreement with the nonparty or if the defending party gives notice that a nonparty was wholly or partially at fault within ninety days following commencement of the action unless the court determines that a longer period is necessary. The notice shall be given by filing a pleading in the action designating such nonparty and setting forth such nonparty's name and last-known address, or the best identification of such nonparty which is possible under the circumstances, together with a brief statement of the basis for believing such nonparty to be at fault. Designation of a nonparty shall be subject to the provisions of section 13-17-102. If the designated nonparty is a licensed health care professional and the defendant designating such nonparty alleges professional negligence by such nonparty, the requirements and procedures of section 13-20-602 shall apply.

(4) Joint liability shall be imposed on two or more persons who consciously conspire and deliberately pursue a common plan or design to commit a tortious act. Any person held jointly liable under this subsection (4) shall have a right of contribution from his fellow defendants acting in concert. A defendant shall be held responsible under this subsection (4) only for the degree or percentage of fault assessed to those persons who are held jointly liable pursuant to this subsection (4).

(5) In a jury trial in any civil action in which contributory negligence or comparative fault is an issue for determination by the jury, the trial court shall instruct the jury on the effect of its finding as to the degree or percentage of negligence or fault as between the plaintiff or plaintiffs and the defendant or defendants. However, the jury shall not be informed as to the effect of its finding as to the allocation of fault among two or more defendants. The attorneys for each party shall be allowed to argue the effect of the instruction on the facts which are before the jury.

(6) (a) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that:

(I) It is in the best interests of this state and its citizens and consumers to ensure that every construction business in the state is financially responsible under the tort liability system for losses that a business has caused;

(II) The provisions of this subsection (6) will promote competition and safety in the construction industry, thereby benefitting Colorado consumers;

(III) Construction businesses in recent years have begun to use contract provisions to shift the financial responsibility for their negligence to others, thereby circumventing the intent of tort law;

(IV) It is the intent of the general assembly that the duty of a business to be responsible for its own negligence be nondelegable;

(V) Construction businesses must be able to obtain liability insurance in order to meet their responsibilities;

(VI) The intent of this subsection (6) is to create an economic climate that will promote safety in construction, foster the availability and affordability of insurance, and ensure fairness among businesses;

(VII) If all businesses, large and small, are responsible for their own actions, then construction companies will be able to obtain adequate insurance, the quality of construction will be improved, and workplace safety will be enhanced.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (c) and (d) of this subsection (6), any provision in a construction agreement that requires a person to indemnify, insure, or defend in litigation another person against liability for damage arising out of death or bodily injury to persons or damage to property caused by the negligence or fault of the indemnitee or any third party under the control or supervision of the indemnitee is void as against public policy and unenforceable.

(c) The provisions of this subsection (6) shall not affect any provision in a construction agreement that requires a person to indemnify and insure another person against liability for damage, including but not limited to the reimbursement of attorney fees and costs, if provided for by contract or statute, arising out of death or bodily injury to persons or damage to property, but not for any amounts that are greater than that represented by the degree or percentage of negligence or fault attributable to the indemnitor or the indemnitor's agents, representatives, subcontractors, or suppliers.

(d) (I) This subsection (6) does not apply to contract clauses that require the indemnitor to purchase, maintain, and carry insurance covering the acts or omissions of the indemnitor, nor shall it apply to contract provisions that require the indemnitor to name the indemnitee as an additional insured on the indemnitor's policy of insurance, but only to the extent that such additional insured coverage provides coverage to the indemnitee for liability due to the acts or omissions of the indemnitor. Any provision in a construction agreement that requires the purchase of additional insured coverage for damage arising out of death or bodily injury to persons or damage to property from any acts or omissions that are not caused by the negligence or fault of the party providing such additional insured coverage is void as against public policy.

(II) This subsection (6) also does not apply to builder's risk insurance.

(e) (I) As used in this subsection (6) and except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (e), “construction agreement” means a contract, subcontract, or agreement for materials or labor for the construction, alteration, renovation, repair, maintenance, design, planning, supervision, inspection, testing, or observation of any building, building site, structure, highway, street, roadway bridge, viaduct, water or sewer system, gas or other distribution system, or other work dealing with construction or for any moving, demolition, or excavation connected with such construction.

(II) “Construction agreement” does not include:

(A) A contract, subcontract, or agreement that concerns or affects property owned or operated by a railroad, a sanitation district, as defined in section 32-1-103 (18), C.R.S., a water district, as defined in section 32-1-103 (25), C.R.S., a water and sanitation district, as defined in section 32-1-103 (24), C.R.S., a municipal water enterprise, a water conservancy district, a water conservation district, or a metropolitan sewage disposal district, as defined in section 32-4-502 (18), C.R.S.; or

(B) Any real property lease or rental agreement between a landlord and tenant regardless of whether any provision of the lease or rental agreement concerns construction, alteration, repair, improvement, or maintenance of real property.

(f) Nothing in this subsection (6) shall be construed to:

(I) Abrogate or affect the doctrine of respondeat superior, vicarious liability, or other nondelegable duties at common law;

(II) Affect the liability for the negligence of an at-fault party; or

(III) Abrogate or affect the exclusive remedy available under the workers’ compensation laws or the immunity provided to general contractors and owners under the workers’ compensation laws.

(g) Choice of law. Notwithstanding any contractual provision to the contrary, the laws of the state of Colorado shall apply to every construction agreement affecting improvements to real property within the state of Colorado.

Pro rata liability statute does not violate due process, as it provides plaintiffs notice and an opportunity to be heard regarding nonparties’ alleged fault and there is a rational basis between the means utilized by the statute and the legitimate state purpose of adjusting the inequitable common law rule of joint and several liability. Salazar v. Am. Sterilizer Co., 5 P.3d 357 (Colo. App. 2000).

The primary purpose of this section was to abolish the harsh effects of joint and several liability. Watters v. Pelican Intern., Inc., 706 F. Supp. 1452 (D. Colo. 1989); Moody v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 847 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1992); Miller v. Byrne, 916 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1995).

The adoption of this statute was intended to cure the perceived inequity under the common law concept of joint and several liability whereby wrongdoers could be held fully responsible for a plaintiff's entire loss, despite the fact that another wrongdoer, who was not held accountable, contributed to the result. Barton v. Adams Rental, Inc., 938 P.2d 532 (Colo. 1997); Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 207 F. Supp.2d 1187 (D. Colo. 2002).

Provisions of this section are not limited to negligence actions. Rather, it specifically applies to "an action brought as a result of . . . an injury to person or property." Such actions may include, for example, a strict products liability action. O'Quinn v. Wedco Tech., Inc., 746 F.Supp. 38 (D. Colo. 1990); Miller v. Byrne, 916 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1995).

The general assembly clearly intended that this section apply to product liability actions. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 207 F. Supp.2d 1187 (D. Colo. 2002).

The use of the word "action" in subsection (1) indicates that the statute is applicable to non-tort claims. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 207 F. Supp.2d 1187 (D. Colo. 2002).

Pro rata liability applies to product liability claims. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 207 F. Supp.2d 1187 (D. Colo. 2002).

This section does not differentiate between intentional acts and negligent acts in its mandate to apportion liability among tortfeasors. The general assembly intended that liability may be apportioned not only between negligent tortfeasors, but also between a negligent tortfeasor and an intentional tortfeasor. Thus, the provisions of this section apply even when one of several tortfeasors commits an intentional tort that contributes to an indivisible injury. Harvey v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 983 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd sub nom. Slack v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 5 P.3d 280 (Colo. 2000).

A loss of consortium claim qualifies as an "action brought as a result of a death or an injury to person or property" under subsection (1), and thus, the apportionment rules contained in this statute apply to such claim. Harvey v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 983 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd sub nom. Slack v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 5 P.3d 280 (Colo. 2000).

Term, "attributable," as used in this section, means assignable, ascribable, or imputable in the sense of an obligation or duty. While nonparties who are immune from suit may properly be designated, those who owed no duty to the plaintiff may not. Miller v. Byrne, 916 P.2d 566 (Colo. App. 1995).

In a negligence by omission case, the factors to be considered in determining whether the law should impose a duty are the risk, foreseeability, and likelihood of injury weighed against the social utility of the actor's conduct, the magnitude of the burden of guarding against the injury, and the consequences of placing that burden on the defendant. Whitlock v. Univ. of Denver, 712 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 744 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1987).

Pro rata liability of defendants and plaintiff must be ascertained before applying statutory cap on noneconomic damages in cases involving multiple defendants or where plaintiff is partially at fault. Gen. Elec. Co. v. Niemet, 866 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1994).

Defendant cannot be held liable for more than its pro rata share of damages even where it is permissible to exceed the damages cap. Hoffman v. Ford Motor Co., 690 F. Supp. 2d 1179 (D. Colo. 2010).

The limitation of joint and several liability under this section is irrelevant in applying the setoff amounts and limits of uninsured and underinsured coverage under § 10-4-609 (5), where an insurer under that section may offset against the uninsured and underinsured limits the amount received by the insured from all parties liable for the injuries. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Star, 952 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1997); Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. Murakami, 169 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2007).

Defendant must properly designate a nonparty in a pleading which complies with the requirements of this section in order for a court to allow the finder of fact to consider the negligence or fault of such nonparty. Thompson v. Colo. & Eastern R.R. Co., 852 P.2d 1328 (Colo. App. 1993); Chavez v. Parkview Episcopal Med. Ctr., 32 P.3d 609 (Colo. App. 2001).

Subsection (3)(b) expressly permits a court to accept nonparty designations filed outside the 90-day period when it determines that a "longer period is necessary," so the provisions of C.R.C.P. 6(b)(2) concerning demonstration of "excusable neglect" do not apply. Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

Instruction informing jury that an emergency room physician who treated plaintiff had the exclusive authority to either admit or discharge plaintiff was properly denied because plaintiff had failed to designate the emergency room physician as a responsible nonparty pursuant to this section, and such an instruction could have confused or misled the jury. Sheron v. Lutheran Med. Ctr., 18 P.3d 796 (Colo. App. 2000).

This section does not accommodate post-trial motions. Where defendant had knowledge of former co-defendants' settlements with plaintiffs before trial, defense counsel should have alerted the court that former co-defendants' proportionate fault would be an issue when the judgment was rendered. Montoya v. Grease Monkey Holding Corp., 883 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994).

The effect of this proportionate liability statute on the goal of full recovery of the federal Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 is minimal and does not necessitate the formulation of a uniform national law of joint and several liability. Therefore this statute is not preempted by a federal common law rule of joint and several liability. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 856 F. Supp. 578 (D. Colo. 1994).

Since the federal Americans with Disabilities Act, the Fair Housing Amendments Act, and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 do not provide for comparative fault, subsection (1) does not apply to federal question claims brought pursuant to those statutes. Roe v. Hous. Auth. of City of Boulder, 909 F. Supp. 814 (D. Colo. 1995).

Section not exclusive remedy. Nothing in the language of this section indicates it is intended to be the exclusive mechanism for litigating the relative fault of all joint tortfeasors. A claim for contribution may be made under § 13-50.5-102 when a party has not been formally designated in the action under this section. Watters v. Pelican Intern., Inc., 706 F. Supp. 1452 (D. Colo. 1989).

Defendants designation of non-parties by category held not the "best identification" possible under the circumstances and therefore stricken. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Isham, 782 F. Supp. 524 (D. Colo. 1992).

Section does not apply to cases commenced prior to the enactment of the section. Mladjan v. Pub. Serv. Co., 797 P.2d 1299 (Colo. App. 1990).

Exemplary damages are not subject to reduction by application of the comparative negligence statute. Lira v. Davis, 832 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1992).

And a solatium award recoverable by a wrongful death plaintiff is not subject to reduction by operation of this section. B.G.'s, Inc. v. Gross, 23 P.3d 691 (Colo. 2001); Smith v. Vincent, 77 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section does not permit a recovery against a defendant on a joint/concerted action theory for cases filed after July 1, 1986 and before July 1, 1987. Voelker v. Cherry Creek Sch. Dist. 5, 840 P.2d 353 (Colo. App. 1992).

This section has the effect of eliminating liability of a physician for the negligent acts of another physician absent a showing that the physicians "acted in concert", as provided in subsection (4), or that the physicians were in an employment, partnership, or joint venture relationship with one another. Freyer v. Albin, 5 P.3d 329 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section does not abrogate the well-established rule that partners are jointly and severally liable for the wrongs of the partnership, absent an explicit and express revision of § 7-60-113 by the Colorado legislature. Bank of Denver v. Se. Capital Group, Inc., 763 F. Supp. 1552 (D. Colo. 1991).

Section does not abrogate the statute under which an individual partner can be held vicariously liable for wrongful acts or omissions of a partner in the ordinary course of partnership business. Hughes v. Johnson, 764 F. Supp. 1412 (D. Colo. 1991).

This section does not apply to a lawsuit filed prior to July 1, 1986, and amended pleading relating back to filing of lawsuit prior to July 1, 1986, does not make this section applicable to the lawsuit. Halliburton v. Pub. Serv. Co., 804 P.2d 213 (Colo. App. 1990).

The abolition of joint and several liability by this section does not extinguish a defendant's right to contribution from joint tortfeasors. The language of § 13-50.5-102 does not evince an intention by the general assembly to require a defendant to establish both joint liability and several liability as a prerequisite to the defendant's right of contribution. A defendant is permitted to establish the several liability of one or more parties as a cause of the same injury to the plaintiff. Graber v. Westaway, 809 P.2d 1126 (Colo. App. 1991).

Joint and several liability may be imposed where the tortious act is based on negligence or the breach of fiduciary duty of due care or loyalty. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 898 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1995).

Joint and several liability may be imposed based on evidence of a course of conduct from which a tacit agreement to act in concert can be implied. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 898 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1995).

The elements of civil conspiracy are that: (1) Two or more persons; (2) come to a meeting of the minds; (3) on an object to be accomplished or a course of action to be followed; (4) and one or more overt unlawful acts are performed; (5) with damages as the proximate result thereof. Jet Courier Serv., Inc. v. Mulei, 771 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1989); Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

The elements necessary to find aiding and abetting liability do not, as a matter of law, include the elements necessary to find joint liability under subsection (4). Anstine v. Alexander, 128 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 152 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2007).

To impose joint liability, jury must be required to find that defendants consciously and deliberately pursued a common plan or design to commit a tortious act. Jury could find that defendants engaged in conduct that lent substantial assistance so as to have aided and abetted another, yet did not conspire with another and knowingly pursue a common plan to commit a civil wrong. Anstine v. Alexander, 128 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 152 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2007).

Under subsection (3)(b), "[p]ersons against whom recovery is sought" includes designated nonparties. Painter v. Inland/Riggles Oil Co., 911 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1995); Barton v. Adams Rental, Inc., 938 P.2d 532 (Colo. 1997).

Even a person who is immune from suit may be a nonparty designee so long as the person owes a duty of care to the injured plaintiff. Doering ex rel. Barrett v. Copper Mountain, Inc., 259 F.3d 1202 (10th Cir. 2001).

Designation of unidentified or unknown party allowed where the designation alleged a sufficient basis for believing the nonparty to be wholly or partially at fault. Pedge v. RM Holdings, Inc., 75 P.3d 1126 (Colo. App. 2002).

Parental immunity does not bar designation as nonparty under this section. It does not undermine the policy of qualified parental immunity to forbid the allocation of financial responsibility for the otherwise non-recoverable negligence of that parent to another defendant. Paris ex rel. Paris v. Dance, 194 P.3d 404 (Colo. App. 2008).

That negligence of parent is not imputable to child does not bar parent's nonparty designation under this section. Nonparty designation concerns the independent negligence of a parent; it does not attribute the negligence of the parent to the child. Paris ex rel. Paris v. Dance, 194 P.3d 404 (Colo. App. 2008).

As used in subsection (4), "tortious act" means any conduct other than breach of contract that constitutes a civil wrong and causes injury or damages; therefore, any negligent conduct resulting in injury or damage is sufficient to give rise to joint liability. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 898 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1995); Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

There is no basis to assume that by using the term "tortious act" in subsection (4) the general assembly intended to exclude one or more forms of wrongful conduct from the scope of that term. Thus, "tortious act" encompasses any wrongful conduct. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 898 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1995); Double Oak Constr., L.L.C. v. Cornerstone Dev. Int'l, L.L.C., 97 P.3d 140 (Colo. App. 2003).

Both negligent and intentional acts are sufficient to give rise to joint liability for purposes of subsection (4). Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

There need not be a "specific intent" to commit a tortious act for the actors to be subject to joint liability. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Heiserman, 898 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1995).

Nonparty's acts need not be the same as those of a defendant to reduce the defendant's liability under this section. Except to the extent joint liability is retained in subsection (4), this section establishes a pure several liability regime under which liability for an injury caused by separate torts, as well as by separate tortfeasors, may be apportioned among the persons responsible. Moody v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 847 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (4) does not require an express agreement to cause injury in order to sustain a claim for civil conspiracy. Schneider v. Midtown Motor Co., 854 P.2d 1322 (Colo. App. 1992); Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

The evidence must reveal some indicia of an agreement sufficient to prove that the defendants consciously conspired and deliberately pursued a common plan or design that resulted in a tortious act. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

Therefore, summary judgment not appropriate where there is a question as to whether the requisite nexus existed that would establish a tacit agreement between a car dealer, in its various forms, and its agents to provide vehicles to "dangerous," "mean" driver, who injured plaintiff, in exchange for payment in cash and motivation for repeat business. Schneider v. Midtown Motor Co., 854 P.2d 1322 (Colo. App. 1992).

The tort of negligent entrustment can constitute the predicate "tortious act" required to establish joint liability pursuant to subsection (4). Schneider v. Midtown Motor Co., 854 P.2d 1322 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section 13-50.5-105 does not apply to reduce a defendant's liability under subsection (4). The joint liability provision, as the more recently enacted statute, must be deemed controlling to the extent of any inconsistency. Pierce v. Wiglesworth, 903 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1994); Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Plaintiff's fault may not reduce an intentional tortfeasor's liability. Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters, 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. App. 2002).

Colorado approaches an attorney's breach of implied warranty as a hybrid of the standard tort claim for malpractice, sounding in negligence, and subject to this proportionate liability statute. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Clark, 978 F.2d 1541 (10th Cir. 1992).

In a negligence action, a nonparty designation will be struck unless evidence demonstrating a prima facie case of nonparty liability is set forth. Stone v. Satriana, 41 P.3d 705 (Colo. 2002); Anstine v. Alexander, 128 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 152 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2007).

Where defendants did not present expert testimony or any other evidence to establish the duty of care applicable to nonparty attorneys, defendants failed to establish a prima facie case of negligence. Anstine v. Alexander, 128 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 152 P.3d 497 (Colo. 2007).

Designation of a plaintiff's current legal counsel as a nonparty in a legal malpractice action by opposing counsel is subject to strong public policy considerations and opposing counsel must allege a cognizable malpractice claim. In determining whether designation of current counsel is appropriate, the court evaluated: The danger of joining successor counsel as either a nonparty or third-party as an unfair litigation tactic; the adverse effect it would have on the client's ability to pursue a malpractice action; and the interference such designation would have on attorney-client confidences. Stone v. Satriana, 41 P.3d 705 (Colo. 2002).

There is no legal duty for a legal malpractice plaintiff's counsel to ameliorate the injury effected by predecessor counsel. Stone v. Satriana, 41 P.3d 705 (Colo. 2002).

A failure to appeal can never be a failure to mitigate damages caused by malpractice at trial. Litigation is too uncertain and costly to impose such a duty on a party. Stone v. Satriana, 41 P.3d 705 (Colo. 2002).

There being no concerted action by the two tortfeasors, the trier of fact must apportion negligence or fault between them. While defendant's negligence ultimately combined with the actions of another party to cause plaintiff's loss, there is no support for the proposition that the parties consciously conspired and deliberately pursued a common plan to commit a tortious act or to cause the loss. The court does not perceive that it is possible to conspire to be negligent. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

13-21-111.6. Civil actions - reduction of damages for payment from collateral source. In any action by any person or his legal representative to recover damages for a tort resulting in death or injury to person or property, the court, after the finder of fact has returned its verdict stating the amount of damages to be awarded, shall reduce the amount of the verdict by the amount by which such person, his estate, or his personal representative has been or will be wholly or partially indemnified or compensated for his loss by any other person, corporation, insurance company, or fund in relation to the injury, damage, or death sustained; except that the verdict shall not be reduced by the amount by which such person, his estate, or his personal representative has been or will be wholly or partially indemnified or compensated by a benefit paid as a result of a contract entered into and paid for by or on behalf of such person. The court shall enter judgment on such reduced amount.

Even though the imposition of costs is required by this section, the apportionment of costs among multiple defendants is not prescribed. It remains at the discretion of the court. Bohrer v. DeHart, 943 P.2d 1220 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other grounds, 961 P.2d 472 (Colo. 1998).

Trial court erroneously computed the compensatory damages to which plaintiff was entitled by setting off amounts that plaintiff had received from settling defendants from the gross compensatory damage award for the breach of warranty and misrepresentation claims. Sprung v. Adcock, 903 P.2d 1224 (Colo. App. 1995).

Erroneous jury instruction. Negligence per se jury instruction on alleged nonparty's statutory violation should not have been given when there was no evidence that another person or vehicle was involved. Ramirez v. Mixsooke, 907 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1994).

District court's failure to provide the jury with computational verdict forms in compliance with this section was error. The error was harmless, however, because the court properly instructed the jury on apportionment of damages, and the verdict forms did not demonstrate that the jury ignored the instructions. Bohrer v. DeHart, 961 P.2d 472 (Colo. 1998).

Where plaintiff seeks damages for aggravation of a pre-existing condition, the doctrine of apportionment should be applied in conjunction with determining pro rata liability. Conduct that originally created the condition cannot be prorated with conduct that aggravated the condition. The jury must apportion damages between those arising from the pre-existing condition and those arising from aggravation of the condition. Pro rata liability then provides the method for determining legal responsibility for the damages after they are separated. Fried v. Leong, 946 P.2d 487 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section sets forth a general rule that damages for which a claimant has been wholly or partially indemnified or compensated by another cannot be recovered in a tort action against the tortfeasor involving the same injury. Miller v. Brannon, 207 P.3d 923 (Colo. App. 2009).

The clear and plain meaning of this section is that a determination of liability is not required for a setoff; the only requirement is that compensation made be in relation to the injury or damage sustained. U.S. Fidelity and Guarantee Co. v. Salida Gas Serv. Co., 793 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1989).

The intent of this section is to prevent double recovery by an injured party. U.S. Fidelity and Guarantee Co. v. Salida Gas Serv. Co., 793 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1989); Montoya v. Grease Monkey Holding Corp., 883 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section does not apply to payments made by settling tortfeasors, but only to payments from collateral sources independent of any alleged tort liability. Montoya v. Grease Monkey Holding Corp., 883 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994); Smith v. Vincent, 77 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

Intent of this section was not to deny compensation to which a claimant was entitled under a contract the claimant or someone on the claimant's behalf entered into and paid for with the expectation of receiving the contract benefits in the future. The purpose of excluding such contractual benefits is to allow recovery to a claimant who contracted for and purchased, either directly or indirectly, some type of insurance or other protection against accident-induced losses without penalizing the person for prudence and thereby providing a windfall for a culpable tortfeasor. Van Waters & Rodgers, Inc. v. Keelan, 840 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1992); Frost v. Schroeder & Co., Inc., 876 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1994).

The intent of the contract exception of this section is to ensure that a defendant does not receive a windfall by avoiding payment of damages because the plaintiff had the foresight to purchase insurance, or enter into a contract that compensates the plaintiff for injury caused by the defendant. When, however, the payor of the compensation pursuant to the contract is also liable for the plaintiff's judgment, the rationale for the contract exception disappears. In such a case, offset pursuant to this section is required. Colo. Permanente Medical Group, P.C. v. Evans, 926 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1996); Levy v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

This section controls over § 13-50.5-105, since it was passed last. U.S. Fidelity and Guarantee Co. v. Salida Gas Serv. Co., 793 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1989).

This section and § 13-50.5-105 must be reconciled, if possible, to give effect to both sections. Therefore, § 13-50.5-105 should apply when a percentage of negligence has been attributed by the fact finder to the non-party while this section should control if the fact finder attributes no fault to the non-party. Gutierrez v. Bussey, 837 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1992).

Collateral source rule is not applicable to personal injury protection benefit payments (PIP). A jury instruction to not award damages for losses that are eligible for coverage under the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act (§ 10-4-701) sets forth a proper statement of the law. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 2003 repeal of § 10-4-713).

Under the common law collateral source rule, evidence of the amount paid by third-party payors, and conversely, the amount discounted (or written off) from the billed amount due under a contract between the third-party payor and the provider, is inadmissible, even to show the reasonable value of services rendered, because these payments and discounts constitute collateral sources. Crossgrove v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Colorado's common law collateral source rule is not limited to protecting merely the cash amounts paid to providers for services rendered; rather, the rule is broad enough to encompass the amount by which a medical provider's bill is discounted pursuant to a contractual arrangement between the provider and third-party payor. Crossgrove v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

This section does not address the evidentiary prohibition of the collateral source rule; however, the admission of the evidence is still prohibited by the common law collateral source rule. Crossgrove v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

This section has no effect until the finder of fact returns a verdict; accordingly, it has no impact on the admissibility of evidence during trial. Because the general assembly spoke with exactitude in altering the application of the collateral source rule after the verdict is received from the fact finder, but expressed no intention to alter the jury's function in assessing the damages, this section does not abrogate the common law rule prohibiting evidence of collateral sources at trial. Crossgrove v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

The contract exception to the collateral source rule applies to PIP benefits of an automobile insurance policy. Because the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act (former §§ 10-4-701 to 10-4-726) (“no-fault insurance act”), under which losses resulting from an automobile accident that were eligible for PIP coverage under an insurance policy were not recoverable in a tort action against the tortfeasor who caused the losses, was repealed before the automobile accident occurred, the contract exception to the collateral source rule applied to plaintiff’s claim for lost earnings. Miller v. Brannon, 207 P.3d 923 (Colo. App. 2009) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 2003 repeal of § 10-4-713).

There is nothing in the language of the contract exception that would exclude PIP benefits because the no-fault insurance act required a person to purchase such benefits. Miller v. Brannon, 207 P.3d 923 (Colo. App. 2009) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 2003 repeal of § 10-4-713).

The scope of this section is not entirely clear. Therefore, the courts must look beyond the plain language to determine legislative intent. The court is to look at the object sought to be attained by the general assembly and at the legislative history. Van Waters and Rogers, Inc. v. Keelen, 840 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1992).

A settlement accompanied by a release or covenant not to execute falls within the scope of the “contract” exception. Simon v. Coppola, 876 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1993).

Collateral source rule is not applicable to benefits under a fire and police pension plan contract. This section was part of sweeping legislation designed to limit amounts that plaintiffs can recover. However, legislative history indicates that the exemptions to the collateral source rule include benefits received under a fire and police pension plan contract, regardless of whether consideration paid for benefits is in the form of money or services. Van Waters and Rogers, Inc. v. Keelen, 840 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1992).

The contract exception to this section applies to a contract between plaintiff’s insurer and health care providers that decreased the amount actually paid for plaintiff’s medical care and thereby injured to plaintiff’s benefit. The trial court erred by reducing plaintiff’s damages award by the amount in excess of the medical bills actually paid on plaintiff’s behalf. Tucker v. Volunteers of Am. Colo. Branch, 211 P.3d 708 (Colo. App. 2008), aff’d sub nom. Volunteers of Am. v. Gardenswartz, 242 P.3d 1080 (Colo. 2010).

Under the collateral source rule, a plaintiff may recover damages for the full amount of medical expenses incurred. Volunteers of Am. v. Gardenswartz, 242 P.3d 1080 (Colo. 2010).

The discounted medical rates paid by plaintiff’s insurance company are a direct result of his health insurance contract. Therefore, tortfeasor may not claim these discounts to reduce its liability for the medical care plaintiff received. Volunteers of Am. v. Gardenswartz, 242 P.3d 1080 (Colo. 2010).

This section is subject to former § 10-4-713 (1) of the no-fault insurance act, which prohibits recovery of PIP benefits in tort actions, notwithstanding that such benefits may qualify as “benefit[s] paid as a result of a contract entered into and paid for by” the plaintiff. Martinez v. Shapland, 833 P.2d 837 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 2003 repeal of § 10-4-713).

Benefits that result from an employment contract are protected by the exception clause of this section. An employee’s services are something of value given in exchange for an employment contract and its derivative benefits. Disability payments received as part of the compensation for such services are entitled to the same protection against offset as proceeds from private insurance contracts. Van Waters & Rogers, Inc. v. Keelen, 840 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1992).

When the jury assigns fault to a settling party as a nonparty pursuant to this section, the trial verdict shall be reduced by an amount equal to the cumulative percentage of fault attributed to the settling nonparties. The amount to be reduced from the trial verdict shall be calculated by multiplying the total percentage of liability attributed to the settling nonparties by the total trial verdict awarded the plaintiff. Smith v. Zufelt, 880 P.2d 1178 (Colo. 1994).

However, the amount of a solatium award made under § 13-21-203.5 may not be reduced according to general principles of pro-rata liability. Smith v. Vincent, 77 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court erred in an action for negligence for gas explosion that destroyed the home of insurance company’s client by not allowing the judgment against joint tortfeasors to be offset by the amount paid to the insurance company by a plumbing company, even though the plumbing company was found not to be negligent. U.S. Fidelity and Guarantee Co. v. Salida Gas Serv. Co., 793 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1989).

Unemployment compensation benefits are not deductible by employer to mitigate damages in an action for damages for breach of an employment contract. Technical Computer Serv. v. Buckley, 844 P.2d 1249 (Colo. App. 1992).

Court was correct in ordering that any future payments paid to homeowners from homeowners’ warranty insurance policy should be credited against judgment under collateral source rule. Howard v. Wood Bros. Homes, Inc., 835 P.2d 556 (Colo. App. 1992).

The indirect payment of insurance premiums by real property purchasers through the sellers pursuant to a wrap-around agreement is a contract entered into and paid for by or on behalf of the purchasers that falls within the exception clause in this section. The trial court erred in setting off the insurance proceeds against the jury verdict in favor of the purchasers. Frost v. Schroeder & Co., Inc., 876 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1994).

Social security disability insurance benefits should not be set off against UM/UIM insurance benefits because SSDI benefits arise from a "contract entered into and paid for" by the injured party. Barnett v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 843 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1993).

Nothing in this section would impermissibly limit an insured's recovery of UM/UIM coverage, where insurer aggregates amounts received by insured from all parties liable for his or her injuries. Carlisle v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 946 P.2d 555 (Colo. App. 1997).

Benefits paid pursuant to employment contract are not subject to statutory setoff. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993).

In a contract case, the common law collateral source rule applies rather than this section. Yeiser v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 214 P.3d 458 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 247 P.3d 1022 (Colo. 2011).

13-21-111.7. Assumption of risk - consideration by trier of fact. Assumption of a risk by a person shall be considered by the trier of fact in apportioning negligence pursuant to section 13-21-111. For the purposes of this section, a person assumes the risk of injury or damage if he voluntarily or unreasonably exposes himself to injury or damage with knowledge or appreciation of the danger and risk involved. In any trial to a jury in which the defense of assumption of risk is an issue for determination by the jury, the court shall instruct the jury on the elements as described in this section.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Legal Aspects of Health and Fitness Clubs: A Healthy and Dangerous Industry", see 15 Colo. Law. 1787 (1986).

This section satisfies the rational basis in fact standard of equal protection analysis since the statutory definition under this section is based on the long-standing legal principle that there are significant differences between plaintiffs and defendants such that different legal consequences may be attributed to their respective conduct solely on the basis of their status as either plaintiff or defendant in a negligence action. Harris v. The Ark, 810 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1991).

This section satisfies equal protection analysis under the rational basis standard of review since one of the purposes is to make clear that both the voluntary and the unreasonable exposure to a known danger are species of assumption of risk under the comparative negligence statutory scheme. Harris v. The Ark, 810 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1991).

By defining "assumption of risk" in disjunctive terms of "voluntary" or "unreasonable" conduct, this section includes within the definition a plaintiff's voluntary but not necessarily unreasonable, as well as a plaintiff's unreasonable, exposure to a known danger. Harris v. The Ark, 810 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1991); Carter v. Lovelace, 844 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1992).

Assumption of risk requires knowledge of the danger and consent to it. Carter v. Lovelace, 844 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1992);

Scott v. City of Greeley, 931 P.2d 525 (Colo. App. 1996).

Attempt to pass vehicles involved negligence and assumption of some risks, but not the known risk that someone would turn immediately in front of him. To hold otherwise would be to hold that all drivers presume the risk of any accident when passing another automobile. Carter v. Lovelace, 844 P.2d 1288 (Colo. App. 1992).

This section defines the term "assumption of risk" in language that gives clear notice of the conduct encompassed within the term — that is, the voluntary or unreasonable exposure to injury or damage with knowledge or appreciation of the danger and risk involved — and provides meaningful guidance to courts and juries in resolving issues of liability and damages by directing them to factor the plaintiff's assumption of risk into the comparative negligence calculus. Harris v. The Ark, 810 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1991).

A passenger in an automobile driven by an intoxicated person may be negligent for having entered the automobile in the first place. Thus, an instruction on assumption of risk is proper when a plaintiff is injured while a passenger in an automobile driven by someone who the plaintiff has reason to know is intoxicated. Wark v. McClellan, 68 P.3d 574 (Colo. App. 2003).

No error in failing to instruct jury on assumption of risk. Howard v. Wood Bros. Homes, Inc., 835 P.2d 556 (Colo. App. 1992).

13-21-111.8. Assumption of risk - shooting ranges. (1) Any person who engages in sport shooting activities at a qualifying sport shooting range, as defined under section 25-12-109 (2) (d), C.R.S., assumes the risk of injury or damage associated with sport shooting activities as set forth in section 13-21-111.7.

(2) For purposes of this section, “engages in sport shooting activities” means entering and exiting a qualifying sport shooting range, preparing to shoot, waiting to shoot, shooting, or assisting another person in shooting at a qualifying sport shooting range. The term includes being a spectator at a qualifying sport shooting range and being present in the range for any reason.

13-21-113. Donation of items of food - exemption from civil and criminal liability. (1) No farmer, retail food establishment, or processor, distributor, wholesaler, or retailer of food who donates items of food to a nonprofit organization for use or distribution in providing assistance to needy or poor persons nor any nonprofit organization in receipt of such gleaned or donated food who transfers said food to another nonprofit organization for use or distribution in providing assistance to needy or poor persons shall be liable for damages in any civil action or subject to prosecution in any criminal proceeding resulting from the nature, age, condition, or packaging of such donated foods; except that this exemption shall not apply to the willful, wanton, or reckless acts of donors which result in injury to recipients of such donated foods. For the purposes of this section, “retail food establishment” shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 25-4-1602 (14), C.R.S., and “nonprofit organization” means any organization which is exempt from the income tax imposed under article 22 of title 39, C.R.S.; except that the term “nonprofit organization” does not include organizations which sell or offer to sell such donated items of food.

(2) Nothing in this section relieves any nonprofit organization that serves or provides food to needy persons for their consumption from any liability for any injury, including, but not limited to, injury resulting from ingesting donated foods, as a result of receiving, accepting, gathering, or removing any foods donated under this section; except that a nonprofit organization is not liable for any injury caused by donated food produced pursuant to the “Colorado Cottage Foods Act”, section 25-4-1614, C.R.S., unless the nonprofit organization acted unreasonably.

(3) Any nonprofit organization that receives any donated items of food pursuant to this section shall not sell or offer to sell any such donated items of food. This prohibition shall not affect the transfer of such donated items of gleaned or donated food between nonprofit organizations, without contemplation of remuneration, for ultimate disposition in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(4) Nothing in this section is intended to restrict the authority of any appropriate agency to regulate or ban the use of such donated foods for human consumption.

13-21-113.3. Donation of firefighting equipment - exemption from civil and criminal liability - definitions - legislative declaration. (1) A fire department or other person or entity that donates surplus firefighting equipment to a fire department shall not be liable for damages in any civil action or subject to prosecution in any criminal proceeding resulting from the nature, age, condition, or packaging of such equipment; except that this exemption shall not apply to the grossly negligent, willful, wanton, or reckless acts of donors that result in injury to recipients of such equipment.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Fire department" has the meaning set forth in section 24-33.5-1202, C.R.S., and includes a fire department that uses paid firefighters, volunteer firefighters, or both. The term includes, without limitation, not-for-profit nongovernmental entities that are organized to provide firefighting services.

(b) "Firefighting equipment" means any and all equipment designed for or typically used in the prevention and suppression of fire, the protection of firefighters, or the rescue and extrication of victims of fire or other emergencies, including without limitation hoses, fire trucks, rescue vehicles, extrication equipment, protective clothing, and breathing apparatus.

(3) A fire department that receives donated firefighting equipment pursuant to this section shall not sell or offer to sell any such donated equipment. This prohibition shall not affect the transfer of such donated equipment, without contemplation of remuneration, between fire departments for future use.

(4) Nothing in this section limits the authority of any appropriate agency to regulate, prohibit, or place conditions on the use of specific firefighting equipment.

(5) The general assembly intends that the provisions of this section and of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S., be read together and harmonized. If any provision of this section is construed to conflict with a provision of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", the provision that grants the greatest immunity shall prevail.

13-21-113.5. Use of school or nonprofit organization kitchen - exemption from civil and criminal liability. A school or nonprofit organization that provides one or more community kitchens used by producers to bake or process goods for sale pursuant to the "Colorado Cottage Foods Act", section 25-4-1614, C.R.S., is not liable for damages in any civil action or subject to prosecution in any criminal proceeding resulting from the use of its kitchens by producers preparing goods for direct sale to consumers, unless the school or nonprofit organization acted unreasonably. A school or nonprofit organization may require anyone using its kitchens for this purpose to show proof of liability insurance before using the kitchen. This section does not apply to an injury or death of the ultimate user of the product that results from an act or omission of the school or nonprofit organization constituting gross negligence or intentional misconduct.

13-21-113.7. Immunity of volunteer firefighters, incident management teams, and their employers or organizations - definitions - legislative declaration. (1) A volunteer firefighter who, in good faith, takes part in firefighting efforts or provides emergency care, rescue, assistance, or recovery services at the scene of an emergency, any incident management team, and any person who, in good faith, commands, directs, employs, sponsors, or represents any such volunteer firefighter or incident management team shall not be liable for civil damages as a result of an act or omission by such volunteer firefighter, incident management team, or other person in connection with the emergency; except that this exemption shall not apply to grossly negligent, willful, wanton, or reckless acts or omissions.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Emergency" means any incident to which a response by a fire department or incident management team is appropriate or requested, including, without limitation:

(I) A fire, fire alarm response, motor vehicle accident, rescue call, or hazardous materials incident;

(II) A natural or man-made disaster such as an earthquake, flood, or severe weather event;

(III) A terrorist attack; or

(IV) An outbreak of a harmful biological agent or infectious disease.

(b) "Fire department" has the meaning set forth in section 24-33.5-1202, C.R.S., and includes a fire department that uses paid firefighters, volunteer firefighters, or both. The term includes, without limitation, not-for-profit nongovernmental entities that are organized to provide firefighting services.

(c) "Incident management team" means an ad hoc or standing team of trained personnel from different departments, organizations, agencies, and jurisdictions activated to manage the logistical, fiscal, planning, operational, safety, and community issues related to an emergency or other incident.

(d) "Volunteer firefighter" has the meaning set forth in section 31-30-1102, C.R.S., and includes volunteer firefighters of not-for-profit nongovernmental entities that are organized to provide firefighting services.

(3) The general assembly intends that the provisions of this section and of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S., be read together and harmonized. If any provision of this section is construed to conflict with a provision of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", the provision that grants the greatest immunity shall prevail.

13-21-114. Immunity of mine rescue participants and their employers or organizations. No person engaged in mine rescue or recovery work who, in good faith, renders emergency care, rescue, assistance, or recovery services at the scene of any emergency at or in a mine in this state or who employs, sponsors, or represents any person rendering emergency care, rescue, assistance, or recovery services shall be liable for any civil damages as a result of any act or omission by any person in rendering emergency care, rescue, assistance, or recovery service.

13-21-115. Actions against landowners. (1) For the purposes of this section, "landowner" includes, without limitation, an authorized agent or a person in possession of real property and a person legally responsible for the condition of real property or for the activities conducted or circumstances existing on real property.

(1.5) The general assembly hereby finds and declares:

(a) That the provisions of this section were enacted in 1986 to promote a state policy of responsibility by both landowners and those upon the land as well as to assure that the ability of an injured party to recover is correlated with his status as a trespasser, licensee, or invitee;

(b) That these objectives were characterized by the Colorado supreme court as "legitimate governmental interests" in Gallegos v. Phipps, No. 88 SA 141 (September 18, 1989);

(c) That the purpose of amending this section in the 1990 legislative session is to assure that the language of this section effectuates these legitimate governmental interests by imposing on landowners a higher standard of care with respect to an invitee than a licensee, and a higher standard of care with respect to a licensee than a trespasser;

(d) That the purpose of this section is also to create a legal climate which will promote private property rights and commercial enterprise and will foster the availability and affordability of insurance;

(e) That the general assembly recognizes that by amending this section it is not reinstating the common law status categories as they existed immediately prior to Mile Hi Fence v. Radovich, 175 Colo. 537, 489 P.2d 308 (1971) but that its purpose is to protect landowners from liability in some circumstances when they were not protected at common law and to define the instances when liability will be imposed in the manner most consistent with the policies set forth in paragraphs (a), (c), and (d) of this subsection (1.5).

(2) In any civil action brought against a landowner by a person who alleges injury occurring while on the real property of another and by reason of the condition of such property, or activities conducted or circumstances existing on such property, the landowner shall be liable only as provided in subsection (3) of this section. Sections 13-21-111, 13-21-111.5, and 13-21-111.7 shall apply to an action to which this section applies. This subsection (2) shall not be construed to abrogate the doctrine of attractive nuisance as applied to persons under fourteen years of age. A person who is at least fourteen years of age but is less than eighteen years of age shall be presumed competent for purposes of the application of this section.

(3) (a) A trespasser may recover only for damages willfully or deliberately caused by the landowner.

(b) A licensee may recover only for damages caused:

(I) By the landowner's unreasonable failure to exercise reasonable care with respect to dangers created by the landowner of which the landowner actually knew; or

(II) By the landowner's unreasonable failure to warn of dangers not created by the landowner which are not ordinarily present on property of the type involved and of which the landowner actually knew.

(c) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), an invitee may recover for damages caused by the landowner's unreasonable failure to exercise reasonable care to protect against dangers of which he actually knew or should have known.

(II) If the landowner's real property is classified for property tax purposes as agricultural land or vacant land, an invitee may recover for damages caused by the landowner's unreasonable failure to exercise reasonable care to protect against dangers of which he actually knew.

(3.5) It is the intent of the general assembly in enacting the provisions of subsection (3) of this section that the circumstances under which a licensee may recover include all of the circumstances under which a trespasser could recover and that the circumstances under which an invitee may recover include all of the circumstances under which a trespasser or a licensee could recover.

(4) In any action to which this section applies, the judge shall determine whether the plaintiff is a trespasser, a licensee, or an invitee, in accordance with the definitions set forth in subsection (5) of this section. If two or more landowners are parties defendant to the action, the judge shall determine the application of this section to each such landowner. The issues of liability and damages in any such action shall be determined by the jury or, if there is no jury, by the judge.

(5) As used in this section:

(a) "Invitee" means a person who enters or remains on the land of another to transact business in which the parties are mutually interested or who enters or remains on such land in response to the landowner's express or implied representation that the public is requested, expected, or intended to enter or remain.

(b) "Licensee" means a person who enters or remains on the land of another for the licensee's own convenience or to advance his own interests, pursuant to the landowner's permission or consent. "Licensee" includes a social guest.

(c) "Trespasser" means a person who enters or remains on the land of another without the landowner's consent.

(6) If any provision of this section is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional, the remaining provisions of the section shall be deemed valid.

Editor's note: Subsections (5)(a) and (5)(c), as they were enacted in House Bill 90-1107, were relettered on revision in 2002 as (5)(c) and (5)(a), respectively.

Constitutionality. The phrase "deliberate failure to exercise reasonable care" found in subsection (3)(c) is not unconstitutionally vague. Giebink v. Fischer, 709 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1989).

This section does not violate article II, § 6, of the state constitution since that provision is a mandate to the judiciary and not the legislature. Giebink v. Fischer, 709 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1989).

This section does not violate article V, section 25 of the state constitution since this provision applies uniformly to all landowners. Giebink v. Fischer, 709 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1989).

This section does not violate equal protection since the provision of limited protection to landowners is reasonably related to the protection of the state economy. Giebink v. Fischer, 709 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1989).

Unconstitutionality. This section violates both the federal and state constitutional guarantees of equal protection of the laws. Gallegos v. Phipps, 779 P.2d 856 (Colo. 1989); Klausz v. Dillion Co., Inc., 779 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1989) (disagreeing with Giebink v. Fischer cited above) (decided prior to 1990 amendments).

The Colorado Premises Liability Act provides the exclusive remedy against a landowner for physical injuries sustained on the landowner's property. Henderson v. Master Klean Janitorial, Inc., 70 P.3d 612 (Colo. App. 2003); Vigil v. Franklin, 103 P.3d 322 (Colo. 2004); Anderson v. Hyland Hills Park & Recreation Dist., 119 P.3d 533 (Colo. App. 2004); Sweeney v. United Artists Theater Circuit, 119 P.3d 538 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section preempts the common law creation of both landowner duties and defenses to those duties. Consequently, the open and obvious danger doctrine cannot be asserted by a landowner as a defense to a premises liability law suit. Vigil v. Franklin, 103 P.3d 322 (Colo. 2004).

Section does not require that damages resulting from landowner's negligence be assessed without regard to negligence of the injured party or fault of a nonparty. Union Pac. R.R. v. Martin, 209 P.3d 185 (Colo. 2009).

Section does not abrogate statutorily created defenses, which were available to landowners before the 2006 amendment and afterward. The trial court correctly allowed defendants' affirmative defenses of comparative negligence and assumption of the risk. Tucker v. Volunteers of Am. Colo. Branch, 211 P.3d 708 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Volunteers of Am. v. Gardenswartz, 242 P.3d 1080 (Colo. 2010).

Premises Liability Act never expressly excluded the statutory defense of comparative negligence from its coverage, and limiting the statutory protection provided to landowners would tend to increase liability rather than protect landowners from liability. DeWitt v. Tara Woods Ltd. P'ship, 214 P.3d 466 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment).

Statute does not have to expressly bar waiver by contract for the contract provision to be invalid because it is contrary to public policy. Stanley v. Creighton Co., 911 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1996).

Holding title to property is not dispositive in determining who is a landowner under subsection (1). Wark v. U.S., 269 F.3d 1185 (10th Cir. 2001).

The term "landowner" is no more expansive than the common law definition. Wark v. U.S., 269 F.3d 1185 (10th Cir. 2001).

A landowner is any person in possession of real property and such possession need not necessarily be to the exclusion of all others. Therefore, for purposes of this section, a landowner can be an independent contractor. Pierson v. Black Canyon Aggregates, Inc., 48 P.3d 1215 (Colo. 2002).

This section offers its protection to a person who is legally conducting an activity on the property or legally creating a condition on the property. Such person or entity is responsible for the activity or condition and, therefore, prospectively liable to an entrant onto the property. Pierson v. Black Canyon Aggregates, Inc., 48 P.3d 1215 (Colo. 2002); Wycoff v. Grace Cmty. Church, 251 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

The test for determining if a victim is an invitee is whether she or he was on the premises to transact business in which the parties are mutually interested. Grizzell v. Hartman Enters., Inc., 68 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court erred in ruling that plaintiff was defendant's licensee rather than invitee. Therefore, jury instructions minimized the duties defendant owed to plaintiff under the Premises Liability Act. Wycoff v. Seventh Day Adventist Ass'n, 251 P.3d 1258 (Colo. App. 2010).

If the victim was on the premises at an employee's invitation for either the employee's benefit, victim's benefit, or their mutual benefit, then she or he was a licensee or trespasser not an invitee. Grizzell v. Hartman Enters., Inc., 68 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

So long as a landowner retains possession of its property, it cannot delegate the duties imposed on it by subsection (1). Jules v. Embassy Props., Inc., 905 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1995).

But possession of property is not dependent upon title and need not be exclusive. Under this section, a party not an owner or lessee may nevertheless be a "landowner" if the party either maintains control over the property or is legally responsible for either the condition of the property or for activities conducted on the property. Henderson v. Master Klean Janitorial, Inc., 70 P.3d 612 (Colo. App. 2003).

However, a contractor who would otherwise be categorized as a "landowner" during time of work on property is not liable if, at the time of the accident in question, the contractor was neither in possession of the property nor conducting any activity related to the property. In such a case, the plaintiff is not required to prove that defendant contractor had actual knowledge of the alleged dangerous condition. Land-Wells v. Rain Way Sprinkler & Lands., 187 P.3d 1152 (Colo. App. 2008).

Contractor who had a legal responsibility for the condition of the premises and who was potentially liable for injuries resulting from that condition held to be a "landowner" for purposes of this section. Henderson v. Master Klean Janitorial, Inc., 70 P.3d 612 (Colo. App. 2003).

When a public entity provides a public building for public use, it owes a nondelegable duty to protect invitees from an unreasonable risk to their health and safety due to a negligent act or omission in constructing or maintaining the facility. Springer v. City & County of Denver, 13 P.3d 794 (Colo. 2000).

Owner of property adjacent to public sidewalk does not have a duty to pedestrians to clear sidewalk of snow merely because it complied with snow removal ordinance from time to time and on a voluntary basis in order to avoid the imposition of penalties. Burbach v. Canwest Invs., LLC, 224 P.3d 437 (Colo. App. 2009).

Snow removal ordinance does not make public sidewalks the "property of" adjacent property owners. The court therefore properly granted summary judgement since owner of property adjacent to public sidewalk was not legally responsible for the condition of the sidewalk. Burbach v. Canwest Invs., LLC, 224 P.3d 437 (Colo. App. 2009).

A landlord retaining sufficient control over an area or instrumentality has a duty to exercise due care in maintaining that area or instrumentality. Nordin v. Madden, 148 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2006).

In effect, this section establishes two separate elements for landowner liability: (1) Breach of a duty to use reasonable care to protect against a danger on the property, and (2) actual or constructive knowledge of the danger. Sofford v. Schindler Elevator Corp., 954 F. Supp. 1459 (D. Colo. 1997).

Statute's requirement that the landowner "knew or should have known" of the danger can be satisfied by actual or constructive knowledge. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Educ. Ctr., 187 P.3d 565 (Colo. 2008).

Plaintiff presented sufficient evidence to overcome defendant's motion for summary judgment on the issue of knowledge because, as the builder, defendant had actual or constructive knowledge of the violation of a building code provision that was intended to ensure the safety of those on the premises, such as plaintiff. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Educ. Ctr., 187 P.3d 565 (Colo. 2008).

Plaintiff may overcome summary judgment on the issue of a landowner's unreasonable failure to exercise reasonable care by presenting evidence that the landowner violated a statute or ordinance that was intended to protect the plaintiff from the type of injury plaintiff suffered. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Educ. Ctr., 187 P.3d 565 (Colo. 2008).

A plaintiff may recover against the landowner pursuant to the statute only and not under any other theory of negligence. The language of the premises liability statute makes clear that a party may no longer bring a negligence per se claim against a landowner to recover for damages caused on the premises. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Educ. Ctr., 187 P.3d 565 (Colo. 2008).

Building code violation may be evidence that owners failed to use reasonable care. Trial court did not err in tendering to a jury an instruction that included this statement, while rejecting other jury instructions that misstated the relationship between the common law and the premises liability act. Lombard v. Colo. Outdoor Educ. Ctr., Inc., 266 P.3d 412 (Colo. App. 2011).

No lessor liability for injuries. Under this section, as under common law, a lessor who has transferred possession and control over the leased premises to a lessee has no liability for injuries resulting from a dangerous condition of the premises absent proof as to one of the exceptions. Perez v. Grovert, 962 P.2d 996 (Colo. App. 1998).

Under this section, a landlord who has transferred control of the premises to a tenant is no longer a "person in possession" of the real property and is not liable for injuries resulting from a danger on the premises unless the landlord had actual knowledge of the danger before the transfer. Wilson v. Marchiondo, 124 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2005).

And no landowner liability for injuries occurring on that portion of an easement exclusively owned, maintained, and controlled by easement holder. deBoer v. Jones, 996 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 2000); deBoer v. Ute Water Conservancy Dist., 17 P.3d 187 (Colo. App. 2000).

The reservation of the right of inspection and the right of maintenance and repairs is generally not a sufficient attribute of control to support imposition of tort liability on the lessor for injuries to the tenant or third parties. Wilson v. Marchiondo, 124 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section does not reflect an intention to extend the application of the premises liability doctrine to the negligent supply of a chattel by a landowner. Geringer v. Wildhorn Ranch, Inc., 706 F.Supp. 1442 (D. Colo. 1988).

This section does not apply to ski accident cases which are governed by the Ski Safety Act, article 44 of title 33, C.R.S. Calvert v. Aspen Skiing Co., 700 F.Supp. 520 (D. Colo. 1988).

This section would apply to ski accident cases which involve dangerous conditions that are not ordinarily present at ski areas since the Ski Safety Act, article 44 of title 33, C.R.S., protects skiers against only those dangerous conditions that are commonly present at ski areas. Giebink v. Fischer, 709 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1989).

Claim of spectator injured by flying puck at hockey rink governed by this section. The common law "no duty" rule for injuries suffered by spectators at sporting events was superseded by this section. Teneyck v. Roller Hockey Colo., Ltd., 10 P.3d 707 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (2) does not apply when plaintiff is a co-owner of the area where the injuries were sustained, because the injury could not have occurred on the real property of another. Acierno v. Trailside Townhome Ass'n, Inc., 862 P.2d 975 (Colo. App. 1993).

Jury instructions presenting a general negligence theory with regard to an invitee was not prejudicial error, even if there is a meaningful difference between a failure to exercise reasonable care, in the instruction, and an unreasonable failure to exercise reasonable care, from the statute. Lawson v. Safeway, Inc., 878 P.2d 127 (Colo. App. 1994); Thornbury v. Allen, 991 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1999).

Because plaintiff is a landowner, trial court should have applied the standard of care in this section rather than the standard of care for operators of amusement devices contained in the jury instructions. Anderson v. Hyland Hills Park & Recreation Dist., 119 P.3d 533 (Colo. App. 2004).

The provisions of this act do not apply to the common areas of a townhome complex that are owned by a townhome owners association, because the townhome owners have a continuing right of access to the common areas in the townhome complex by virtue of their status as owners, regardless of whether the association has give consent. Trailside Townhome Ass'n, Inc. v. Acierno, 880 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1994).

Rather, the relationship between the townhome owners association and the townhome owners is controlled by the duties specified in the operative documents creating the townhome complex and the association, to the extent those duties are consistent with public policy. Trailside Townhome Ass'n, Inc. v. Acierno, 880 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1994).

Under this section, a tenant is classified as an invitee, as a customer of the landlord in a continuing business relationship that is mutually beneficial, regardless of the particular activity in which the tenant was engaged when injured. Maes v. Lakeview Assocs., Ltd., 892 P.2d 375 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 907 P.2d 580 (Colo. 1995); Pedge v. RM Holdings, Inc., 75 P.3d 1126 (Colo. App. 2002).

Plaintiff who paid admission was invitee and not a social guest. Social hosts do not typically require their guests to sign permission slips and pay for their hospitality. Wycoff v. Grace Cmty. Church, 251 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

A social guest of a tenant is a licensee absent a showing that the guest entered the premises to transact business with the landlord or that the landlord represented that the guest was expected to enter or remain. Wilson v. Marchiondo, 124 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2005).

Contractor with legal responsibility for the condition of the premises owes an employee of a lessor of the premises a duty of care which this section imposes upon a landowner with respect to an invitee. Henderson v. Master

Klean Janitorial, Inc., 70 P.3d 612 (Colo. App. 2003).

The liability of a landowner to a licensee under this section is to be limited to situations in which the landowner possesses an active awareness of the dangerous condition. Wright v. Vail Run Resort Cmty. Ass'n, 917 P.2d 364 (Colo. App. 1996); Grizzell v. Hartman Enters., Inc., 68 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Summary judgment in favor of landlord proper in absence of any evidence concerning landlord's knowledge of alleged defect. Casey v. Christie Lodge Owners Ass'n, 923 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section covers claims for negligent supervision and retention when a claim relates to the condition of property. Casey v. Christie Lodge Owners Ass'n, 923 P.2d 365 (Colo. App. 1996).

13-21-115.5. Volunteer service act - immunity - exception for operation of motor vehicles. (1) This section shall be known and may be cited as the "Volunteer Service Act".

(2) The general assembly finds and declares that:

(a) The willingness of volunteers to offer their services has been increasingly deterred by a perception that they put personal assets at risk in the event of tort actions seeking damages arising from their activities as volunteers;

(b) The contributions of programs, activities, and services to communities is diminished and worthwhile programs, activities, and services are deterred by the unwillingness of volunteers to serve as volunteers of nonprofit public and private organizations;

(c) It is in the public interest to strike a balance between the right of a person to seek redress for injury and the right of an individual to freely give time and energy without compensation as a volunteer in service to the community without fear of personal liability for acts undertaken in good faith absent willful and wanton conduct on the part of the volunteer; and

(d) The provisions of this section are intended to encourage volunteers to contribute their services for the good of their communities and at the same time provide a reasonable basis for redress of claims which may arise relating to those services.

(3) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Nonprofit corporation" means any corporation which is exempt from taxation pursuant to section 501(a) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", 26 U.S.C. sec. 501(a), as amended, or which is listed as an exempt organization in section 501(c) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", 26 U.S.C. sec. 501(c), as amended. The term includes a not-for-profit corporation.

13-21-116. Actions not constituting an assumption of duty - board member immunity - immunity for volunteers assisting organizations for young persons. (1) It is the intent of the general assembly to encourage the provision of services or assistance by persons on a voluntary basis to enhance the public safety rather than to allow judicial decisions to establish precedents which discourage such services or assistance to the detriment of public safety.

(2) (a) To encourage the provision of services or assistance by persons on a voluntary basis, a person shall not be deemed to have assumed a duty of care where none otherwise existed when he performs a service or an act of assistance, without compensation or expectation of compensation, for the benefit of another person, or adopts or enforces a policy or a regulation to protect another person's health or safety. Such person providing such services or assistance or adopting or enforcing such a policy or regulation shall not be liable for any civil damages for acts or omissions in good faith. Such performance of a service or an act of assistance for the benefit of another person or adoption or enforcement of a policy or regulation for the protection of another person's health or safety shall not create any duty of care with respect to a third person, nor shall it create a duty for any person to perform such a service or an act of assistance nor to adopt or enforce such a policy or regulation.

(b) (I) No member of the board of directors of a nonprofit corporation or nonprofit organization shall be held liable for actions taken or omissions made in the performance of his or her duties as a board member except for wanton and willful acts or omissions. The term includes a not-for-profit corporation.

(B) "Nonprofit organization" means any organization which is exempt from taxation pursuant to section 501(a) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", 26 U.S.C. sec. 501(a), as amended, and listed as an exempt organization in section 501(c) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", 26 U.S.C. sec. 501(c), as amended.

ANNOTATION

“Good samaritan” provisions of this section do not apply where a pre-existing duty exists. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993).

Section is inapplicable to real estate broker found to have breached duty of care to plaintiff because defendant’s actions did not pertain to “public safety” and were not performed gratuitously as an act of a good Samaritan. Rather, the actions were undertaken in order to receive compensation in the form of real estate brokerage commissions. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

A non-profit corporation receiving compensation, even if it does not realize a profit, is liable for personal injuries sustained by a volunteer working for the corporation. Where there is a contractual exchange of money in return for specific services to be rendered and the services rendered are for the benefit of the entity paying the funds, the entity has received compensation. Gilmore v. Concerned Parents of Pueblo, 28 P.3d 963 (Colo. App. 2000), aff’d on other grounds, 47 P.3d 311 (Colo. 2002).

Subsection (2.5) protects from liability people who work as volunteers for designated types of non-profit organizations; it does not, however, insulate those organizations themselves from liability. Concerned Parents of Pueblo, Inc. v. Gilmore, 47 P.3d 311 (Colo. 2002) (overruling Jones v. Westernaires, Inc., 876 P.2d 50 (Colo. App. 1993)).

13-21-117. Civil liability - mental health care providers - no duty. A physician, social worker, psychiatric nurse, psychologist, or other mental health professional and a mental health hospital, community mental health center or clinic, institution, or their staff shall not be liable for damages in any civil action for failure to warn or protect any person against a mental health patient’s violent behavior, and any such person shall not be held civilly liable for failure to predict such violent behavior, except where the patient has communicated to the mental health care provider a serious threat of imminent physical violence against a specific person or persons. When there is a duty to warn and protect under the circumstances specified above, the duty shall be discharged by the mental health care provider making reasonable and timely efforts to notify any person or persons specifically threatened, as well as notifying an appropriate law enforcement agency or by taking other appropriate action including, but not limited to, hospitalizing the patient. A physician, social worker, psychiatric nurse, psychologist, or other mental health professional and a mental health hospital, community mental health center or clinic, institution, or their staff shall not be liable for damages in any civil action for warning any person against or predicting a mental health patient’s violent behavior, and any such person shall not be subject to professional discipline for such warning or prediction. For the purposes of this section, “psychiatric nurse” means a registered professional nurse as defined in section 12-38-103 (11), C.R.S., who by virtue of postgraduate education and additional nursing preparation has gained knowledge, judgment, and skill in psychiatric or mental health nursing. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the negligent release of a mental health patient from any mental health hospital or ward or to the negligent failure to initiate involuntary seventy-two-hour treatment and evaluation after a personal patient evaluation determining that the person appears to have a mental illness and, as a result of the mental illness, appears to be an imminent danger to others.

Because the declared intent in subsection (1) is to encourage “persons” to volunteer services and assistance and because subsection (4) defines “person” to include a corporation, the statute provides immunity for a volunteer providing services as a leader, assistant, teacher, coach, or trainer for a program serving young persons or providing sporting programs or activities for young persons, even if that volunteer is a corporation. *Jones v. Victim rights statute (§§ 24-4.1-301 to 24-4.1-304) does not support any expansion of liability of mental health providers because it imposes no duty on those providers or liability for damages. Fredericks v. Jonsson, 609 F.3d 1096 (10th Cir. 2010).

13-21-117.5. Civil liability - developmental disability service providers. (1) Legislative declaration. (a) In recognition of the varied, extensive, and substantial needs of persons with developmental disabilities, the general assembly hereby finds and declares that the purposes of this section are:

(I) To reaffirm the high value Colorado places on the rights of persons with developmental disabilities to receive services and supports that enable them to live in integrated community settings, to participate fully in community life, and to exercise choice and self-direction in their lives;

(II) To recognize that there are inherent risks in such integration, participation, and self-direction due to the cognitive limitations experienced by persons with developmental disabilities;

(III) To recognize that providers to such persons are exposed to risk of liability when they assist or permit persons with developmental disabilities to experience community integration, participation, and self-direction;

(IV) To recognize that providers provide essential services and functions and that

Exception to immunity for acts of hospitalized patients. Although immunity is expressly extended to mental health hospitals and their staff members who fail to warn or protect others against a mental health patient’s violent propensities, tendencies, or generalized threats of potential violence, there is an exception where hospital is aware of hospitalized patient’s aggressive behavior towards plaintiff. Halverson v. Pikes Peak Fam. Counseling, 795 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1990).

Exception does not only apply when attacked victim communicates violent threat to hospital and is broad enough to apply when the violent patient’s threats have been communicated to the health care provider. Halverson v. Pikes Peak Fam. Counseling, 851 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1992).

Mental health provider has a duty to warn a person or persons of patient’s violent behavior only when patient himself predicts his violent behavior by communicating or expressing his threat to the mental health provider. Fredericks v. Jonsson, 609 F.3d 1096 (10th Cir. 2010).

A psychologist’s immunity for warning a possible victim is not dependent upon a subsequent determination that the patient was in fact a threat. Otherwise, the immunity would have little value if the psychologist would be exposed to liability after the threat failed to manifest harm, which may be the result of such a warning. In addition, immunity is not discharged by hospitalization. McCarty v. Kaiser-Hill Co., L.L.C., 15 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2000).

Section inapplicable to wrongful death action based upon alleged negligence in the treatment of a suicidal patient who later does commit suicide; instead, section contemplates and describes the duty to protect third persons from a mental health patient’s behavior. *Sheron v. unlimited liability could disrupt or make prohibitively expensive the provision of such essential services;

(V) To recognize that providers should be provided with protection from unlimited liability so that providers are not discouraged from providing such services and functions.

(b) The general assembly, therefore, declares that it is the intent of the general assembly to mitigate the risk of liability to providers to the developmentally disabled to the extent that such mitigation is reasonable and possible.

(g) "Service agency" means a privately operated program-approved service agency designated pursuant to the rules of the department.

(3) A person filing an action against a provider for injury which lies in tort or could lie in tort regardless of whether that may be the type of action or the form of relief chosen by a claimant shall demonstrate liability by a preponderance of the evidence. If a provider raises the issue that a claimant cannot demonstrate liability by a preponderance of the evidence or raises any other limitation on liability pursuant to this section prior to or after the commencement of discovery, the court shall suspend discovery, except any discovery necessary to decide the issue of limitation of liability, and shall decide such issue on motion. The court's decision on such motion shall be a final judgment and shall be subject to interlocutory appeal.

(4) Duty of care. The performance of a service or an act of assistance for the benefit of a person with a developmental disability or adoption or enforcement of a policy, procedure, guideline, or practice for the protection of any such person's health or safety by a provider shall not create any duty of care with respect to a third person, nor shall it create a duty for any provider to perform or sustain such a service or an act of assistance nor to adopt or enforce such a policy, procedure, guideline, or practice; however, nothing in this section shall be construed to relieve a provider of a duty of care expressly imposed by federal or state law or department rule, nor shall anything in this section be deemed to create any duty of care.

(5) No action in tort under this section may be maintained on behalf of, for, or by a person with a developmental disability or by a family member of a person with a developmental disability against a provider unless that person claiming to have suffered an injury or grievance or that person's guardian or representative has filed for dispute resolution or other applicable intervention, if any, by the department or community centered board pursuant to department rules promulgated under article 10.5 of title 27, C.R.S., within one year after the date of the discovery of the injury or grievance, regardless of whether the person then knew all of the elements of a claim or of a cause of action for such injury or grievance. Compliance with the provisions of this subsection (5), documented by a letter from the department certifying that any and all such interventions and dispute resolution procedures, with either the department or the community centered board, applicable to the matter at hand have been exhausted, or by submission of evidence that such an intervention or dispute resolution request has been filed and no action has been taken by the department within ninety days, shall be a jurisdictional prerequisite to any action brought under the provisions of this section, and failure of compliance shall forever bar any such action and shall result in a dismissal of any claim with prejudice. Certification by the department that all applicable interventions and dispute resolution procedures have been exhausted shall not result in the department becoming a party to the tort claim action.

(6) A provider shall not be liable for damages in any civil action for failure to warn or protect any person against the violent, assaultive, disorderly, or harassing behavior of a person with a developmental disability, nor shall any such provider be held civilly liable for failure to predict or prevent such behavior, except there shall be a duty to warn where the person with the developmental disability has communicated to the provider a serious and credible threat of imminent physical violence and serious bodily injury against a specific person or persons. If there is a duty to warn as specified in this subsection (6), the duty shall be discharged by the provider making reasonable and timely efforts to notify any person or persons specifically threatened, except that if the person or persons threatened with imminent physical violence and serious bodily injury is a person with a developmental disability under the care of a provider, the provider shall take reasonable action to protect such person from serious bodily injury until the threat can reasonably be deemed to have abated. A provider shall not be liable for damages in any civil action for warning a person against or predicting violent, assaultive, disorderly, or harassing behavior of a person with a developmental disability, nor shall a provider be subject to professional discipline for such warning or prediction.

(7) In any civil action brought against a provider, a person with a developmental disability who is served in a residential setting owned or leased by a provider shall not be considered a tenant of the provider and statutes regarding landlord-tenant relationships shall not apply. The owner of a property leased by a provider for the purpose of providing services pursuant to article 10.5 of title 27, C.R.S., shall not be responsible for the provision or monitoring of such services. No real property rights shall accrue to a person with a developmental disability by virtue of placement in a residential setting.

(8) If a person with a developmental disability residing in a residential program operated by the department is referred by the department for community placement, the provider shall not be subject to civil liability for accepting that person for community placement.

(9) Claims predicated on an alleged deceptive trade practice pursuant to article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., shall not apply to providers engaged in the provision of services pursuant article 10.5 of title 27, C.R.S.

(10) Community centered boards and service agencies shall have the authority to remove a person with a developmental disability from any residential setting that they operate or for which they contract, directly or indirectly, if the community centered board or service agency believes that the person with a developmental disability may be at risk of abuse, neglect, mistreatment, exploitation, or other harm in such setting. In the absence of willful and wanton acts or omissions, community centered boards and service agencies shall have no civil liability for exercising such authority or for termination of any related contracts if such risk is substantiated by investigation pursuant to the rules of the department.

(11) In the absence of willful and wanton acts or omissions, a provider shall not have civil liability for injurious consequences to a person with a developmental disability in the provider's care when that person having the legal capacity for such decisions at the time such decisions were made, or the person's guardian or other person or entity duly authorized to make medication or treatment decisions for the person, declines or obstructs the administration of prescribed medication or other treatment recommended by a licensed physician, licensed psychologist, or certified therapist.

(12) When a person with a developmental disability who has the legal capacity to make decisions, or that person's guardian, refuses to comply with restrictions established pursuant to an interdisciplinary team process that are designed to safeguard the health and safety of the person or others, and it can be shown that a provider has made reasonable efforts to secure such compliance from the person or has taken other reasonable actions to safeguard the person or others, a provider of services shall not have civil liability for injuries or damages to the person with a developmental disability that may arise from the refusal by the person with a developmental disability, or that person's guardian, to comply with such restrictions.

ANNOTATION

Defendants are immune from liability to third persons as providers of services to persons with developmental disabilities. Subsections (4) and (6) create an affirmative duty only where the person with the developmental disability has communicated to the provider a serious and credible threat against a specific person, or where a federal or state law or a department of human services rule expressly imposes a duty of care. J.C. v. Dungarvin Colo., LLC, 252 P.3d 41 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-21-117.7. Civil actions against family foster care providers - limited liability.

(1) A foster care provider shall be immune from civil liability for any acts or omissions committed by a foster child in his or her care, unless a court of competent jurisdiction determines that acts or omissions on the part of the foster care provider were negligent and that such foster care provider's acts or omissions were a cause of injuries, damages, or losses.

(2) If a plaintiff in a civil liability action described in subsection (1) of this section is a biological or adoptive parent or other relative of the foster child and such plaintiff is successful against the foster care provider for any actions or omissions regarding foster care, any monetary compensation received by the plaintiff as a result of the civil action shall be deposited in a trust account at a federally licensed and insured financial institution to be held in trust for the benefit of the foster care child. The amount so deposited shall be subject to the jurisdiction and oversight of the court having probate jurisdiction.

(3) For purposes of this section, "foster care provider" means a foster care parent or a family member living in a foster care home who provides care to one or more foster children in that home.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Recreational Use Of Agricultural Lands", see 23 Colo. Law. 529 (1994).

This section recognizes the inherent risks involved in equine activities and protects sponsors of such activities by limiting their liability, except under specified circumstances. The section itself imposes no liability on the sponsors for injuries beyond those for which liability is specifically limited. Chadwick v. Colt Ross Outfitters, 100 P.3d 465 (Colo. 2004).

Thus, parties may, consistent with this section, contract separately to release sponsors even from negligent conduct so long as the parties' intent is clearly expressed in the contract and the contract does not violate public policy. Chadwick v. Colt Ross Outfitters, 100 P.3d 465 (Colo. 2004).

Defendant was not granted limited immunity under this section because according to subsection (4)(b)(I)(A) it provided the faulty equipment which caused plaintiff's injury, and it was unclear whether defendant knew the equipment was faulty. Day v. Snowmass Stables, Inc., 810 F. Supp. 289 (D. Colo. 1993).

Pursuant to subsection (4)(b)(I)(B), defendant may be exempt from civil liability if he or she provided the animal and made reasonable and prudent efforts to determine both the ability of a participant to engage safely in the equine activity and the ability of the participant to safely manage the particular animal based on the participant's representation of his or her ability. Waneka v. Clynce, 157 P.3d 1072 (Colo. 2007).

Because every equine release agreement limiting liability must contain the mandatory warning under this section, the insertion of a broader clause further limiting liability does not make the agreement ambiguous per se. B & B Livery, Inc. v. Riehl, 960 P.2d 134 (Colo. 1998).

Because injury resulted from wrangler's negligence in failing to take precautions that a reasonable and prudent person in the same or similar circumstances would have taken by removing intermittently screaming child from horse before it bolted, injury did not result from inherent risk of equine activity and immunity related to injuries resulting from the inherent risks of equine activity did not apply. Fielder v. Acad. Riding Stables, 49 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002).

Protection afforded "any other person" pursuant to subsection (3) extends to owners of horses who allow their use for equine activities. Culver v. Samuels, 37 P.3d 535 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Hamill v. Cheley Colo. Camps, Inc., 262 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2011).

13-21-120. Colorado baseball spectator safety act - legislative declaration - limitation on actions - duty to post warning notice. (1) This section shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Baseball Spectator Safety Act of 1993".

(2) The general assembly recognizes that persons who attend professional baseball games may incur injuries as a result of the risks involved in being a spectator at such baseball games. However, the general assembly also finds that attendance at such professional baseball games provides a wholesome and healthy family activity which should be encouraged. The general assembly further finds that the state will derive economic benefit from spectators attending professional baseball games. It is therefore the intent of the general assembly to encourage attendance at professional baseball games. Limiting the civil liability of those who own professional baseball teams and those who own stadiums where professional baseball games are played will help contain costs, keeping ticket prices more affordable.

(3) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Owner" means a person, including a corporation, partnership, or limited liability company, who is in lawful possession and control of a professional baseball team or a person, including a corporation, partnership, or limited liability company, who is in lawful possession and control of a stadium in which a professional baseball game is played. "Owner" shall also include the owner's shareholders, partners, directors, officers, employees, and agents.

(b) "Professional baseball game" means any baseball game, whether for exhibition or competition, in which the participating baseball teams are members of a league of professional baseball clubs, commonly known as a major league or a minor league, and which teams are comprised of paid baseball players. "Professional baseball game" shall also include pregame activities and shall include any baseball game or pregame activity regardless of the time of day when the game is played.

(c) "Spectator" means a person who is present at a professional baseball game for the purpose of observing such game, whether or not a fee is paid by such "spectator".

(4) (a) Spectators of professional baseball games are presumed to have knowledge of and to assume the inherent risks of observing professional baseball games, insofar as those risks are obvious and necessary. These risks include, but are not limited to, injuries which result from being struck by a baseball or a baseball bat.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (5) of this section, the assumption of risk set forth in this subsection (4) shall be a complete bar to suit and shall serve as a complete defense to a suit against an owner by a spectator for injuries resulting from the assumed risks, notwithstanding the provisions of sections 13-21-111 and 13-21-111.5. Except as provided in subsection (5) of this section, an owner shall not be liable for an injury to a spectator resulting from the inherent risks of attending a professional baseball game, and, except as provided in subsection (5) of this section, no spectator nor spectator's representative shall make any claim against, maintain an action against, or recover from an owner for injury, loss, or damage to the spectator resulting from any of the inherent risks of attending a professional baseball game.

(c) Nothing in this section shall preclude a spectator from suing another spectator for any injury to person or property resulting from such other spectator's acts or omissions.

(5) Nothing in subsection (4) of this section shall prevent or limit the liability of an owner who:

(a) Fails to make a reasonable and prudent effort to design, alter, and maintain the premises of the stadium in reasonably safe condition relative to the nature of the game of baseball;

(b) Intentionally injures a spectator; or

(c) Fails to post and maintain the warning signs required pursuant to subsection (6) of this section.

(6) (a) Every owner of a stadium where professional baseball games are played shall post and maintain signs which contain the warning notice specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (6). Such signs shall be placed in conspicuous places at the entrances outside the stadium and at stadium facilities where tickets to professional baseball games are sold. The warning notice specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (6) shall appear on the sign in black letters, with each letter to be a minimum of one inch in height.

(b) The signs described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (6) shall contain the following warning notice:

WARNING

UNDER COLORADO LAW, A SPECTATOR OF PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL ASSUMES THE RISK OF ANY INJURY TO PERSON OR PROPERTY RESULTING FROM ANY OF THE INHERENT DANGERS AND RISKS OF SUCH ACTIVITY AND MAY NOT RECOVER FROM AN OWNER OF A BASEBALL TEAM OR AN OWNER OF A STADIUM WHERE PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL IS PLAYED FOR INJURY RESULTING FROM THE INHERENT DANGERS AND RISKS OF OBSERVING PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO, BEING STRUCK BY A BASEBALL OR A BASEBALL BAT.

(7) Insofar as any provision of law or statute is inconsistent with the provisions of this section, this section shall control.

13-21-121. Agricultural recreation activities - legislative declaration - inherent risks - limitation of civil liability - duty to post warning notice. (1) The general assembly recognizes that persons who participate in certain agricultural recreation activities may incur injuries as a result of the inherent risks involved with these activities. The general assembly also finds that the state and its citizens derive numerous economic and personal benefits from these activities. It is, therefore, the intent of the general assembly to encourage these activities by limiting the civil liability of certain persons involved in providing the opportunity to participate in these activities.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

"Agricultural recreation activity" also means hunting, shooting, swimming, diving, tubing, and riding or operating a motorized recreational vehicle that occurs on or in proximity to the property of an agricultural operation or an adjacent roadway. "Agricultural recreation activity" includes, but is not limited to planting, cultivation, irrigation, or harvesting of crops; acceptable practices of animal husbandry; rodeo and livestock activities; and maintenance of farm or ranch equipment.

(c) "Equipment" means a device used to engage in an agricultural recreation activity.

(d) "Facility" means a privately owned and operated farm, ranch, or a public property that is leased or rented and under the control of the person defined in paragraph (e) of this subsection (2) on which the opportunity to engage in one or more agricultural recreation activities is offered to a participant, regardless of whether it is situated in an incorporated area or unincorporated area.

(e) "Facility person" means a person who owns, leases, operates, manages, or is employed at or who volunteers at a facility. For purposes of this paragraph (e) only, "person" includes any individual, corporation, partnership, association, cooperative, or commercial entity.

(II) The nature of the activity, including but not limited to the equipment used and the location where the activity is conducted;

(III) Certain hazards, such as ground conditions, surface grade, weather conditions, and animal behavior;

(IV) Collisions with other persons or objects;

(V) The types and the complexity of equipment used by the participants;

(VI) Malfunctions with equipment used by the participants;

(g) "Participant" means a person who engages in an agricultural recreation activity, whether or not a fee is paid to participate in the activity.

(3) Except as provided in subsections (4) and (5) of this section, an activity instructor or equipment provider or facility person shall not be civilly liable for an injury to or the death of a participant resulting from the inherent risks of agricultural recreation activities performed or conducted on or in a facility. A participant or a participant's representative may not make any claim against, maintain an action against, or recover from an activity instructor or equipment provider or facility person for injury, loss, damage, or death of the participant resulting from any of the inherent risks of agricultural recreation activities performed or conducted on or in a facility.

(4) (a) Nothing in subsection (3) of this section shall prevent or limit the liability of an activity instructor or equipment provider or facility person if the activity instructor or equipment provider or facility person:

(I) Rented, sold, or otherwise provided equipment to a participant, and knew that the equipment was faulty, and such equipment was faulty to the extent that it caused the injury;

(II) Committed an act or omission that constituted gross negligence or willful or wanton disregard for the safety of the participant, and the act or omission was the cause of the injury; or

(III) Intentionally injured the participant.

(b) Nothing in subsection (3) of this section shall prevent or limit the liability of an activity instructor or equipment provider or facility person under liability provisions set forth in the product liability laws.

(c) A participant is not precluded under this section from suing and recovering from another participant for injury to person or property resulting from the other participant's act or omission. Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the risk of injury from another participant shall not be considered an inherent risk or a risk assumed by a participant in an action by the participant against another participant.

(5) The operator of a facility shall exercise reasonable care to protect against dangers of which he or she actually knew or shall give warning of any dangers that are ordinarily present on the property.

13-21-122. Civil liability for unlawful use of personal identifying information.

(1) Notwithstanding any other remedies provided under this article, a person who suffers damages as a result of a crime described in article 5 of title 18, C.R.S., in which personal identifying information was used in the commission of the crime, shall have a private civil right of action against the perpetrator who committed the crime, regardless of whether the perpetrator was convicted of the crime. In such action, the plaintiff shall be entitled to actual damages, including, but not limited to damage to reputation or credit rating, punitive damages, and attorney fees and costs.

(2) No telecommunications provider shall be liable for damages in a claim based, in whole or in part, on acts of third parties that violate section 18-13-125, C.R.S.

(3) This section shall not be construed to create a new duty or expand the existing duty of a telecommunications provider to protect telephone records beyond those otherwise established by Colorado law, any other state law, or federal law, including, without limitation, the rules promulgated by the federal communications commission.

(4) This section shall not apply to a telecommunications provider or its agents or representatives who reasonably and in good faith act pursuant to Colorado law, any other state law, or federal law, including, without limitation, the rules promulgated by the federal communications commission, notwithstanding a later determination that the act was not authorized by such law.

(c) “Dog owner” means a person, firm, corporation, or organization owning, possessing, harboring, keeping, having financial or property interest in, or having control or custody of, a dog.

(d) “Serious bodily injury” has the same meaning as set forth in section 18-1-901 (3) (p), C.R.S.

(2) A person or a personal representative of a person who suffers serious bodily injury or death from being bitten by a dog while lawfully on public or private property shall be entitled to bring a civil action to recover economic damages against the dog owner regardless of the viciousness or dangerous propensities of the dog or the dog owner’s knowledge or lack of knowledge of the dog’s viciousness or dangerous propensities.

(3) In any case described in subsection (2) of this section in which it is alleged and proved that the dog owner had knowledge or notice of the dog’s viciousness or dangerous propensities, the court, upon a motion made by the victim or the personal representative of the victim, may enter an order that the dog be euthanized by a licensed veterinarian or licensed shelter at the expense of the dog owner.

(4) For purposes of this section, a person shall be deemed to be lawfully on public or private property if he or she is in the performance of a duty imposed upon him or her by local, state, or federal laws or regulations or if he or she is on property upon express or implied invitation of the owner of the property or is on his or her own property.

(5) A dog owner shall not be liable to a person who suffers bodily injury, serious bodily injury, or death from being bitten by the dog:

(a) While the person is unlawfully on public or private property;

(b) While the person is on property of the dog owner and the property is clearly and conspicuously marked with one or more posted signs stating “no trespassing” or “beware of dog”;

(c) While the dog is being used by a peace officer or military personnel in the performance of peace officer or military personnel duties;

(d) As a result of the person knowingly provoking the dog;

(e) If the person is a veterinary health care worker, dog groomer, humane agency staff person, professional dog handler, trainer, or dog show judge acting in the performance of his or her respective duties; or

(f) While the dog is working as a hunting dog, herding dog, farm or ranch dog, or predator control dog on the property of or under the control of the dog’s owner.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed to:

- (a) Affect any other cause of action predicated on other negligence, intentional tort, outrageous conduct, or other theories;
- (b) Affect the provisions of any other criminal or civil statute governing the regulation of dogs; or
- (c) Abrogate any provision of the "Colorado Governmental Immunity Act", article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

13-21-126. Funeral picketing - legislative declaration - definitions - damages.

- (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:
  - (a) One of the fundamental reasons we humans organize ourselves into societies is to ritually assist in and recognize the grieving process;
  - (b) Funeral picketing disrupts that fundamental grieving process;
  - (c) Funeral picketing intentionally inflicts severe emotional distress on the mourners; and
  - (d) Full opportunity exists under the terms and provisions of this section for the exercise of freedom of speech and other constitutional rights other than at and during the funeral.
- (2) The general assembly, therefore, determines it is necessary to enact this section in order to:
  - (a) Protect the privacy of the mourners during the funeral; and
  - (b) Preserve a funeral-site atmosphere that enhances the grieving process.
- (3) As used in this section:
  - (a) "Funeral" means the ceremonies, rituals, processions, and memorial services held in connection with the burial, cremation, or memorial of a deceased person, including the assembly and dispersal of the mourners.
  - (b) "Funeral picketing" means a public demonstration at a funeral site during the funeral that is reasonably calculated to inflict severe emotional distress on the mourners.
  - (c) "Funeral site" means a church, synagogue, mosque, funeral home, mortuary, gravesite, mausoleum, or other place where a funeral is being conducted.
  - (d) "Mourner" means a member of the decedent's immediate family at the funeral.
- (4) It is unlawful for a person to knowingly engage in funeral picketing within one hundred feet of the funeral site or to engage in electronically amplified funeral picketing within one hundred fifty feet of the funeral site.
- (5) (a) Each mourner shall be entitled to recover reasonable damages, but not less than one thousand dollars, together with reasonable attorney fees and costs from each person who violates subsection (4) of this section.
  - (b) The court shall impose joint and several liability on any person who:
    - (I) Violates subsection (4) of this section by acting in concert with one or more other persons; or
    - (II) Consciously conspires with one or more other persons and deliberately pursues a common plan or design to commit a violation of subsection (4) of this section.

(2) In Snyder v. Phelps, ___ U.S. ___ (2011), the United States Supreme Court held that the first amendment shields military funeral protesters from tort liability for picketing because picketing constitutes protected speech on matters of public concern and because the father of the deceased was not a member of a captive audience.

(2) A conviction for trafficking in adults, as described in section 18-3-501, C.R.S.; trafficking in children, as described in section 18-3-502, C.R.S.; or coercion of involuntary servitude, as described in section 18-3-503, C.R.S., shall not be a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action pursuant to the provisions of this section.

PART 2

DAMAGES FOR DEATH BY NEGLIGENCE

Law reviews: For article, "Calculating Net Pecuniary Loss Under Colorado Wrongful Death Law", see 24 Colo. Law. 1257 (1995).

13-21-201. Damages for death. (1) When any person dies from any injury resulting from or occasioned by the negligence, unskillfulness, or criminal intent of any officer, agent, servant, or employee while running, conducting, or managing any locomotive, car, or train of cars, or of any driver of any coach or other conveyance operated for the purpose of carrying either freight or passengers for hire while in charge of the same as a driver, and when any passenger dies from an injury resulting from or occasioned by any defect or insufficiency in any railroad or any part thereof, or in any locomotive or car, or other conveyance operated for the purpose of carrying either freight or passengers for hire, the corporation or individuals in whose employ any such officer, agent, servant, employee, master, pilot, engineer, or driver is at the time such injury is committed, or who owns any such railroad, locomotive, car, or other conveyance operated for the purpose of carrying either freight or passengers for hire at the time any such injury is received, and resulting from or occasioned by the defect or insufficiency above described shall forfeit and pay for every person and passenger so injured the sum of not exceeding ten thousand dollars and not less than three thousand dollars, which may be sued for and recovered:

- (a) In the first year after such death:
  - (I) By the spouse of the deceased;
  - (II) Upon the written election of the spouse, by the spouse and the heir or heirs of the deceased;
  - (III) Upon the written election of the spouse, by the heir or heirs of the deceased; or
  - (IV) If there is no spouse, by the heir or heirs of the deceased or the designated beneficiary, if there is one designated pursuant to article 22 of title 15, C.R.S., with the right to bring an action pursuant to this section, and if there is no designated beneficiary, by the heir or heirs of the deceased;

(b) (I) In the second year after such death:

(A) By the spouse of the deceased;

(B) By the heir or heirs of the deceased;

(C) By the spouse and the heir or heirs of the deceased; or

(D) By the designated beneficiary of the deceased, if there is one designated pursuant to article 22 of title 15, C.R.S., with the right to bring an action pursuant to this section, and the heir or heirs of the deceased.

(II) However, if the heir or heirs of the deceased commence an action under the provisions of sub-subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), the spouse or the designated beneficiary of the deceased, if there is one designated pursuant to article 22 of title 15, C.R.S., with the right to bring an action pursuant to this section, upon motion filed within ninety days after service of written notice of the commencement of the action upon the spouse or designated beneficiary, shall be allowed to join the action as a party plaintiff.

(c) (I) If the deceased is an unmarried minor without descendants or an unmarried adult without descendants and without a designated beneficiary pursuant to article 22 of title 15, C.R.S., by the father or mother who may join in the suit. Except as provided in subparagraphs (II) and (III) of this paragraph (c), the father and mother shall have an equal interest in the judgment, or if either of them is dead, then the surviving parent shall have an exclusive interest in the judgment.

(II) For cases in which the father and mother are divorced, separated, or living apart, a motion may be filed by either the father or the mother prior to trial requesting the court to apportion fairly any judgment awarded in the case. Where such a motion is filed, the court shall conduct a post-judgment hearing at which the father and the mother shall have the opportunity to be heard and to produce evidence regarding each parent's relationship with the deceased child.

(III) On conclusion of the post-judgment hearing conducted pursuant to subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), the court shall fairly determine the percentage of the judgment to be awarded to each parent. In making such a determination, the court shall consider each parent's relationship with the deceased, including custody, control, support, parental responsibility, and any other factors the court deems pertinent. The court's determination of the percentage of the judgment awarded to each parent shall not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion.

(d) For purposes of this section, "father or mother" means a natural parent of the deceased or a parent of the deceased by adoption. "Father or mother" does not include a person whose parental rights concerning the deceased were terminated pursuant to the provisions of title 19, C.R.S.

(2) In suits instituted under this section, it is competent for the defendant for his defense to show that the defect or insufficiency named in this section was not a negligent defect or insufficiency. The judgment obtained in an action under this section shall be owned by such persons as are heirs at law of the deceased under the statutes of descent and distribution and shall be divided among such heirs at law in the same manner as real estate is divided according to said statute of descent and distribution.

The statute is constitutional. Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 5 Colo. App. 321, 38 P. 850 (1894).

All the provisions of the act are clearly expressed in the title. Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 23 Colo. 259, 47 P. 266 (1894).

Purpose of the wrongful death statute is to compensate those who sustain pecuniary injury by the loss of the life of a spouse or parent. Niven v. Falkenburg, 553 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1983).

This section largely extends the right of recovery for injuries resulting in the death of the injured party against the surviving wrongdoer, and specifically makes it applicable to transportation companies, and designates the persons who are entitled to bring suits, and who may reap the benefits of the recovery. It does not in terms cause the action against the wrongdoer to survive, for it is silent on the subject. Letson v. Brown, 11 Colo. App. 11, 52 P. 287 (1898).

This section creates a new cause of action. Denver & R. G. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914); Lindsay v. Chicago, B & Q. R. R., 226 F. 23 (7th Cir. 1915); Taylor v. Welle, 143 Colo. 37, 352 P.2d 106 (1960).

Right of action does not depend on whether injured person could have recovered. That the right of action under this section does not depend upon whether the injured person, if death had not ensued, could have recovered for personal injury, is one of the essential characteristics which distinguishes it from §§ 13-21-202 and 13-21-203, where the right exists only on the theory that the person injured would have had a cause of action had he not been killed. Denver & R. G. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

Such action did not exist at common law. No right of action for damages resulting from death through wrongful act or negligence was given by the common law, and such right exists only by virtue of this section. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

Wrongful death recovery did not exist at common law, but is purely a creature of statute. Niven v. Falkenburg, 553 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1983); Hale v. Morris, 725 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1986).

This section must be strictly construed. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955); Estate of Kronmeyer v. Meinig, 948 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1997).

The judiciary should adhere to its previous constructions of this act. Where the general assembly has repeatedly reenacted this article which has received settled judicial construction, there can be no doubt that the legislative intent was that such reenactments continue to be construed in accordance with such former judicial construction. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

This section with §§ 13-21-202, 13-21-203, and 13-21-204 must be construed as one act, and each section construed as it is connected with and related to the whole act. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

It is penal in character. Denver & R. G. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914); Denver & R. G. R. v. Clint, 235 F.2d 445 (10th Cir. 1956); Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

It manifests a purpose to compensate dependent relatives. The statute must be construed in the light of its purpose, and while it is penal in character, the fact that the forfeiture or penalty is recoverable by the kin of the deceased manifests a purpose to in a measure protect or compensate dependent relatives by blood or direct marriage. Myers v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 61 Colo. 302, 157 P. 196 (1916).

Recovery may be had under the section without any proof whatever of damages. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

A wrongful death claim is not assignable. Espinosa v. Perez, 165 P.3d 770 (Colo. App. 2006).

The section may be divided with reference to persons injured, into two parts; The first giving the right of action to any person injured by the negligence, unskillfulness or criminal intent of any officer, agent, servant or employee, etc.; the second furnishing a right of action where the death of the passenger resulted from a defect or insufficiency of a railroad locomotive, stage coach, or other public conveyance. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Headland, 18 Colo. 477, 33 P. 185 (1893).

Impact not required in negligence claim against common carrier. There is no impact requirement for claims which allege negligence on the part of a common carrier. Deming v. Kellogg, 41 Colo. App. 264, 583 P.2d 944 (1978).

A second civil action against treating physicians for wrongful death is prohibited where plaintiffs previously settled a wrongful death action against the driver that struck pedestrian. The plain language of this section clearly and unambiguously reflects the intent of the general assembly to permit only one wrongful death action for the death of one decedent. Estate of Kronmeyer v. Meinig, 948 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1997).

Passenger elevators in office buildings are included within the term "other public conveyance" as used in this section. Davis v. Colo. Sav. Bank, 78 Colo. 509, 242 P. 985 (1926).

Station agent may be an employee managing train. The station agent of a railroad company charged with the duty to communicate to the conductor and engineer of the several trains the orders of the train dispatcher as to where they are to pass other trains, is managing the trains, within the meaning of this section. If by his negligent failure to deliver an order, a collision occurs, and the death of a passenger results, the railway company is liable. Whittle v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 51 Colo. 382, 118 P. 971 (1911).

"Any person" does not include servant injured by negligence of fellow-servant. The rule of the common law, that the servant assumes all the ordinary risks of the service upon which he enters, including those risks which arise from the negligence of other servants of the same master in the same employment, is not abrogated by this section, and the words "any person" do not include servants of the same master injured by the negligence of a fellow-servant while acting in the common employment. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Farrow, 6 Colo. 498 (1883).

Subsection (2) refers to statute of descent and distribution in effect at time section is applied. In re Arrington v. Arrington, 618 P.2d 744 (Colo. App. 1980).

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See First Nat'l Bank v. Rostek, 182 Colo. 437, 514 P.2d 314 (1973); Ellerman v. Amax, Inc., 194 Colo. 392, 572 P.2d 836 (1977).

Applied in Berry Constr., Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 251, 567 P.2d 806 (1977); Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981); in re Estate of Daigle, 634 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1981).

B. Damages.

There is no absurdity in a legislative decision to authorize in effect an award of different amounts depending on whether an insured is injured or killed in an accident. Kline v. Am. States Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1150 (Colo. App. 1996).

The amount of recovery under this section depends on the degree of culpability of the defendant. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

It is exclusively the province of the jury to estimate and assess the damages, and the amount to be allowed in such cases rests largely in their sound discretion. Dawkins v. Chavez, 132 Colo. 61, 285 P.2d 821 (1955).

Funeral expense is an item of recovery under the wrongful death statute, but in no event can recovery exceed the amount provided by statute. McEntyre v. Jones, 128 Colo. 461, 263 P.2d 313 (1953); Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954); Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

Funeral expenses may be recovered by the parents of a deceased child in an action independent of this article where an alleged financial loss results to parents from negligence on the part of another. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

This section's remedy is not exclusive. While funeral expenses are recoverable in an action under this article, the remedy provided therein is not exclusive. Espinoza v. Gurule, 144 Colo. 381, 356 P.2d 891 (1960).

Federal civil rights claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cannot be limited by Colorado's survival statute, § 13-20-101, or this section. White v. Talboys, 573 F. Supp. 49 (D. Colo. 1983).

For damages resulting from a wrongful death accident, see Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954).

II. WHO MAY RECOVER.

The paragraphs of subsection (1) are intended to take rank and have effect in the order in which they occur, and their true meaning may be stated in this way: If the deceased leave a husband or wife, the sole right of action will be in such survivor, save that, as against children, the right will be lost unless asserted by suit within one year; but if there be no surviving husband or wife, or the survivor fails to sue within one year, then the sole right of action will be in the children; and if there be no surviving husband or wife, nor any child, then, and then only, will the right of action be in the father and mother, or the survivor of them. The first subdivision does not make the right of the husband or wife dependent upon the majority of the deceased, nor does the second make the right of the children dependent upon his majority or upon his being married at the time of his death; and as the third is evidently designed to take rank and have effect in subordination to the other two, we think it should be interpreted as if it read: "If such deceased be a minor or unmarried, and leave no surviving husband or wife and no surviving child, then by the father and mother". In no other way can the three subdivisions be completely harmonized without violating the sense of the statute as a whole. Hopper v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 155 F. 273 (8th Cir. 1907); Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

No one can invoke this section except the class of persons listed in the subdivisions. The wrongful death statute cannot be invoked where deceased is not survived by a husband or children, nor a father or mother, to which the statute limits such an action. Kling v. Phayer, 130 Colo. 158, 274 P.2d 97 (1954).

This act makes no distinction between citizens and aliens, residents, and nonresidents; and public policy does not require the making of any such discrimination. Indeed, the policy of the state would seem to require that no such discrimination should be made. Patek v. Am. Smelting & Ref. Co., 154 F. 190 (8th Cir. 1907); Ferrara v. Auric Mining Co., 43 Colo. 496, 95 P. 952 (1908).

The right to sue is vested, in the first instance, in the surviving husband or wife to the exclusion of all others; and the existence of the right in the second class named is wholly dependent upon the fact that there be neither husband nor wife surviving, or that he or she shall have waived the right by failing to sue in the time prescribed; thus evincing an intention on the part of the law-making power to confer the right of action upon the second class, only in the event the decedent, at the time of death, was, or had been, a married person, and should leave surviving lineal descendants. Hindry v. Holt, 24 Colo. 464, 51 P. 1002 (1897); Hahn v. Union P. R. R., 162 F. Supp. 558 (D. Colo. 1958); Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

The surviving spouse has the exclusive right to bring the action within the first year from the date of death. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976); Campbell v. Shankle, 680 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1984).

The sole right to bring an action for wrongful death within the first year after the death is with the surviving husband or wife. Niven v. Falkenburg, 553 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1983).

Surviving spouse is authorized to sue in his or her own name without joining decedent's children, who are real parties in interest. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

This section does not limit the widow's cause of action to one year. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892); Hahn v. Union P. R. R., 162 F. Supp. 558 (D. Colo. 1958).

It simply declares that if she does not sue within that time the heirs may bring an action. Hahn v. Union P. R. R., 162 F. Supp. 558 (D. Colo. 1958).

When spouse may sue after first year. If the spouse does not sue within the first year, the heir or heirs may bring an action during the second year, but, if the heirs have not instituted proceedings, the spouse can maintain an action at any time before the expiration of the two years. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976), expressly disapproved in Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 674 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1984); Murphy v. Colo. Aviation, Inc., 41 Colo. App. 237, 588 P.2d 877 (1978).

In general the spouse's right to maintain an action continues throughout the two years. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976).

The real purpose of this section was simply to give the surviving wife or husband preference during the first year; but not to estop her or him from maintaining an action at any time before the expiration of the second year. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976).

Children may bring suit within the first year only if there is no surviving spouse. Niven v. Falkenburg, 553 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1983).

Action by spouse and daughter as coplaintiffs. A wrongful death action instituted the second year after the death by both the surviving spouse and the daughter as coplaintiffs can be maintained by both plaintiffs. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976).

An action filed by both surviving spouse and daughter does not operate against the interests of either. Consequently, since the purpose of the statute is to compensate those who sustain pecuniary injury by the loss of the life of a spouse or parent, retention of both husband and daughter as parties plaintiff is proper. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976).

This section requires proportionate division among the heirs when a widow obtains a judgment. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

When multiple plaintiffs bring a wrongful death action and the plaintiffs only seek damages for noneconomic losses, each plaintiff does not need to establish that he or she personally suffered damages for noneconomic losses to remain a party to the action. Reigel v. SavaSeniorCare L.L.C., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Presumption that spouse will make good faith effort to represent rights of decedent's children. Implicit in this statute is a presumption that the surviving spouse will make a good faith effort to represent adequately the rights of all decedent's children, regardless of whether the surviving spouse is their natural parent. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

Insurance companies have no common law duty to assure distribution of settlement proceeds. Where insurers distributed settlement proceeds to the surviving spouse in a wrongful death action, the insurers satisfied their statutory duty and are not required to monitor the distribution of the proceeds to all potential beneficiaries. Campbell v. Shankle, 680 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1984).

Heirs preempted if spouse sues. A spouse, having elected to sue pursuant to this section, preempts the heirs at law from ever bringing a subsequent action. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

Heirs at law have proprietary interest in judgment resulting from the lawsuit in accordance with the applicable rules of descent and distribution. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

What their right to sue depends on. The right to sue of the heirs (interpreted as lineal descendants for the purposes of this portion of the statute) depends on either there being no surviving spouse or on the spouse's not having sued during the first year. Peck v. Taylor, 38 Colo. App. 90, 554 P.2d 698 (1976).

Intervention by heirs if spouse elects to abandon cause. Where the surviving spouse sues under this section and subsequent thereto elects to abandon the litigation against the wishes of the other heirs at law, they are entitled to intervene pursuant to C.R.C.P. 24(a)(2), for the purpose of continuing the litigation. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

General assembly did not intend to grant exclusive control of litigation to spouse where there is a showing of inadequate representation of decedent's children's rights. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

Automatic intervention by parties represented by spouse contrary to section's intent. To allow all parties whose interests are represented by the surviving spouse an automatic right of intervention in pending litigation would be contrary to the intent of the statute vesting the surviving spouse with the exclusive right to sue and would result in confusion and controversy in litigating a wrongful death action. Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974).

The words "heir or heirs", in the second paragraph of subsection (1), mean child or children, that is, lineal descendants. Hindry v. Holt, 24 Colo. 464, 51 P. 1002 (1897); Hopper v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 155 F. 273 (8th Cir. 1907); Grogan v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 56 Colo. 450, 138 P. 764 (1914); Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Kovaics, 26 Colo. App. 554, 144 P. 863 (1914); Page v. Elwell, 81 Colo. 73, 253 P. 1059 (1927); Blom v. United Air Lines, 152 Colo. 486, 382 P.2d 993 (1963); McGill v. GMC, 174 Colo. 388, 484 P.2d 790 (1971); Howlett v. Greenberg, 34 Colo. App. 356, 530 P.2d 1285 (1974); McCord v. Affinity Ins. Group, 13 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2000).

The term "heirs" as used in this section refers only to lineal descendants of the deceased and does not include the deceased's parents. Whitenhill v. Kaiser Permanente, 940 P.2d 1129 (Colo. 1997).

Heirs do not include brothers and sisters of deceased. Hindry v. Holt, 24 Colo. 464, 51 P. 1002 (1897), distinguishing Denver S. R. & P. R. R. v. Wilson, 12 Colo. 20, 20 P. 340 (1888); Grogan v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 56 Colo. 450, 138 P. 764 (1914); Blom v. United Air Lines, 152 Colo. 486, 382 P.2d 993 (1963); Ablin v. Richard O'Brien Plastering Co., 885 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994).

Sister cannot recover. This section does not provide for a cause of action by a deceased minor's sister. Sager v. City of Woodland Park, 543 F. Supp. 282 (D. Colo. 1982).

Under this section the parents of an unmarried adult are entitled to recover their pecuniary loss resulting from his death from the negligence of another. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Wilson, 12 Colo. 20, 20 P. 340 (1888).

Decedent's parents may not bring a wrongful death action if there is a surviving child of the deceased. Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 674 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1984).

Plaintiff may bring a cause of action that would have belonged to the decedent had he survived. A claim that could have been brought by a plaintiff on behalf of a minor decedent if he had survived is barred unless brought under the wrongful death act. Hale v. Morris, 725 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1986).

"Father or mother" should be read "father and mother". The true reading of the words "father or mother" in the third paragraph is "father and mother"; such is the language of the first official publication; and such is the language of the enrolled bill in the office of the secretary of state. Pierce v. Connors, 20 Colo.

178, 37 P. 721 (1894); Hopper v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 155 F. 273 (8th Cir. 1907).

The legislature did not bar or reduce recovery for parents, who have abandoned, deserted or failed to support a child under this section. Therefore, subsection (1)(c) allows both parents to share equally in any judgment and does not require a parent to have a close relationship with the deceased child. Brill v. Hughes, 958 P.2d 529 (Colo. App. 1998).

Father and mother may be joined. Under this section, if the deceased was a minor, the father and mother may join in the suit and each shall have an equal interest in the judgment; but the joining of the father and mother is permissive, not imperative; either may sue alone. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894); Phillips v. Denver City Tramway Co., 53 Colo. 458, 128 P. 460 (1912).

Even after judgment or review. A parent not joined, but entitled to join, in a suit under this section may be made a party on his or her application at any time, even after judgment or after review in an appellate court, for the purpose of protecting the interest which he or she may have in the judgment. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894); Phillips v. Denver City Tramway Co., 53 Colo. 458, 128 P. 460 (1912).

The joinder or nonjoinder of a parent is material only to the parents themselves; the defendant cannot be prejudiced by the nonjoinder of one of them; the measure of recovery is the same whether the action be brought in the name of one or both; the defendant can only be subjected to a single suit. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

"Unmarried" is not limited to those who have never been married. The great weight of authority as to the meaning of the word "unmarried", as defined by lexicographers and law writers, and as construed by courts, includes within the term not only those who have not been married, but who are at the time unmarried. Myers v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 61 Colo. 302, 157 P. 196 (1916).

Parents have right to support and maintenance from children. As a matter of sentiment, life has no pecuniary value, but considered with reference to the relations of deceased with others, it is capable of such estimate. In this sense a parent is entitled to the services of children during their minority, and to support and maintenance from them in his declining years. Dawkins v. Chavez, 132 Colo. 61, 285 P.2d 821 (1955).

Parent need not show deceased child's pecuniary value to them. It is not necessary for a husband and wife, in order to recover for the death of an adult child, to prove loss of food, clothing, shelter, or care which may be measured in dollars and cents. The court may consider the loss of a legal obligation for future financial support, bodily care, and intellectual care. Stevens v. Strauss, 147 Colo. 547, 364 P.2d 382 (1961).

The mental, moral, and physical characteristics of the child must be considered as well as the expectation of life in determining the pecuniary aid which she would probably give to the parents and the probable future earning capacity of the child. Stevens v. Strauss, 147 Colo. 547, 364 P.2d 382 (1961).

Adoptive parent cannot recover when one over 21 is adopted. Where one over the age of 21 years is adopted as an heir-at-law by another person, such adoptive parent is without legal status to maintain action under the wrongful death statute for the death of such adopted person. Martin v. Cuellar, 131 Colo. 117, 279 P.2d 843 (1955).

An equitably adopted child is not an "heir" for purposes of this section. Herrera v. Glau, 772 P.2d 682 (Colo. App. 1989).

Parents of child who is married and of age have no cause. Under the wrongful death statute the parents of a child who is both married and of age at the time of his death have no standing to maintain such an action. McGill v. GMC, 174 Colo. 388, 484 P.2d 790 (1971).

Parents of child who was married and of age have no cause of action. Further, parents cannot represent purported common-law widow because they have adverse interests to such widow. Potter v. Thieman, 770 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1989).

Court's decision that overrules prior case law by precluding any claim for relief by a surviving spouse commenced after the first anniversary of the spouse's death need not be applied retroactively if it creates an injustice and hardship in the case at bar. Williams v. Trailmobile, Inc., 745 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1987) (decided prior to 1988 amendment repealing and reenacting paragraphs (a) to (c) of subsection (1)).

If surviving spouse fails to sue, the spouse loses not only the right to sue, but the right to share in the proceeds of any award made to the children. Landsberg v. Hutsell, 837 P.2d 205 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to the 1988 amendment repealing and reenacting paragraphs (a) to (c) of subsection (1)); Champlin v. Burlington N. Santa Fe Corp., 385 F. Supp. 2d 720 (N. Dist. Ill. 2005).

Where divorced parents' son was killed in an automobile accident, and each parent had a separate policy applicable to the accident that provided up to $100,000 for damages arising from an accident involving an underinsured motor vehicle, and the driver's policy had a liability limit of $100,000, the driver was obligated to pay $50,000 to each parent. As a result, for purposes of each parent's policy, $50,000 was paid to a person "other than an insured injured person in the accident", namely, the other parent. Hence, the driver's vehicle was underinsured under the terms of each policy. Under the provisions of this section, each parent could recover up to $75,000 in uninsured motorist (UIM) benefits, and insurer was potentially liable under each parent's UIM policy for such amount. Kline v. Am. States Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1150 (Colo. App. 1996).

III. DEFENSES.

A. In General.

Person riding freight train without paying fare is not a passenger. A person who is riding upon a freight train without paying fare, and after having been refused permission to ride by the conductor, is not a passenger within the meaning of this section. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Headland, 18 Colo. 477, 33 P. 185 (1893).

The fact that deceased was riding on free pass is no defense. In an action under this section, it is no defense to the action that the deceased was riding upon a free pass, stipulating that the passenger "assumes all risks of accident and the company shall not be liable, under any circumstances, whether of negligence by its agents or others". Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

Pass is properly excluded as evidence. From the nature, purposes, and objects of this section, it is manifest that the cause of action is one in which the deceased had no interest at all, and from the liability for which he could not relieve the company by a contract with it. It, therefore, follows that a free pass, and the contract included in it, offered in evidence is incompetent and immaterial, and is properly excluded. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

Section not applicable when decedent killed by police. This and § 13-21-202 entitle certain classes of survivors of a person killed to damages in the manner and to the extent prescribed but do not apply in an action by a wife to recover against bondsmen of public peace officers who killed her husband. People ex rel. Putnum v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 99 Colo. 64, 59 P.2d 796 (1936).

Rights not waived by claim under workmen's compensation act. The general proposition that a person who has a cause of action against a third party tortfeasor for damages for wrongful death or injury does not lose or waive it by exercising another right based on a claim for workman's compensation is settled beyond dispute in this jurisdiction. Drake v. Hodges, 114 Colo. 10, 161 P.2d 338 (1945).

Guest statute (repealed § 42-9-101) limited recovery under the wrongful death act. There being no recovery for death except under the provisions of the wrongful death statute, and the guest statute specifically precluding recovery for death except under the conditions therein specified, the guest statute was held to apply to and limit recovery under the wrongful death statute. Taylor v. Welle, 143 Colo. 37, 352 P.2d 106 (1960).

B. Negligence Required.

Negligence must be affirmatively established by a preponderance of the evidence. It is well established that in a case of this kind the plaintiff is not entitled to recover unless the negligence of the defendant is affirmatively established by a preponderance of the evidence. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Ryan, 17 Colo. 98, 28 P. 79 (1891).

Accident caused by defect in road or machinery, or carelessness of defendant's agents, is prima facie evidence of negligence, and the defendant must establish affirmatively that no negligence existed on its part. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442 (1874).

Construction of new bridge in different manner is not admission of negligence. In action by administrator for injuries resulting in the death of his intestate, by the subversion of a bridge on defendant's railway, by which the train wherein intestate was traveling was wrecked, it was held that the subsequent construction of a new bridge over the same channel, in a different manner, amounted to an admission that the former one was improperly constructed, but not that these defects were attributable to negligence. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442 (1874).

Evidence as to health, age, earning capacity, and contributions of deceased is inadmissible. Because of the penal character of this section, and the rights of the plaintiffs and the liability of the defendant as therein defined, evidence showing the character, habits, health, age, and earning capacity of the deceased, and the contributions by him to the support of his parents, was inadmissible. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

Presumption of negligence may be rebutted. If a railroad car is overturned, and a passenger in consequence is killed, a presumption arises that the casualty was the result of negligence, but this presumption may be rebutted by the company, by showing that the accident itself was such that human prudence and foresight could not have guarded against it. Denver Ry. v. Woodward, 4 Colo. 1 (1877).

C. Contributory Negligence.

Contributory negligence of decedent bars wrongful death action. Where a driver of an automobile with ample opportunity to observe an oncoming train at a highway crossing, either failed to look or having looked failed to see the approaching train, he was guilty of contributory negligence, constituting a proximate cause of the accident, and recovery for wrongful death was barred. Union P. R. R. v. Larson, 153 Colo. 354, 386 P.2d 583 (1963).

Contributory negligence on the part of the person entitled to recover is a defense to an action brought under this section or § 13-21-202. Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

Contributory negligence of infant's father is not imputable to mother. Where husband and wife unite as joint plaintiffs in an action for the death of a child, the negligence of the husband contributing to the death is not to be imputed to the wife, unless in the acts producing the injury, he was acting as her agent, or they were jointly engaged in the prosecution of a common enterprise. If the father is convicted of contributory negligence, the jury may ascertain the amount to be awarded to the mother. Phillips v. Denver City Tramway Co., 53 Colo. 458, 128 P. 460 (1912).

Issues of negligence and proximate cause to be determined by trier of fact. In an action for wrongful death of a child, where the issues of primary negligence, contributory negligence, and proximate cause presented clearly disputed issues of fact, findings made by the trier of facts on such disputed evidence will not be disturbed on review if supported by credible evidence. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

Instruction as to duty to look and listen permissible. The learned judge who presided at the trial very properly charged the jury that, "as a matter of law it is negligence and carelessness for a person to go, stand, or be upon the track of a railroad without keeping watch both ways for trains"; and further, that it was the duty of deceased in going upon the track of the defendant company "to look and listen for the approach of trains and observe the surroundings", and that if he failed so to do, it was negligence on his part. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Ryan, 17 Colo. 98, 28 P. 79 (1891).

13-21-202. Action notwithstanding death. When the death of a person is caused by a wrongful act, neglect, or default of another, and the act, neglect, or default is such as would, if death had not ensued, have entitled the party injured to maintain an action and recover damages in respect thereof, then, and in every such case, the person who or the corporation which would have been liable, if death had not ensued, shall be liable in an action for damages notwithstanding the death of the party injured.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "The Effect of the Wrongdoer's Death Upon an Action for Wrongful Death", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 99 (1949). For comment discussing the interplay between actions brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the state wrongful death statute, see 55 Den. L. J. 291 (1978). For article, "Measures of Economic Loss in the Wrongful Death of a Child", see 14 Colo. Law. 392 (1985).

Primary purpose of the wrongful death statute is to compensate those who suffer a direct loss from the death. Barnhill v. Pub. Serv. Co., 649 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 690 P.2d 1248 (Colo. 1984).

No right of action existed at common law. No right of action for damages resulting from death through wrongful act or negligence was given by the common law, and such right exists only by virtue of this section. Hindry v. Holt, 24 Colo. 464, 51 P. 1002 (1897); Fish v. Liley, 120 Colo. 156, 208 P.2d 930 (1949); Taylor v. Welle, 143 Colo. 37, 352 P.2d 106 (1960).

Cause of action for wrongful death is created by statute. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Since Colorado law does not recognize the existence of a wrongful death action other than that created and defined by statute, the special statute of limitations made part of this act applies to wrongful death actions arising from alleged medical malpractice, absent a specific, valid exception provided by the general assembly. Weedin v. United States, 509 F. Supp. 1052 (D. Colo. 1981).

Such action is separate and distinct from the action deceased would have had if he or she had survived, even though plaintiff's cause of action under the statute arises only if the deceased would have been entitled to bring an action had he or she survived. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

A plaintiff's right to pursue a wrongful death action is derived from and dependent upon the decedent's right to have maintained an action had death not ensued. Crownover v. Gleichman, 38 Colo. App. 96, 554 P.2d 313 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 48, 574 P.2d 497 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 905, 98 S. Ct. 1450, 55 L. Ed.2d 495 (1978); Rowan v. Vail Holdings, Inc., 31 F. Supp.2d 889 (D. Colo. 1998).

The constitutionality of this act has never been questioned. The general assembly had the undoubted authority to give certain representatives of deceased a right of action against the person causing his death by negligence or wrongful act. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906).

The statutory sections were enacted to preserve a right of action. This and the following section were enacted for the purpose of preserving to the surviving relatives designated in § 13-21-201, a right of action that would else have failed by the decease of the party injured. They are in aid of the common law, not in derogation thereof. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892); Denver & R. G. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

The wrongful death statute creates a claim for relief and an entitlement to damages for parties who have not themselves been directly injured by the actions of the tortfeasor. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Sections should receive a liberal construction. The provisions of this and the following section should unquestionably receive a liberal construction. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

The death act is not in its essence a "survival" statute, but operates to create a new cause of action. Fish v. Liley, 120 Colo. 156, 208 P.2d 930 (1949).

Plaintiff's right of action under this section was in existence and inchoate at the time of the commission of the wrongful act by the tortfeasor resulting thereafter in the death of decedent. Fish v. Liley, 120 Colo. 156, 208 P.2d 930 (1949).

This section is remedial, the recovery being limited by § 13-21-203 to the pecuniary loss resulting from the death to the party who may be entitled to sue. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892); Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

The damages collectible under this section are compensatory only; pecuniary loss must be shown by those who bring the action. Rigot v. Conda, 134 Colo. 375, 304 P.2d 629 (1956); Denver & R. G. W. R. R. v. Clint, 235 F.2d 445 (10th Cir. 1956); Mosley v. Prall, 158 Colo. 504, 408 P.2d 434 (1965).

A common carrier may properly be sued under either this or the preceding section. If this were not so, certain forms of negligence on the part of a common carrier, which are clearly not within the narrower limits of § 13-21-101, could cause death without entailing any liability whatever, though any other kind of corporation would under the same conditions be held responsible by virtue of this section. Friedrichs v. Denver Tramway Corp., 93 Colo. 539, 27 P.2d 497 (1933).

The wrongful death statute did not create a right of action independent of the guest statute (repealed § 42-9-101) but was subject to the limitations the latter imposed. Taylor v. Welle, 143 Colo. 37, 352 P.2d 106 (1960).

Any recovery under this section is controlled and must be distributed under the provisions of § 13-21-201, this without regard to whether or not an heir entitled to share suffered damages. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960).

The operative injury for purposes of a wrongful death action is the wrongful death itself; thus the $150,000 per injury damages cap in the Colorado Governmental Immunity Act does not apply separately to each party in a wrongful death action but rather to the wrongful death action as a whole. Steedle v. Sereff, 167 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2007).

Section 24-10-103 (2) defines an "injury" as including "death"; therefore, the operative injury for purposes of a wrongful death action is the wrongful death itself, and § 24-10-114 (1)(a) limits damages to $150,000. Steedle v. Sereff, 167 P.3d 135 (Colo. 2007).

Action for wrongful death is property tort action. An action for wrongful death is an action which may be brought by certain named survivors of a decedent who sustain a direct pecuniary loss upon the death of the decedent. It is classified as a property tort action and cannot be classified as a tort action "for injuries done to the person". Jones v. Hildebrand, 432 U.S. 183, 97 S. Ct. 2283, 53 L. Ed.2d 209 (1977).

A constitutional claim based on an alleged deprivation of a mother's own rights, and not on deprivation of those of her son, is not for any "property loss". Jones v. Hildebrand, 432 U.S. 183, 97 S. Ct. 2283, 53 L. Ed.2d 209 (1977).

Asserted breach of warranty is a wrongful act. Since section refers to "wrongful acts" and not simply "tortious acts", there is no basis for distinguishing between breaches of contractual duties and breaches of tort duties. Ayala v. Joy Mfg. Co., 580 F. Supp. 521 (D. Colo. 1984).

A child who is born alive and subsequently dies is a person within the meaning of this section. A wrongful death action may be maintained regardless of whether the child was viable at the time of the injury or whether the child was viable at the time of birth. Gonzales v. Mascarenas, 190 P.3d 826 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applicability of provisions to viable fetus. A wrongful death action may be maintained for the death of a viable fetus, particularly a full-term fetus. Espadero v. Feld, 649 F. Supp. 1480 (D. Colo. 1986).

Heirs of fatally-injured intoxicated person may not maintain wrongful death action against vendor of alcoholic beverages because § 12-47-128.5 abolishes such actions by the consumers of alcohol and this statute permits heirs to maintain such actions only if the deceased could have done so had the deceased's injuries not been fatal. Sigman v. Seafood Ltd. P'ship I, 817 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1991).

Wrongful death action based on theory of negligent entrustment is derivative and granting of summary judgment motion not proper because genuine issues of material fact remained to be determined. Casebolt v. Cowan, 829 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1992).

II. NEGLIGENCE.

The breach of duty to be established under the statute is that owed by the tortfeasor to the deceased, not that owed to the heirs of the deceased. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

In a wrongful death action, negligence is not presumed from the happening of an accident, although it may be inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances. Ranke v. Fowler Real Estate Co., 30 Colo. App. 543, 497 P.2d 268 (1972).

Questions of fact are for the jury. In a wrongful death action where two equally plausible conclusions are deducible from the circumstances, the question is for the jury. Ranke v. Fowler Real Estate Co., 30 Colo. App. 543, 497 P.2d 268 (1972).

It is a question for the jury. As a matter of law it cannot be said that the negligence of deceased directly contributed to his death, and whether this was true as matter of fact is for the consideration of the jury to whom it is properly referred and by whom it is determined, in conformity with established principles of law. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Twombly, 3 Colo. 125 (1876).

It is a matter of law when the facts are undisputed. In a wrongful death action, contributory negligence is a question of law for the court to determine when the facts are undisputed and reasonable men can draw but one inference from them. Ranke v. Fowler Real Estate Co., 30 Colo. App. 543, 497 P.2d 268 (1972).

For when contributory negligence should be decided as a matter of fact not law, see Dillon v. Sterling Rendering Works, 106 Colo. 407, 106 P.2d 358 (1940).

Contributory negligence is a defense. Recovery may be denied because of a deceased employee's contributory negligence in failing to discover defects or weaknesses in machinery or appliances of which he had charge. Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159, 11 P. 50 (1886); Willy v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 115 Colo. 306, 172 P.2d 958 (1946).

It must be established like other defenses. The law does not presume contributory negligence; unless appearing in the proofs offered by plaintiff, it is a defense to be established as are other defenses. Platte & Denver Canal & Milling Co. v. Dowell, 17 Colo. 376, 30 P. 68 (1892).

"Loss of a chance of survival" theory of proximate causation. A plaintiff may recover damages when the defendant's conduct was not the cause of the medical condition which caused the injury but did cause a substantial reduction in the plaintiff's chance of survival. Mays v. United States, 608 F. Supp. 1476 (D. Colo. 1985).

For proximate cause necessary for liability, see Ward v. United States, 208 F. Supp. 118 (D. Colo. 1962).

For case where proximate cause is lacking, see McMillan v. Hammond, 158 Colo. 40, 404 P.2d 549 (1965).

III. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

Complaint held sufficient. Pierce v. Connors, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

Plaintiff has burden of establishing prima facie right to punitive damages. When punitive damages are in issue and information is sought by the plaintiff relating to the defendant's financial condition, justice requires no less than the imposition on the plaintiff of the burden of establishing a prima facie right to punitive damages. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Statute of limitations relating to death cases commences with time of injury. Ferrari, S.p.A. SEFAC v. District Court, 185 Colo. 136, 522 P.2d 105 (1974).

Exclusion of evidence held harmless. A wife sued road building contractors for the death of her husband alleged to have been caused by their failure to install sufficient warning signals at a road barrier as required by their contract. On the trial she offered the pertinent provisions of the contract in evidence, which were by the court excluded. The exclusion was harmless because plaintiff's right to sue and defendants' liability were to be determined by the law of negligence and not by provisions of the contract. Lewis v. La Nier, 84 Colo. 376, 270 P. 656 (1928).

Admission of evidence not reversible error.

Admission in evidence of statement of decedent that his family had "turned him down", apparently offered on the theory that it tended to show that plaintiffs suffered no loss, if erroneous, was trivial and not reversible. Dwinelle v. Union Pac. R. R., 104 Colo. 545, 92 P.2d 741 (1939).

Permissible scope of discovery of defendant's financial worth should include only material evidence of the defendant's financial worth where a prima facie case for punitive damages has been made, and should be framed in such a manner that the questions proposed are not unduly burdensome. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Extent of discovery of defendant's financial condition not unlimited. The extent of discovery of defendant's financial condition, even after a prima facie case for punitive damages is made, is not unlimited. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Specific requests of detailed information may constitute harassment. Specific questions requesting detailed information regarding the defendant's financial status may constitute unnecessary harassment. Leidholt v. District Court, 619 P.2d 768 (Colo. 1980).

Decedents' ability to accumulate wealth and loss of earning capacity in a certain business are relevant in a wrongful death action when a material part of the heir's net pecuniary loss is based on the loss of increase in her anticipated inheritance and the estimates and opinions presented were sufficiently grounded in fact to be admissible and probative on the issue of the decedents' earning capacity. Ford v. Bd.

of County Comm'rs, 677 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. dismissed, 679 P.2d 579 (Colo. 1984).

Objections to giving and refusing instructions held without merit in action under this section by parents for death of minor son. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Smith, 92 Colo. 464, 21 P.2d 1116 (1933).

This section relates only to wrongs done within the state, imposes no duty upon anyone not subject to its jurisdiction, and gives a right of action to persons without its jurisdiction only when they are injured by a wrong done within its jurisdiction. Patek v. Am. Smelting & Ref. Co., 154 F. 190 (8th Cir. 1907).

The Colorado wrongful death statute does not attempt to give a right of action for wrongful death committed outside of Colorado. Stoltz v. Burlington Transp. Co., 178 F.2d 514 (10th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 929, 70 S. Ct. 628, 94 L. Ed. 1349 (1950); Estate of Murphy v. Colo. Aviation, Inc., 353 F. Supp. 1095 (D. Colo. 1973).

Lex loci governs where injury occurred outside state. In an action for wrongful death where the injury occurred outside of the state in which the action is brought, the amount of recovery is governed by the lex loci and not by the lex fori. Stoltz v. Burlington Transp. Co., 178 F.2d 514 (10th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 929, 70 S. Ct. 628, 94 L. Ed. 1349 (1950).

Mere disagreement with the amount of damages awarded is not a sufficient ground to overturn an award of damages which is supported by competent evidence in the record. Morrison v. Bradley, 655 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982).

13-21-203. Limitation on damages. (1) (a) All damages accruing under section 13-21-202 shall be sued for and recovered by the same parties and in the same manner as provided in section 13-21-201, and in every such action the jury may give such damages as they may deem fair and just, with reference to the necessary injury resulting from such death, including damages for noneconomic loss or injury as defined in section 13-21-102.5 and subject to the limitations of this section and including within noneconomic loss or injury damages for grief, loss of companionship, pain and suffering, and emotional stress, to the surviving parties who may be entitled to sue; and also having regard to the mitigating or aggravating circumstances attending any such wrongful act, neglect, or default; except that, if the decedent left neither a widow, a widower, minor children, nor a dependent father or mother, the damages recoverable in any such action shall not exceed the limitations for noneconomic loss or injury set forth in section 13-21-102.5, unless the wrongful act, neglect, or default causing death constitutes a felonious killing, as defined in section 15-11-803 (1) (b), C.R.S., and as determined in the manner described in section 15-11-803 (7), C.R.S., in which case there shall be no limitation on the damages for noneconomic loss or injury recoverable in such action. No action shall be brought and no recovery shall be had under both section 13-21-201 and section 13-21-202, and in all cases the plaintiff is required to elect under which section he or she will proceed. There shall be only one civil action under this part 2 for recovery of damages for the wrongful death of any one decedent. Notwithstanding anything in this section or in section 13-21-102.5 to the contrary, there shall be no recovery under this part 2 for noneconomic loss or injury in excess of two hundred fifty thousand dollars, unless the wrongful act, neglect, or default causing death constitutes a felonious killing, as defined in section 15-11-803 (1) (b), C.R.S., and as determined in the manner described in section 15-11-803 (7), C.R.S.

(b) The damages recoverable for noneconomic loss or injury in any medical malpractice action shall not exceed the limitations on noneconomic loss or injury set forth in section 13-64-302.

(2) This section shall apply to a cause of action based on a wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring on or after July 1, 1969. A cause of action based on a wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring prior to July 1, 1969, shall be governed by the law in force and effect at the time of such wrongful act, neglect, or default.

(3) (a) In all actions brought under section 13-21-201 or 13-21-202 in which damages are assessed by the trier of fact, and the death complained of is attended by circumstances of fraud, malice, or willful and wanton conduct, the trier of fact, in addition to the actual damages, may award reasonable exemplary damages. The amount of such reasonable exemplary damages shall not exceed an amount that is equal to the amount of the actual damages awarded to the injured party.

(b) For purposes of this subsection (3), "willful and wanton conduct" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 13-21-102 (1) (b).

(c) (I) A claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section may not be included in any initial claim for relief. A claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section shall be allowed by amendment to the pleadings only after the passage of sixty days following the exchange of initial disclosures pursuant to rule 26 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure and the plaintiff establishes prima facie proof of a triable issue. After the plaintiff establishes the existence of a triable issue of exemplary damages, the court may, in its discretion, allow additional discovery on the issue of exemplary damages as the court deems appropriate.

(II) A claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section shall not be time barred by the applicable provisions of law for the commencement of actions, so long as:

(A) The claim for exemplary damages arises, pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), from the claim in such action that is brought under section 13-21-201 or 13-21-202; and

(B) The claim in such action that is brought under section 13-21-201 or 13-21-202 is not time barred.

(III) The assertion of a claim for exemplary damages in an action governed by this section shall not be rendered ineffective solely because the assertion was made after the applicable deadline contained in the court's case management order, so long as the plaintiff establishes that he or she did not discover, and could not have reasonably discovered prior to such deadline, the grounds for asserting the exemplary damages claim.

(4) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (3) of this section, the court may reduce or disallow the award of exemplary damages to the extent that:

(a) The deterrent effect of the damages has been accomplished; or

(b) The conduct that resulted in the award has ceased; or

(c) The purpose of such damages has otherwise been served.

(5) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (3) of this section, the court may increase any award of exemplary damages to a sum not to exceed three times the amount of actual damages, if it is shown that:

(a) The defendant has continued the behavior or repeated the action that is the subject of the claim against the defendant in a willful and wanton manner against another person or persons during the pendency of the case; or

(b) The defendant has acted in a willful and wanton manner during the pendency of the action in a manner that has further aggravated the damages of the plaintiff when the defendant knew or should have known such action would produce aggravation.

(6) The provisions of this section shall not apply to a peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., or to any firefighter, as defined in section 18-3-201 (1), C.R.S., for claims arising out of injuries sustained from an act or omission of such peace officer or firefighter acting in the performance of his or her duties and within the scope of his or her employment.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the provisions of section 13-64-302.5 or the provisions of part 1 of article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Double Recovery for Wrongful Death by Public Carrier", see 28 Dicta 299 (1951). For comment on McEntyre v. Jones, appearing below, see 31 Dicta 198 (1954). For article, "Damages for Death — Limited or Unlimited", see 34 Dicta 32 (1957). For comment on Clint v. Stolworthy, appearing below, see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 443 (1961). For comment on Herbertson v. Russell, appearing below, see 35 U. Colo. L. Rev. 463 (1963). For note, "The Propriety of Punitive Damages Under Colorado's Wrongful Death Statute", see 49 Den. L.J. 81 (1972). For note, "Blind Imitation of the Past: An Analysis of Pecuniary Damages in Wrongful Death Actions", see 49 Den. L.J. 99 (1972).

Rationale for limitation of recovery. The state policy of limiting wrongful death recovery to the actual property loss which has been suffered by the heirs of the deceased serves to negate any possibility of a windfall of the decedent's heirs by denying them compensation for injuries which were not their own. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

This section does not involve a suspect class and it furthers a legitimate state interest because it seems well within the general assembly's discretion to weigh the competing social interests and determine that, where the parents are not actually dependent on a child, the recovery should be limited to $45,000. Pollock v. City & County of Denver, 194 Colo. 380, 572 P.2d 828 (1977).

It may not be given retroactive effect. Hansen v. Mercy Hosp., 40 Colo. App. 17, 570 P.2d 1309 (1977), aff'd, 195 Colo. 529, 579 P.2d 1158 (1978).

Legislative intent to treat negligent acts and omissions identically with regard to subsection (2). The general assembly selected the phrase, "wrongful act, neglect or default", to govern application of amendments to the damages limitation of the death statute. This indicates a legislative intent to treat negligent acts and negligent omissions identically. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Rule does not unconstitutionally restrict damages. Damages under the wrongful death statute are not unconstitutionally restricted by the net pecuniary loss rule, which permits recovery of only compensatory damages for the loss of a decedent's services and support and does not permit recovery of damages for the survivor's grief or for punitive damages. Jones v. Hildebrant, 191 Colo. 1, 550 P.2d 339 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 183, 97 S. Ct. 2283, 53 L. Ed.2d 209 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

The noneconomic damages cap under this section applies on a per-claim basis and not a per-defendant basis. The term "recovery" refers to the plaintiff's total recovery, and the plain language of the statute limits that recovery to $250,000. Lanahan v. Chi Psi Fraternity, 175 P.3d 97 (Colo. 2008).

There is no limitation on the amount of recovery for noneconomic damages when death caused by a wrongful act, neglect, or default constitutes a felonious killing as defined in § 15-11-803 (1) and as determined in the manner described in § 15-11-803 (7). Estate of Wright ex rel. Wright v. United Serv. Auto. Ass'n, 53 P.3d 683 (Colo. App. 2001).

The felonious killing exception in subsection (1)(a) does not apply to skiing-related wrongful death actions. Stamp v. Vail Corp., 172 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007).

Wrongful death and outrageous conduct actions serve entirely different purposes, and the validity of one does not rise and fall with the success or failure of the other. DeCicco v. Trinidad Area Health Ass'n, 40 Colo. App. 63, 573 P.2d 559 (1977).

An arbitration proceeding is not a civil action as contemplated by the wrongful death statute. Arbitration is an alternative dispute resolution mechanism designed to avoid the need for filing a civil action or to resolve an existing civil action. Morrison v. Colo. Permanente Medical Group, 983 F. Supp. 937 (D. Colo. 1997).

Rule inapplicable in § 1983 action. In an action in state court under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiff is not subject to the net pecuniary loss limitation on his right to recover damages otherwise imposed by this section. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Subsection (1)(a) limits wrongful death actions to "only one civil action", and the severance of plaintiff's negligence claim and the concomitant transfer of this claim to a new venue has created two civil actions for wrongful death, thereby violating the terms of the section. To the extent that the rules of venue set forth in C.R.C.P. 98 support defendant's demand for a change of venue, those rules are subordinate to the statutory language applicable in unique situations where, as here, co-defendants are sued for the wrongful death of one decedent based on separate torts committed in different counties. Hernandez v. Downing, 154 P.3d 1068 (Colo. 2007).

This section allows compensatory damages only. Moffat v. Tenney, 17 Colo. 189, 30 P. 348 (1892); Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892); Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721; Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 5 Colo. App. 321, 38 P. 850 (1894); Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Spencer, 25 Colo. 9, 52 P. 211 (1898); Mitchell v. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co., 12 Colo. App. 277, 55 P. 736 (1898); Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Spencer, 27 Colo. 313, 61 P. 606 (1900).

This section limits damages in wrongful death to compensatory damages. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Not exemplary damages. If the general assembly had intended to authorize exemplary damages they would, doubtless, have used different language. This they did not do; but lest the courts should be troubled with excessive verdicts which might be supposed to rest upon a vindictive basis, they placed an absolute limit upon the recovery in the class of actions thus authorized. Moffat v. Tenney, 17 Colo. 189, 30 P. 348 (1892); Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

This section excludes an award of exemplary damages. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Net pecuniary loss is the proper measure of damages in a wrongful death action under this section. Good v. A.B. Chance Co., 39 Colo. App. 70, 565 P.2d 217 (1977).

A plaintiff in a wrongful death action is limited in damages to his net pecuniary loss. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

The net pecuniary loss rule limits a wrongful death plaintiff's damages to the financial benefit, if any, which that person might reasonably have expected to receive from the decedent had he lived. Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Evidence regarding decedent's future income tax liability may not be considered when determining amount of plaintiff's (decedent's wife's) net pecuniary loss. Hoyal v. Pioneer Sand Co., 188 P.3d 716 (Colo. 2008).

Plaintiffs may recover only for diminution of decedent's estate; there is no recovery permitted for grief, loss of comfort and society and other general damages. Niven v. Falkenburg, 553 F. Supp. 1021 (D. Colo. 1983).

For the true measure of damages being pecuniary loss resulting to plaintiff, see Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721, 46 Am. St. R. 279 (1894); Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Spencer, 25 Colo. 9, 52 P. 211 (1898); Mitchell v. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co., 12 Colo. App. 277, 55 P. 736 (1898); Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Spencer, 27 Colo. 313, 61 P. 606, 51 L.R.A. 121 (1900); Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962); Kogul v. Sonheim, 150 Colo. 316, 372 P.2d 731 (1962); Pollock v. City & County of Denver, 194 Colo. 380, 572 P.2d 828 (1977).

For sufficient statement of pecuniary injury, see Orman v. Mannix, 17 Colo. 564, 30 P. 1037 (1892); Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 5 Colo. App. 321, 38 P. 850 (1894).

Life has pecuniary value with reference to the relations of the deceased. As a matter of sentiment, life has no pecuniary value, but considered with reference to the relations of deceased with others, it is capable of such estimate. In this sense a parent is entitled to the services of children during their minority, and to support and maintenance from them in his declining years. McEntyre v. Jones, 128 Colo. 461, 263 P.2d 313 (1953).

Amount is made largely dependent on plaintiff's interest in deceased's life. Under this statute, the amount to be received by the plaintiff is made largely, if not wholly, dependent upon the interest which the plaintiff had in the life of the deceased. Mitchell v. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co., 12 Colo. App. 277, 55 P. 736 (1898).

Recovery is not to be measured or determined by the extent of the contributions or support furnished by the deceased to the plaintiff. In other words, although the deceased as a son may never yet have contributed to the support of his father, yet when the son's age, habits, earning capacity, and the age of the father are once established, a recovery may be had for the probable injury which the father has sustained in the loss of his son. Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 5 Colo. App. 321, 38 P. 850 (1894).

The sum will depend on a variety of circumstances and future contingencies, and will, therefore, be difficult of exact ascertainment; but the damages to be awarded in each case may be approximated by considering the age, health, condition in life, habits of industry or otherwise, ability to earn money, on the part of the deceased, including his or her disposition to aid or assist the plaintiff; not only the kinship or legal relation between the deceased and the plaintiff, but the actual relations between them as manifested by acts of pecuniary assistance rendered by the deceased to the plaintiff, and also contrary acts may be taken into consideration. Pierce v. Conners, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

The amount of recovery may be determined from the prospective accumulations of the deceased had he not been killed, having reference to his or her age, occupation, habits, bodily health and ability to earn money. Compensation as damages under these sections is based on the reasonable expectation of benefit which a plaintiff may have a right to indulge from a continuance of the life of the deceased. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Lundin, 3 Colo. 94 (1876); Denver & R. R. v. Frederic, 57 Colo. 90, 140 P. 463 (1914).

Damages in a wrongful death action under this section necessarily include estimations of the accumulations of a decedent during the probable remainder of his life. Good v. A.B. Chance Co., 39 Colo. App. 70, 565 P.2d 217 (1977).

For approximation of pecuniary value, see Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

The recovery allowable is in no sense a solatium for the grief of the living occasioned by the death of the relative or friend, however dear. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

Damages for mental suffering, caused by grief, are not recoverable, but this conclusion is based upon the ground that damages recoverable by this section are limited to the net pecuniary benefit which the plaintiff might reasonably have expected to receive from the deceased. Bleecker v. Colo. & S. Ry., 50 Colo. 140, 114 P. 481 (1911).

Parental grief is not an element of damages in wrongful death actions, it being the peculiar province of the jury to estimate and assess such loss under proper instructions. Kogul v. Sonheim, 150 Colo. 316, 372 P.2d 731 (1962); Bradshaw v. Nicolay, 765 P.2d 630 (Colo. App. 1988); Aiken v. Peters, 899 P.2d 382 (Colo. App. 1995).

The net pecuniary loss rule does not allow for the compensation of parental grief. Jones v. Hildebrandt, 191 Colo. 1, 550 P.2d 339 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 183, 97 S. Ct. 2283, 53 L. Ed.2d 209 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Espinoza v. O'Dell, 633 P.2d 455 (1981), appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction, 456 U.S. 430, 102 S. Ct. 1865, 72 L. Ed.2d 237 (1982).

Decedents' families' mental anguish claims covered by an insurance policy are limited by this section, which prohibits recovery for non-economic loss or injury in wrongful death cases in excess of $250,000. This limit is applied collectively for each decedent. Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Durango Air Serv., Inc., 283 F.3d 1222 (10th Cir. 2002).

Child is minor until age 21. A child is a minor, as that term is used in subsection (1), until his or her twenty-first birthday. Hesseltine v. United States, 538 F. Supp. 1003 (D. Colo. 1982).

A parent may or may not be a dependent. Hesseltine v. United States, 538 F. Supp. 1003 (D. Colo. 1982).

A change in this rule must be by the general assembly. Any change in the law as to the measure of damages allowed for the wrongful death of a child in our view should only come by proper legislative action and not through judicial legislation. Kogul v. Sonheim, 150 Colo. 316, 372 P.2d 731 (1962).

Parents are entitled to anticipated support in their declining years. "Net pecuniary loss" has been construed so as to include not only the loss to the parent of the services and earnings which they could have reasonably expected from their child during his or her minority, less their expenditures for his or her maintenance, but also includes the loss of services and support which they could have reasonably anticipated during their "declining years", but for the untimely death. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

Supreme court declines to recognize a Colorado common law right in parents to seek damages for loss of consortium with their injured child. The decision to grant a right of recovery for loss of consortium because of a child's injury is a matter best left to the general assembly. Bartlett v. Elgin, 973 P.2d 694 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 994 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1999) (following Lee v. Colo. Dept. of Health, 718 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1986) and Hill v. United States, 854 F. Supp. 727 (D. Colo. 1994) and declining to follow Hancey v. United States, 967 F. Supp. 443 (D. Colo. 1997)).

Widow need not be necessitous in order to recover. We fail to discover in our statute any warrant for saying that unless the widow in the lifetime of her husband was necessitous, or dependent she is not entitled to recover. Without regard to the needy condition of the widow, caeteris paribus, the measure of her damages is the same in each case. Denver, etc., Ry. v. Woodward, 4 Colo. 1 (1877).

The phrase "mitigating or aggravating circumstances" is confined to those circumstances which increase or diminish this compensation.

Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

Mitigating or aggravating circumstances contemplate circumstances not relating to the wrongful act itself, but such as affect the actual damages suffered by the surviving party entitled to sue, either by way of diminishing or enhancing the same. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Charge need not specifically enumerate every aggravating or mitigating circumstance. In actions under this and the preceding section, it is not necessary for the court to specifically enumerate in its charge each and every aggravating or mitigating circumstance to be considered in computing compensatory damages. Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465, 30 P. 352 (1892).

Funeral expenses are a proper element of damage. McEntyre v. Jones, 128 Colo. 461, 263 P.2d 313 (1953).

Proceeds of judgment must be distributed according to § 13-21-201. The proceeds of a judgment obtained by a widow and based only on her pecuniary loss under this section and § 13-21-202 do not belong solely to her, but are to be owned by and divided among the heirs as provided in § 13-21-201, even though heirs other than the widow personally suffered no pecuniary loss. Clint v. Stolworthy, 144 Colo. 597, 357 P.2d 649 (1960); Mosley v. Prall, 158 Colo. 504, 408 P.2d 434 (1965).

Insurance companies have no common law duty to assure distribution of settlement proceeds. Where insurers distributed settlement proceeds to the surviving spouse in a wrongful death action, the insurers satisfied their statutory duty and are not required to monitor the distribution of the proceeds to all potential beneficiaries. Campbell v. Shankle, 680 P.2d 1352 (Colo. App. 1984).

Court may instruct jury that pecuniary loss may exist when there is no obligation of support. It is urged that the court erred in instructing the jury that the appellees were entitled to recover for the pecuniary loss resulting to them in consequence of the said death, for the reason that there was no legal obligation upon the part of the deceased to support the appellees, and therefore there were no damages except simply nominal damages. This position is untenable. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Wilson, 12 Colo. 20, 20 P. 340 (1888).

Instruction failing to limit recovery to pecuniary loss is erroneous. It is only for the pecuniary loss resulting to the living party entitled to sue resulting from the death of the deceased that this section affords compensation, and an instruction which omits this important limitation, and leaves the jury at liberty to find any amount that they might deem fair and just, not exceeding the maximum, regardless of the fact whether the plaintiffs suffered any pecuniary loss by the death of the deceased, or not, is erroneous. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Spencer, 25 Colo. 9, 52 P. 211 (1898).

For instructions on damages held correct, see Lehrer v. Lorenzen, 124 Colo. 17, 233 P.2d 382 (1951); St. Lukes Hosp. Ass'n v. Long, 125 Colo. 25, 240 P.2d 917 (1952); McEntyre v. Jones, 128 Colo. 461, 263 P.2d 313 (1953).

Instruction to jury on provocation as an element to be considered is error. In a wrongful death action, it is error for the trial court to give an instruction on provocation as an element to be considered by the jury in mitigation of damages or as a factor to be considered in the determination of liability. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Tortious act or omission occurs when and where negligence occurs, without reference to time of discovery or accrual. The language used by the general assembly suggests that the time of the wrongful act, neglect, or default's occurrence must be determined as an objective fact, without reference to the subjective elements of the "time of discovery" or accrual rules. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Wrongful default occurs when failure to disclose becomes tortious negligence, or in other words, when the duty to disclose was first breached. Hernandez v. United States, 383 F. Supp. 168 (D. Colo. 1974).

Evidence of defendant's actions following decedent's death is irrelevant in determining the noneconomic damages recoverable under this section, since any additional mental suffering thereby inflicted on grieving relatives is not a "necessary injury resulting from [the] death" of the decedent. Aiken v. Peters, 899 P.2d 382 (Colo. App. 1995).

Enhanced award not available. Subsection (1) mandates that the provisions of § 13-21-102.5 authorizing the court to enter an award of damages for noneconomic losses up to $500,000 are to be disregarded, and the $250,000 limit set forth in this section applies. Aiken v. Peters, 899 P.2d 382 (Colo. App. 1995).

Although the decedent's children were entitled to an award, the defendant counsel satisfied his statutory duty by paying the settlement proceeds to his client, the surviving spouse. Klancke v. Smith, 829 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court abused its discretion when it denied plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint to add a claim for exemplary damages where amended complaint satisfied the burden of proof set forth in subsection (3)(c)(I). Stamp v. Vail Corp., 172 P.3d 437 (Colo. 2007).

Applied in Sager v. City of Woodland Park, 543 F. Supp. 282 (D. Colo. 1982); Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 674 P.2d 383 (Colo. 1984).

II. PROOF OF DAMAGES.

A. Jury Function.

While damages in a wrongful death action need not be proved with mathematical certainty, there must be some evidence to prima facie establish with a reasonable degree of certainty the damages flowing from the wrongful death. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

There must be some evidence to prima facie establish with at least a reasonable degree of certainty the damages flowing from the wrongful death. Herbertson v. Russell, 150 Colo. 110, 371 P.2d 422 (1962).

Court cannot set aside jury's verdict unless damages are grossly and manifestly inadequate. It is an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court to set aside the verdict of the jury and grant a new trial solely on the ground of inadequacy of the verdict unless, under the evidence, it can be definitely said that the verdict is grossly and manifestly inadequate, or unless the amount thereof is so small as to clearly and definitely indicate that the jury neglected to take into consideration evidence of pecuniary loss or were influenced either by prejudice, passion, or other improper considerations. Kogul v. Sonheim, 150 Colo. 316, 372 P.2d 731 (1962).

Disagreement with amount awarded insufficient ground to overturn. Mere disagreement with the amount of damages awarded is not a sufficient ground to overturn an award of damages which is supported by competent evidence in the record. Morrison v. Bradley, 655 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982); Foster ex rel. Foster v. Phillips, 6 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 1999).

The jury has the benefit of extensive testimony and evidence, and it is its peculiar province to estimate and assess the damages. Kogul v. Sonheim, 150 Colo. 316, 372 P.2d 731 (1962).

Jury verdict may be upset when it cannot be supported by any legitimate inference. In view of the undisputed testimony on deceased's salary and life expectancy, it is apparent that no consideration at all was given to the net pecuniary loss the plaintiffs would sustain in the near foreseeable future by reason of being deprived of the support they could reasonably expect under the various life expectancy tables which the jury was told to consider, not only relating to the deceased, but also in connection with the plaintiffs. The verdict is contrary to the undisputed evidence and cannot be supported by any legitimate inferences. Lewis v. Great W. Distrib. Co., 168 Colo. 424, 451 P.2d 754 (1969).

A directed verdict in any dollar amount is not sanctioned even in the clearest of liability cases where the recovery is unlimited. It would not be a valid ground to invade the province of the jury merely because the case involved an amount which by statute put a ceiling on the jury determination. Lewis v. Great W. Distrib. Co., 168 Colo. 424, 451 P.2d 754 (1969).

The words "the jury" in this section should not be read as excluding the court in nonjury cases. Bartch v. United States, 330 F.2d 466 (10th Cir. 1964).

Statutory limit is applicable in suits under federal tort claim act. The Colorado statutory limitation upon gross recovery for wrongful death is applicable in an action brought under the federal tort claims act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b), 2674. Bartch v. United States, 330 F.2d 466 (10th Cir. 1964).

This section does not purport to apply to actions brought for wrongful death under a statute of another state. Neither is there anything in the Colorado statute which indicates that Colorado regards full compensatory damages for wrongful death committed outside of Colorado to be contrary to good morals or natural justice, or violative of the public policy of Colorado. Stoltz v. Burlington Transp. Co., 178 F.2d 514 (10th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 929, 70 S. Ct. 628, 94 L. Ed. 1349 (1950).

B. Evidence.

Testimony concerning the relations of the deceased to the plaintiff is admissible, in order to form a just estimate of the probable damage. Mollie Gibson Consol. Mining & Milling Co. v. Sharp, 5 Colo. App. 321, 38 P. 850 (1894).

Evidence of value of services of girl from seven to eighteen. The trial court did not err in admitting evidence of the value of the services of a girl like the deceased from the age of seven years to the age of eighteen, though the law does not necessarily limit the recovery to the value of such services. Pierce v. Connors, 20 Colo. 178, 37 P. 721 (1894).

Evidence of provocation is irrelevant to assessment of actual damages in a wrongful death claim. Mangus v. Miller, 35 Colo. App. 335, 535 P.2d 219, cert. dismissed, 189 Colo. 481, 569 P.2d 1390 (1975).

Statute does not permit the jury to consider the aggravating circumstances surrounding defendant's actions. Technical evidence of the level of alcohol in the defendant's blood was irrelevant on the issue of whether noneconomic damages were aggravated by the knowledge of the defendant's intoxication. Foster ex rel. Foster v. Phillips, 6 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 1999).

Approved mortality tables may be used for the purpose of showing the probable duration of life. Kansas Pac. Ry. v. Lundin, 3 Colo. 94 (1876).

For when proof is sufficient to show probable loss, see Colo. Coal & Iron Co. v. Lamb, 6 Colo. App. 255, 40 P. 251 (1895).

13-21-203.5. Alternative means of establishing damages - solatium amount. In any case arising under section 13-21-202, the persons entitled to sue under the provisions of section 13-21-201 (1) may elect in writing to sue for and recover a solatium in the amount of fifty thousand dollars. Such solatium amount shall be in addition to economic damages and to reasonable funeral, burial, interment, or cremation expenses, which expenses may also be recovered in an action under this section. Such solatium amount shall be in lieu of noneconomic damages recoverable under section 13-21-203 and shall be awarded upon a finding or admission of the defendant's liability for the wrongful death.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 753, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Procedural due process is not denied by solatium statute since it requires a full civil trial to determine liability thereby providing defendants a substantial opportunity to be heard. Dewey v. Hardy, 917 P.2d 305 (Colo. App. 1995).

Amount of $50,000 set by solatium statute for death of a human being is not so grossly excessive and severe as to be disproportionate to the offense and obviously unreasonable in violation of the due process clause. Dewey v. Hardy, 917 P.2d 305 (Colo. App. 1995).

The solatium award of $50,000 is exempt from reduction by operation of the comparative fault statute. Dewey v. Hardy, 917 P.2d 305 (Colo. App. 1995).

And it is not subject to reduction by operation of the pro-rata liability statute. To the extent that the comparative fault statute and the pro-rata liability statute conflict with this section by compelling a reduction of the solatium amount recoverable by a wrongful death plaintiff, this section prevails. B.G.'s Inc. v. Gross, 23 P.3d 691 (Colo. 2001).

Nor is the $50,000 solatium award subject to reduction by a co-defendant's settlement where the settlement did not designate the nature of the damages for which payment was made. To permit such a settlement to reduce the solatium award would run contrary to the rationale that the solatium award is intended as an ultimate award not subject to further reduction regardless of the fault of other tortfeasors. Smith v. Vincent, 77 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

With limited exceptions, this section generally does not require co-defendants to share equitably in the responsibility to pay the solatium award. Smith v. Vincent, 77 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in awarding costs to plaintiff pursuing a wrongful death action under this section and denying defendant's costs. Dewey v. Hardy, 917 P.2d 305 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-21-203.7. Adjustments of dollar limitations for effects of inflation. (1) The limitations on noneconomic damages set forth in section 13-21-203 (1) (a) and the amount of the solatium set forth in section 13-21-203.5 shall be adjusted for inflation as of January 1, 1998, and January 1, 2008. The adjustments made on January 1, 1998, and January 1, 2008, shall be based on the cumulative annual adjustment for inflation for each year since the effective date of the damages limitations in sections 13-21-203 (1) (a) and 13-21-203.5. The adjustments made pursuant to this subsection (1) shall be rounded upward or downward to the nearest ten-dollar increment.

(2) As used in this section, "inflation" means the annual percentage change in the United States department of labor, bureau of labor statistics, consumer price index for Denver-Boulder, all items, all urban consumers, or its successor index.

(3) The secretary of state shall certify the adjusted limitation on damages within fourteen days after the appropriate information is available, and:

(a) The adjusted limitation on damages shall be the limitation applicable to all claims for relief that accrue on or after January 1, 1998, and before January 1, 2008; and

(b) The adjusted limitation on damages as of January 1, 2008, shall be the limitation applicable to all claims for relief that accrue on and after January 1, 2008.

To obtain a copy of the review, once completed, view Colorado Legislative Council's web site.

13-21-204. Limitation of actions. All actions provided for by this part 2 shall be brought within the time period prescribed in section 13-80-102.

ANNOTATION

The time limitation in this section is a matter of procedural law rather than substantive law based on court's reading of Barnhill v. Public Serv. Co. (649 P.2d 716 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 690 P.2d 1248 (Colo. 1984)). Therefore, in diversity action filed in Mississippi where Mississippi's choice of law principles apply, Mississippi must apply the substantive law of Colorado but may apply its own law in procedural matters including statute of limitations. Davis v. Nat'l Gypsum Co., 743 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir. 1984).

Language of section is plainly all-inclusive, and must be construed to apply to all wrongful death actions in the absence of an express exception in former § 13-80-127. McClanahan v. Am. Gilsonite Co., 494 F. Supp. 1334 (D. Colo. 1980).

Bringing action is indispensable condition for liability. Commencement of an action within the time fixed by this section is an indispensable condition of the liability and of the action which wrongful death statutes permit. Ritter v. Aspen Skiing Corp., 519 F. Supp. 907 (D. Colo. 1981).

The statute of limitations begins to run immediately upon the happening of the wrongful act. Fish v. Liley, 120 Colo. 156, 208 P.2d 930 (1949).

The statute of limitations in a wrongful death action begins to run on the date the damage or injury arising from the commission of the alleged negligence from which death later results becomes known or by reasonable care could have been discovered. Crownover v. Gleichman, 38 Colo. App. 96, 554 P.2d 313 (1976), aff'd, 194 Colo. 48, 574 P.2d 497 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 905, 98 S. Ct. 1450, 55 L. Ed.2d 495 (1978).

Limitation period starts running no later than date of death. The statute of limitations specifically starts running no later than the date of death. With v. General Elec. Co., 653 P.2d 764 (Colo. App. 1982); Gonzales v. Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co., 686 P.2d 1362 (Colo. App. 1984).

Action not filed in two years is barred. The action not having been filed within two years after the commission of the alleged negligence, said to have resulted in the death of the injured husband, is barred. Franzen v. Zimmerman, 127 Colo. 381, 256 P.2d 897 (1953).

Action is barred when not filed within two years from the "discovery" of the alleged negligence. Crownover v. Gleichman, 194 Colo. 48, 574 P.2d 497 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 905, 98 S. Ct. 1450, 55 L. Ed.2d 495 (1978); Rauschenberger v. Radetsky, 745 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1987).

Having an action for wrongful conduct not a condition precedent to bringing wrongful death action. The wrongful death action is not complete until death. Therefore, statute of limitations begins at death. Rowell v. Clifford, 976 P.2d 363 (Colo. App. 1998).

Limitation period not tolled by former § 13-80-126. The Colorado wrongful death act is not a "statute of limitations but a statute of creation," thus former § 13-80-126 will not toll the two year period in which one has to commence a wrongful death action. Nelson v. Hall, 573 F. Supp. 1097 (D. Colo. 1983).

Limitation period tolled by § 13-81-103. This statute is not a "nonclaim statute" which prohibits filing of a lawsuit after a specific period of time, and, therefore, it is subject to tolling provision of general disability statute, § 13-81-103. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Barnhill, 690 P.2d 1248 (Colo. 1984).

Action barred by this section is not revived by former § 13-80-128. The remedial revival statute, former § 13-80-128, does not apply to wrongful death actions. Gonzales v. Denver Rio Grande Western R.R., 686 P.2d 1362 (Colo. App. 1984); Phillips v. Beeche, 679 P.2d 126 (Colo. App. 1984).

For situation where statute does not begin to run until injury occurred, see Decaie v. Pub. Serv. Co., 173 Colo. 402, 479 P.2d 964 (1971).

Limitations period is subject to tolling for fraudulent concealment of facts underlying the wrongful act. First Interstate Bank v. Piper Aircraft, 744 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1987).

The mere fact that the plaintiff was aware of a death on the date of its occurrence is not dispositive of whether the fraudulent concealment doctrine should be applied to a wrongful death action. Negligent conduct cannot be presumed from the happening of an accident, but may be established by the facts and circumstances surrounding the accident. First Interstate Bank v. Piper Aircraft, 744 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1987).

Question of whether plaintiff applied reasonable diligence in discovering that death was caused by negligent act is not question of law, but must generally be deemed a question of fact for determination by fact finder. First Interstate Bank v. Piper Aircraft, 744 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1987).

SETTLEMENTS, RELEASES, AND STATEMENTS

13-21-301. Settlements, releases, and statements of injured persons. (1) If a person is injured as a result of an occurrence which might give rise to liability and said person is a patient under the care of a practitioner of the healing arts or is hospitalized, no person or agent of any person whose interest is adverse to the injured person shall:

(a) Within thirty days after the date of the occurrence causing the injury, negotiate or attempt to negotiate a settlement with the injured patient;

(b) Within thirty days after the date of the occurrence causing the injury, obtain or attempt to obtain a general release of liability from the injured patient; or

(c) Within fifteen days after the date of the occurrence causing the injury, obtain or attempt to obtain any statement, either written, oral, recorded, or otherwise, from the injured patient for use in negotiating a settlement or obtaining a release except as provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(2) Any settlement agreement entered into or any general release of liability given by the injured patient in violation of this section shall be void. Any statement, written, oral, recorded, or otherwise, which is given by the injured party in violation of this section may not be used in evidence against the interest of the injured party in any civil action relating to the injury.

(3) Nothing in this section shall preclude the taking of statements by peace officers, as defined in section 24-31-301 (5), C.R.S., acting in their official capacity in the ordinary course of their employment, and nothing shall preclude the use of such statements for any purpose permitted by statute or rule of court applying to the admission of evidence.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, "The Enforceability of Personal Injury Releases", see 54 U. Colo. L. Rev. 277 (1983).

Subsection (3) is constitutional in promoting the legitimate governmental interest in encouraging the prompt and accurate reporting of incidents to peace officers. Wills v. State, 821 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1991).

Subsection (3) reflects the General Assembly's intent to allow statements given to peace officers to be admissible as evidence if such statements are otherwise properly admissible. Wills v. State, 821 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1991).

Legislative intent is to prevent hasty settlements. The intent of the general assembly in enacting this section was to prevent hasty settlements and to prohibit the evidentiary use of statements made by injured persons before the passage of enough time following an injury to permit the injured party to evaluate his condition carefully. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Smith, 658 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1983).

Purpose of medical care requirement. The purpose of the requirement that the injured party be under the care of a practitioner of the healing arts or be hospitalized is to exclude from the protective provisions of this section those situations where no injuries result or where they are so slight as to require only brief medical attention. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Smith, 658 P.2d 255

(Colo. 1983).

“Under the care of a practitioner of the healing arts”. For a person to be considered “under the care of a practitioner of the healing arts”, such care need not be actual and continuous, but rather must be provided in good faith and must be reasonably required. Smith v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 636 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1981), aff’d, 658 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1983).

State of mind of party taking statement is not determinative of its admissibility. This section does not require that the party taking a statement do so with the specific purpose of using the statement to negotiate a settlement or obtain a release before the exclusionary provisions of this section apply. The state of mind of the party taking the statement is not determinative of whether the statement is admissible. So long as the other requirements of this section have been met, this section applies to any statement which may be of some use or value in negotiating a settlement or obtaining a release irrespective of the state of mind or purpose of the party taking the statement. Marlow v. Atchi- son, T. & S.F. Ry., 671 P.2d 438 (Colo. App. 1983).

Statements obtained in violation of this section may not be used for purposes of impeachment. Smith v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 636 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1981), aff’d, 658 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1983).

Where a statement was clearly taken in violation of subsection (1)(c), its use is prohibited at trial for impeachment purposes or as substantive evidence. Rowland v. Ditlow, 653 P.2d 61 (Colo. App. 1982).

This section makes no distinction between use of a statement for impeachment and for other purposes. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Smith, 658 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1983).

The right to have statements excluded from evidence under this section is personal to an injured party and applies only to statements given by the injured party. It may not be applied to exclude the otherwise admissible statement of a third party. White v. Hansen, 813 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1990), rev’d on other grounds, 837 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1992).

13-21-401. Definitions. As used in this part 4, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Manufacturer” means a person or entity who designs, assembles, fabricates, produces, constructs, or otherwise prepares a product or a component part of a product prior to the sale of the product to a user or consumer. The term includes any seller who has actual knowledge of a defect in a product or a seller of a product who creates and furnishes a manufacturer with specifications relevant to the alleged defect for producing the product or who otherwise exercises some significant control over all or a portion of the manufacturing process or who alters or modifies a product in any significant manner after the product comes into his possession and before it is sold to the ultimate user or consumer. The term also includes any seller of a product who is owned in whole or significant part by the manufacturer or who owns, in whole or significant part, the manufacturer. A seller not otherwise a manufacturer shall not be deemed to be a manufacturer merely because he places or has placed a private label on a product if he did not otherwise specify how the product shall be produced or control, in some significant manner, the manufacturing process of the product and the seller discloses who the actual manufacturer is.

(2) “Product liability action” means any action brought against a manufacturer or seller of a product, regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the action is brought, for or on account of personal injury, death, or property damage caused by or resulting from the manufacture, construction, design, formula, installation, preparation, assembly, testing, packaging, labeling, or sale of any product, or the failure to warn or protect against a danger or hazard in the use, misuse, or unintended use of any product, or the failure to provide proper instructions for the use of any product.

(3) "Seller" means any individual or entity, including a manufacturer, wholesaler, distributor, or retailer, who is engaged in the business of selling or leasing any product for resale, use, or consumption.

By negative implication, the statute allows a seller who places a private label on a product without disclosing the actual manufacturer to be held liable as a manufacturer. Yoder v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 1215 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 812, 118 S. Ct. 55, 139 L. Ed. 2d 19 (1997); Long v. United States Brass Corp., 333 F. Supp. 2d 999 (D. Colo. 2004).

To hold a seller liable as a manufacturer, the plaintiff must prove that the seller had both actual knowledge of the design and use of the final product and actual knowledge that the final product was unreasonably dangerous without a warning. Bond v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours and Co., 868 P.2d 1114 (Colo. App. 1993).

Liability for injuries caused by a product will not be imputed to a corporation that provides the trademark but has no role in the manufacturing process or the sale of the product. Yoder v. Honeywell, Inc., 900 F. Supp. 240 (D. Colo. 1995), aff'd, 104 F.3d 1215 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 812, 118 S. Ct. 55, 139 L. Ed. 2d 19 (1997).

13-21-402. Innocent seller. (1) No product liability action shall be commenced or maintained against any seller of a product unless said seller is also the manufacturer of said product or the manufacturer of the part thereof giving rise to the product liability action. Nothing in this part 4 shall be construed to limit any other action from being brought against any seller of a product.

(2) If jurisdiction cannot be obtained over a particular manufacturer of a product or a part of a product alleged to be defective, then that manufacturer's principal distributor or seller over whom jurisdiction can be obtained shall be deemed, for the purposes of this section, the manufacturer of the product.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "New Statutes Change Civil Litigation in Colorado", see 33 Colo. Law. 65 (May 2004).

Issues under strict liability theory. Under a strict liability theory, the determination is whether the product is defective, or, if not defective, unreasonably unsafe, and whether, under an objective standard, after weighing the relevant costs and benefits, a warning was required. Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., 707 P.2d 1027 (Colo. App. 1985).

Claims based upon negligence and breach of implied warranty of merchantability are not based on the doctrine of strict liability in tort; hence, action could proceed against seller even though the seller was not also the manufacturer. Wallman v. Kelley, 976 P.2d 330 (Colo. App. 1998).

Contract claims that seek only economic loss for a defective product without collateral damage or risk of harm to others do not constitute product liability actions. With the innocent seller statute, the general assembly intended to insulate sellers who did not manufacture a product from liability for harm caused by the product and not from the commercial obligation to stand behind the merchantability of a product the seller chooses to sell in the public market place. Carter v. Brighton Ford, Inc., 251 P.3d 1179 (Colo. App. 2010).

Strict liability is limited to claims against manufacture of an allegedly defective product. Potthoff v. Alms, 41 Colo. App. 51, 583 P.2d 309 (1978)(cause of action arose before effective date of section).

Strict liability on the part of manufacturer of component parts for injuries resulting from design defects does not equate to absolute liability. Shaw v. General Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

Electricity is a product for purposes of section 402 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts while the distribution system for electricity is a service. Smith v. Home Light & Power Co., 695 P.2d 788 (Colo. App. 1984) (cause of action arose before effective date of section), aff'd, 734 P.2d 1051 (Colo. 1987).

Defense of misuse available. Uptain v. Huntington Lab, Inc., 685 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1984).

Generally, living things do not constitute "products" within the meaning of this section. Kaplan v. C Lazy U Ranch, 615 F. Supp. 234 (D. Colo. 1985).

Lack of a passive restraint system in automobiles held not actionable under unreasonable defect theory of restatement (second) of torts § 402A. Kern v. General Motors Corp., 724 P.2d 1365 (Colo. App. 1986).

The absence of leg protection devices was not a defect that rendered the motorcycle unreasonably dangerous. Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 701 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988).

Nor was the motorcycle in a defective condition unreasonably dangerous because defendants failed to warn the plaintiffs of the risk of harm of driving a motorcycle without crash bars or leg protection devices. Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 701 P.2d 628 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988).

A manufacturer of component parts may be held strictly liable for injuries as a result of design defects in the component when it is expected to and does reach the consumer without substantial change in condition. Union Supply Co. v. Pust, 583 P.2d 276 (1978); Shaw v. General Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

Dealership which sold truck that injured plaintiff was not a manufacturer and could not be held strictly liable for alleged defective and unreasonably dangerous condition in truck. Shaw v. General Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

The analysis for determining the liability of a manufacturer of component parts rests on whether the component parts or raw materials were unreasonably dangerous as a result of a failure to warn or other design defect existing at the time of delivery. Bond v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours and Co., 868 P.2d 1114 (Colo. App. 1993).

For liability of successor corporations under the Colorado products liability act, see Ruiz v. ExCello Corp., 653 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1982); Florum v. Elliott Mfg. Co., 629 F. Supp. 1145 (D. Colo. 1986), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 867 F.2d 570 (10th Cir.), reh'g denied, 879 F.2d 801 (10th Cir. 1989).

The Colorado Products Liability Act does not address the liability of successor manufacturers or corporations in relation to the product line theory. Johnston v. Amsted Industries, Inc., 830 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1992).

Product-line theory and continuity of enterprise theory exceptions to general rule of nonliability of successor corporation not adopted by court decision. Since such concepts existed prior to enactment of this act, their omission creates a negative inference that the general assembly considered these concepts and chose not to enact them. Florum v. Elliott Mfg. Co., 629 F. Supp. 1145 (D. Colo. 1986), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 867 F.2d 570 (10th Cir.), reh'g denied, 879 F.2d 801 (10th Cir. 1989); Johnson v. Amsted Indus., Inc., 830 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1992).

Sale of product to defendant not found. Borroel v. Lakeshore, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 354 (D. Colo. 1985).

The crashworthiness doctrine is adopted for this jurisdiction so that a motor vehicle manufacturer may be liable in negligence or strict liability when the design or manufacturing defect caused or enhanced the injuries sustained. Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988).

This doctrine requires motorcycle manufacturers to provide reasonable, cost-acceptable safety features to reduce the severity of injuries incurred in foreseeable motorcycle accidents. Camacho v. Honda Motor Co., Ltd., 741 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1987), cert. dismissed, 485 U.S. 901, 108 S. Ct. 1067, 99 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1988).

Installation of a windshield which includes preparation of component parts is a "product" prepared for sale to the consumer. Miller v. Solaglas California, Inc., 870 P.2d 559 (Colo. App. 1993).

Colorado will not hold a successor corporation liable under the product line theory of liability. The court will not follow the reasoning which holds a corporation liable merely because it is able to pay the plaintiff's damages. Johnston v. Amsted Industries, Inc., 830 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1992).

The qualified immunity granted to sellers and distributors is an affirmative defense that must be raised in the defendant's responsive pleading or answer. Stone's Farm Supply, Inc. v. Deacon, 805 P.2d 1109 (Colo. 1991).

Once seller who is not manufacturer invokes the protections of this section, the burden of proof shifts to the plaintiff to show that jurisdiction could not be obtained over the manufacturer. Deacon v. Am. Plant Food Corp., 782 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Stone's Farm Supply, Inc. v. Deacon, 805 P.2d 1109 (Colo. 1991).

When claim against manufacturer is barred by expiration of limitation period, not by lack of jurisdiction, claim may not be asserted against seller under subsection (2). Halter v. Waco Scaffolding & Equip. Co., 797 P.2d 790 (Colo. App. 1990).

Although the plaintiff's product liability suit against the manufacturer was automatically stayed by the manufacturer's filing of a petition in bankruptcy, the court retained jurisdiction over the product liability suit. Bond v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 868 P.2d 1114 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Frazier v. Kysor Indus. Corp., 43 Colo. App. 287, 607 P.2d 1296 (1979); Am. Safety Equip. Corp. v. Winkler, 640 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982); Shaw v. General Motors Corp., 727 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1986).

13-21-402.5. Product misuse. A product liability action may not be commenced or maintained against a manufacturer or seller of a product that caused injury, death, or property damage if, at the time the injury, death, or property damage occurred, the product was used in a manner or for a purpose other than that which was intended and which could not reasonably have been expected, and such misuse of the product was a cause of the injury, death, or property damage.

13-21-403. Presumptions. (1) In any product liability action, it shall be rebuttably presumed that the product which caused the injury, death, or property damage was not defective and that the manufacturer or seller thereof was not negligent if the product:

(a) Prior to sale by the manufacturer, conformed to the state of the art, as distinguished from industry standards, applicable to such product in existence at the time of sale; or

(b) Complied with, at the time of sale by the manufacturer, any applicable code, standard, or regulation adopted or promulgated by the United States or by this state, or by any agency of the United States or of this state.

(2) In like manner, noncompliance with a government code, standard, or regulation existing and in effect at the time of sale of the product by the manufacturer which contributed to the claim or injury shall create a rebuttable presumption that the product was defective or negligently manufactured.

(3) Ten years after a product is first sold for use or consumption, it shall be rebuttably presumed that the product was not defective and that the manufacturer or seller thereof was not negligent and that all warnings and instructions were proper and adequate.

(4) In a product liability action in which the court determines by a preponderance of the evidence that the necessary facts giving rise to a presumption have been established, the court shall instruct the jury concerning the presumption.

Presumption as to "unavoidably unsafe" product. The presumption in subsection (1)(a) does not apply in the case of a product which is claimed to be unavoidably unsafe. Belle Bonfils Mem. Blood Bank v. Hansen, 665 P.2d 118 (Colo. 1983).

Subsection (3) presumption inapplicable within 10 years of first sale. An injury complained of must have occurred within 10 years of the date the product was first sold for use or consumption, otherwise the rebuttable presumption in subsection (3) will be applicable. Fraleay v. Am. Cyanamid Co., 570 F. Supp. 497 (D. Colo. 1983).

The ten-year period runs from the sale of the individual product or item which causes the personal injury, death, or property damage, not from the first sale of the particular model to the public. Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., 707 P.2d 1027 (Colo. App. 1985).

For the purposes of subsection (3), the date that "a product is first sold for use or consumption" refers to the time when a product line of a particular design is first sold to the public and not the date on which the particular product was sold. Patterson v. Magna Am. Corporation, 754 P.2d 1385 (Colo. App. 1988) (holding contrary to Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., annotated above).

Implicit in subsection (3) is assumption that no other strict liability claims have been established against product during the ten-year period. Uptain v. Huntington Lab, Inc., 723 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1986).

Error to instruct jury concerning the presumption. Where the evidence demonstrated only that the manufacturer began manufacturing the model of garage opener involved in the incident in October, 1967, and that by its serial number, the product in this case was allegedly manufactured in September, 1968, the jury was without sufficient evidence reasonably to conclude by a preponderance of the evidence, that the basic facts giving rise to the presumption existed. Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., 707 P.2d 1027 (Colo. App. 1985).

This statute inapplicable to suit of subrogee since subrogor's cause of action accrued before the effective date of the statute. Union Insurance Co. v. RCA Corp., 724 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1986).

Presumption may be rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence to the contrary. Based upon language in Hawkinson v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc. (595 F. Supp. 1290 (D. Colo. 1984)) and Union Ins. Co. v. RCA, (724 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1986)), the trial court's application of the preponderance of the evidence standard was the proper standard to use when rebutting a presumption under this section. Tafoya v. Sears Roebuck and Co., 884 F.2d 1330 (10th Cir. 1989).

Expert testimony showing compliance with federal standards is admissible to show that the product is not defective. States v. R.D. Werner Co., 799 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1990).

Instruction not warranted. Where plaintiff has presented sufficient evidence to defeat a motion for a directed verdict, he has necessarily rebutted the presumption of subsection (3), and there is no reason for judge to issue instruction. Matz v. Mile Hi Concrete, Inc., 819 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 842 P.2d 198 (Colo. 1992) (decided prior to 2003 amendment); Perlmutter v. U.S. Gypsum Co., 4 F.3d 864 (10th Cir. 1993) (decided prior to 2003 amendment).

It was error to instruct the jury regarding the statutory presumption where warnings regarding concrete had been given within the last ten years, there was testimony that concrete had caused injuries within the last ten years, and there had been lawsuits during the last ten years alleging that concrete was unreasonably dangerous without warnings. Matz v. Mile Hi Concrete, Inc., 819 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 842 P.2d 198 (Colo. 1992) (decided prior to 2003 amendment).

Once a showing by a preponderance has been made concerning the facts giving rise to subsection (3)'s presumption, an instruction regarding the presumption must be given. Kokins v. Teleflex, Inc., 621 F.3d 1290 (10th Cir. 2010).

The presumption in subsection (3) is to be considered by the jury along with traditional forms of evidence, so long as the trial court determines by a preponderance of the evidence that the necessary facts giving rise to the presumption have been established. Kokins v. Teleflex, Inc., 621 F.3d 1290 (10th Cir. 2010).

Applied in Welch v. F.R. Stokes, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 1054 (D. Colo. 1983); Uptain v. Huntington Lab, Inc., 685 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1984); Hawkinson v. A.H. Robins Co., Inc., 595 F. Supp. 1290 (D. Colo. 1984).

13-21-404. Inadmissible evidence. In any product liability action, evidence of any scientific advancements in technical or other knowledge or techniques, or in design theory or philosophy, or in manufacturing or testing knowledge, techniques, or processes, or in labeling, warnings of risks or hazards, or instructions for the use of such product, where such advancements were discovered subsequent to the time the product in issue was sold by the manufacturer, shall not be admissible for any purpose other than to show a duty to warn.

ANNOTATION

Duty to warn. After a product involving human safety has been sold and dangerous defects in design have come to the manufacturer's attention, the manufacturer has a duty either to remedy such defects, or if a complete remedy is not feasible, to give users adequate warnings and instructions concerning methods for minimizing danger. Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., 707 P.2d 1027 (Colo. App. 1985).

Evidence of preaccident warning. Evidence that the defendant prepared and distributed warnings regarding the product prior to the accident is admissible to show that the defendant had breached its duty to warn, as such evidence is probative of defendant's preaccident knowledge of the danger inherent in the product, and the feasibility of giving a warning to make the product less dangerous. Downing v. Overhead Door Corp., 707 P.2d 1027 (Colo. App. 1985).

Evidence of postaccident design change admissible. Since a postaccident design change may bear directly on the issue of feasible alternatives to the defective design, evidence of such a change may be admitted. Roberts v. May, 41

Colo. App. 82, 583 P.2d 305 (1978) (cause of action arose before effective date of section).

Limitation on evidence of subsequent remedial measures applicable in diversity-based action and controls the application of Fed. Rule of Evid. 407 but not in this case since cause of action arose before effective date of section. Moe v. Avions Marcel Dassault-Breguet Aviation, 727 F.2d 917 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 853, 105 S. Ct. 176, 83 L. Ed.2d 110 (1984).

Evidence of alternative concepts implemented later that were known as possible at time of manufacture is admissible under this section. Meller v. Heil Co., 745 F.2d 1297 (10th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1206, 104 S. Ct. 2390, 81 L. Ed.2d 347 (1984).

Scientific advancements construed as new discoveries after original construction. Meller v. Heil Co., 745 F.2d 1297 (10th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1206, 104 S. Ct. 2390, 81 L. Ed.2d 347 (1984).

13-21-406. Comparative fault as measure of damages. (1) In any product liability action, the fault of the person suffering the harm, as well as the fault of all others who are parties to the action for causing the harm, shall be compared by the trier of fact in accordance with this section. The fault of the person suffering the harm shall not bar such person, or a party bringing an action on behalf of such a person, or his estate, or his heirs from recovering damages, but the award of damages to such person or the party bringing the action shall be diminished in proportion to the amount of causal fault attributed to the person suffering the harm. If any party is claiming damages for a decedent's wrongful death, the fault of the decedent, if any, shall be imputed to such party.

(2) Where comparative fault in any such action is an issue, the jury shall return special verdicts, or, in the absence of a jury, the court shall make special findings determining the percentage of fault attributable to each of the persons to whom some fault is attributed and determining the total amount of damages sustained by each of the claimants. The entry of judgment shall be made by the court, and no general verdict shall be returned by the jury.

(3) Repealed.

(4) The provisions of section 13-21-111 do not apply to any product liability action.

This section does not apply to the issue of liability; it merely permits the jury to consider fault in arriving at the damage figure. Welch v. F.R. Stokes, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 1054 (D. Colo. 1983); Perlmutter v. U.S. Gypsum Co., 4 F.3d 864 (10th Cir. 1993).

PRODUCT LIABILITY ACTIONS - FIREARMS AND AMMUNITION

13-21-501. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby declares that it shall be the policy in this state that product liability for injury, damage, or death caused by the discharge of a firearm or ammunition shall be based only upon an actual defect in the design or manufacture of such firearm or ammunition and not upon the inherent potential of a firearm or ammunition to cause injury, damage, or death when discharged.

(2) The general assembly further finds that it shall be the policy of this state that a civil action in tort for any remedy arising from physical or emotional injury, physical damage, or death caused by the discharge of a firearm or ammunition shall be based only upon an actual defect in the design or manufacture of such firearm or ammunition or upon the commission of a violation of a state or federal statute or regulation and not upon any other theory of liability. The general assembly also finds that under no theory shall a firearms or an ammunition manufacturer, importer, or dealer be held liable for the actions of another person.

13-21-502. "Product liability action" - definition. As used in this part 5, unless the context otherwise requires, "product liability action" means a claim for damages brought against the manufacturer, distributor, importer, or seller of firearms or ammunition alleging a defect in the design or manufacture of a firearm or ammunition.

Source: L. 86: Entire part added, p. 689, § 1, effective May 12.

13-21-503. Determination of defect - burden of proof. (1) In a product liability action, whether a firearm or ammunition shall be deemed defective in design shall not be based upon its potential to cause injury, damage, or death when discharged.

(2) The burden shall be on the plaintiff to prove, in addition to any other elements required to be proven:

(a) In a product liability action alleging a design defect, that the actual design was defective and that such defective design was the proximate cause of the injury, damage, or death;

(b) In a product liability action alleging a defect in manufacture, that the firearm or ammunition was manufactured at variance from its design and that such defective manufacture was the proximate cause of the injury, damage, or death.

(3) The inherent potential of a firearm or ammunition to cause injury, damage, or death when discharged shall not be a basis for a finding that the product is defective in design or manufacture.

Source: L. 86: Entire part added, p. 689, § 1, effective May 12.

13-21-504. Proximate cause. (1) In a product liability action, the actual discharge of a firearm or ammunition shall be the proximate cause of injury, damage, or death resulting from the use of such product and not the inherent capability of the product to cause injury, damage, or death.

(2) The manufacturer's, importer's, or distributor's placement of a firearm or ammunition in the stream of commerce, even if such placement is found to be foreseeable, shall not be conduct deemed sufficient to constitute the proximate cause of injury, damage, or death resulting from a third party's use of the product.

(3) In a product liability action concerning the accidental discharge of a firearm, the manufacturer's, importer's, or distributor's placement of the product in the stream of commerce shall not be conduct deemed sufficient to constitute proximate cause, even if accidental discharge is found to be foreseeable.

(4) In addition to any limitation of an action set forth in section 13-80-119, in a product liability action brought by the criminal, it shall be an absolute defense that the injury, damage, or death immediately resulted from the use of the firearm or ammunition during the commission of the criminal act which is a felony or a class 1 or class 2 misdemeanor.

13-21-504.5. Limitations on actions - award of fees. (1) A person or other public or private entity may not bring an action in tort, other than a product liability action, against a firearms or ammunition manufacturer, importer, or dealer for any remedy arising from physical or emotional injury, physical damage, or death caused by the discharge of a firearm or ammunition.

(2) In no type of action shall a firearms or ammunition manufacturer, importer, or dealer be held liable as a third party for the actions of another person.

(3) The court, upon the filing of a motion to dismiss pursuant to rule 12 (b) of the Colorado rules of civil procedure, shall dismiss any action brought against a firearms or ammunition manufacturer, importer, or dealer that the court determines is prohibited under subsection (1) or (2) of this section. Upon dismissal pursuant to this subsection (3), the court shall award reasonable attorney fees, in addition to costs, to each defendant named in the action.

(4) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, a firearms or ammunition manufacturer, importer, or dealer may be sued in tort for any damages proximately caused by an act of the manufacturer, importer, or dealer in violation of a state or federal statute or regulation. In any action brought pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (4), the plaintiff shall have the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant violated the state or federal statute or regulation.

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 1058, § 1, effective May 26.

13-21-505. Applicability of this part 5. Nothing contained in this part 5 shall be construed to bar recovery where the plaintiff proves that the proximate cause of the injury, damage, or death was a firearm or ammunition which contained a defect in manufacture causing it to be at variance from its design or which was designed so that it did not function in the manner reasonably expected by the ordinary consumer of such product.

(4) Two or more persons may join together in one action under section 13-21-804 if any portion of the period of illegal drug use of the individual illegal drug user whose actions resulted in the damages to one plaintiff overlaps with the period of illegal drug use of the individual illegal drug users whose actions resulted in the damages to every other plaintiff.

13-21-808. Effect of criminal drug conviction. (1) (a) A person against whom recovery is sought is estopped from denying participation in the marketing of illegal drugs if the person has a criminal conviction based on the same circumstances that are the basis for the claim for damages. Said conviction must be for other than mere possession of the specified illegal drug:

(I) That is a felony under the "Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970", 21 U.S.C. sec. 801, et seq.;

(II) Under section 18-18-405 or 18-18-406, C.R.S.; or

(III) That is a felony related to participation in the marketing of illegal drugs under the laws of another state.

(b) Such a conviction is also prima facie evidence of the person's participation in the marketing of illegal drugs during the two years preceding the date of an act giving rise to a conviction.

(2) The absence of a conviction of a person against whom recovery is sought does not bar an action against that person.

13-21-809. Prejudgment attachment and execution on judgments. (1) (a) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, a plaintiff under this part 8 may request an ex parte, prejudgment order of attachment under rule 102 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure against all of the assets of a defendant sufficient to satisfy a potential award. If attachment is issued, a defendant is entitled to an immediate hearing. The attachment may be removed if the defendant demonstrates that the assets will be available for a potential award or if the defendant posts a bond sufficient to cover a potential award.

(b) Prior to the payment of any judgment awarded pursuant to this part 8, payment shall first be made to satisfy any order or judgment entered against the defendant in a criminal proceeding for restitution, including any contributions to a crime victim compensation fund pursuant to article 4.1 of title 24, C.R.S., or to a victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund pursuant to article 4.2 of title 24, C.R.S.

(2) A person against whom a judgment has been rendered under this part 8 is not eligible to exempt any property, of whatever kind, from process to levy or process to execute on the judgment.

(3) Any assets sought to satisfy a judgment under this part 8 that have been named in a forfeiture action pending on the date that the attachment under subsection (1) of this section is sought or have been seized for forfeiture by any state or federal agency may not be attached or used to satisfy a judgment under this part 8 unless and until the assets have been released following conclusion of the forfeiture action or released by the agency that seized the assets.

13-21-810. Statute of limitations. (1) Except as otherwise provided by this section, a claim under this part 8 shall not be brought more than four years after the cause of action accrues. A cause of action accrues under this part 8 when a person who may recover has reason to know of the harm from illegal drug use that is the basis of the cause of action and has reason to know that the illegal drug use is the cause of the harm.

(2) For a defendant, the statute of limitations under this section does not expire until six months after the individual potential defendant is convicted of a criminal offense or as otherwise provided by law.

PART 10

LIABILITY FOR COMPUTER DISSEMINATION OF INDECENT MATERIAL TO CHILDREN

13-21-1001. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) "Child" means a person under eighteen years of age.
- (2) "Sexual contact", "sexual intrusion", and "sexual penetration" shall have the same meanings as set forth in section 18-3-401 (4), (5), and (6), C.R.S., respectively.

13-21-1002. Computer dissemination of indecent material to a child - prohibition.

- (1) A person commits computer dissemination of indecent material to a child when:
  - (a) Knowing the character and content of the communication which, in whole or in part, depicts actual or simulated nudity, or sexual conduct, as defined in section 19-1-103 (97), C.R.S., the person willfully uses a computer, computer network, telephone network, data network, or computer system allowing the input, output, examination, or transfer of computer data or computer programs from one computer to another or a text-messaging or instant-messaging system to initiate or engage in such communication with a person he or she believes to be a child; and
  - (b) By means of such communication the person importunes, invites, entices, or induces a person he or she believes to be a child to engage in sexual contact, sexual intrusion, or sexual penetration with the person, or to engage in a sexual performance or sexual conduct, as defined in section 19-1-103 (97), C.R.S., for the person's benefit.
- (2) Computer dissemination of indecent material to a child is prohibited. A person who violates the provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty as provided in section 13-21-1003.
- (3) It shall not be an affirmative defense in a civil action brought under this part 10 that the person the defendant believed to be a child in fact was not a child.

Source: L. 2003: Entire part added, p. 1879, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1)(a) amended, (HB 09-1132), ch. 341, p. 1792, § 1, effective July 1.

13-21-1003. Civil penalty - action for recovery - distribution of proceeds - attorney fees. (1) A person who is found in a civil action brought under this part 10 to have committed computer dissemination of indecent material to a child in violation of section 13-21-1002 shall forfeit and pay a civil penalty established pursuant to verdict or judgment.

(2) (a) An action to recover a civil penalty under this part 10 may be brought by any private individual. Venue for the action shall be proper in the district court for the county in which the defendant resides or maintains a principal place of business in this state, or in the county in which the defendant sent the communication, or in the county in which the recipient received the communication.

(b) The action shall be brought in the name of the person seeking recovery of the civil penalty.

(3) In determining the liability for or the amount of a civil penalty pursuant to this section, the court or jury shall consider the nature, circumstances, and gravity of the alleged violation and the alleged violator's degree of culpability, history of prior violations, criminal convictions, and level of cooperation with any investigation of the alleged violation.

(4) No action may be brought or maintained pursuant to this section without the written consent of the child's parent or guardian, which consent may be withdrawn at any time.

(5) A child alleged to be a victim of computer dissemination of indecent material to a child, or his or her parent or guardian, shall have the right to intervene and assume control of any case brought pursuant to this section.

(6) In a case in which the court awards a civil penalty pursuant to this section, the court shall order the distribution as follows:

(a) In a case brought by a child or other recipient of indecent material as described in subsection 13-21-1002 (1), one hundred percent to the plaintiff;

(b) In a case brought by a plaintiff other than a child or recipient of indecent material, forty percent to the plaintiff and sixty percent to the child or recipient;

(c) In a case initiated by a plaintiff and in which the child's parent or guardian has intervened, eighty percent to the child and twenty percent to the plaintiff.

(7) If a plaintiff is awarded a distribution of the civil penalty pursuant to subsection (6) of this section, the court shall award judgment to the plaintiff for the plaintiff's reasonable attorney fees and costs.

(8) Nothing in this part 10 shall be construed to limit or abrogate:

(a) A criminal action brought to prosecute an act described in the criminal laws of this state;

(b) Any right or cause of action that a person, on the person's own behalf or on behalf of another, may have;

(c) The ability to include in a civil action brought under this part 10 additional claims that are otherwise permitted by law to be brought in a civil action.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 759, § 1, effective May 17.

13-21-1102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that:

(a) Obesity and many other conditions that are detrimental to the health and well-being of individuals are frequently long-term manifestations of poor choices that are habitually made by those individuals;

(b) Despite commercial influences, individuals remain ultimately responsible for the choices they make regarding their body; and

(c) Excessive litigation restricts the wide range of choices otherwise available to individuals who consume products responsibly.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 759, § 1, effective May 17.

13-21-1103. Definitions. For the purposes of this part 11, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Claim" means any claim by or on behalf of a natural person and any derivative or other claim arising therefrom that is asserted by or on behalf of any other person.

(2) "Food" means any food or beverage, including chewing gum, intended for human consumption and articles used for components of any such food or beverage.

(3) "Injury caused by or likely to result from long-term consumption" means an injury or condition resulting or likely to result from the cumulative effect of consumption and not from a single instance of consumption.

(4) "Other person" means any individual, corporation, company, association, firm, partnership, society, joint-stock company, or any other entity, including any governmental entity or private attorney general.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 760, § 1, effective May 17.

13-21-1104. Actions against food providers that comply with applicable state and federal laws - exemptions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, a manufacturer, packer, distributor, carrier, holder, or seller of a food, or an association of one or more such entities, shall not be subject to civil liability for any claim arising from weight gain, obesity, a health condition associated with weight gain or obesity, or other injury caused by or likely to result from the long-term consumption of the food.

(2) The provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall not preclude civil liability of a manufacturer, packer, distributor, carrier, holder, or seller of a food in cases in which a claim of injury not related to weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with weight gain or obesity is based on a material violation of a composition, branding, or labeling standard prescribed by state or federal law and the claimed injury was actual and proximately caused by such violation.

13-21-1105. Pleading requirements. (1) In any action permitted under section 13-21-1104 (2), the plaintiff shall state the following with particularity in the complaint:

(a) The statute, regulation, or other provision of state or federal law that was allegedly violated;

(b) The facts that are alleged to constitute a material violation of such law; and

(c) The facts that are alleged to demonstrate that the material violation proximately caused actual injury to the plaintiff.

(2) In addition to the requirements set forth in subsection (1) of this section, the complaint shall state with particularity facts sufficient to support a reasonable inference that the violation was knowing and willful.

(3) For purposes of applying this part 11:

(a) The pleading requirements contained in this section shall be regarded as jurisdictional prerequisites to the bringing of an action and not merely procedural provisions; and

(b) The requirements of actual injury, knowledge and willfulness, and proximate cause as described in this section shall apply to all actions commenced under this part 11 notwithstanding any provision of law of another state that may be inconsistent with or contrary to such requirements.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part added, p. 760, § 1, effective May 17.

13-21-1106. Stay of proceedings pending motion to dismiss. (1) In any action brought against a manufacturer, packer, distributor, carrier, holder, or seller of a food for claims related to the long-term consumption of food, all proceedings including but not limited to discovery shall be stayed during the pendency of a motion to dismiss unless the court finds for good cause shown on the motion of any party that limited discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice to the movant.

(2) During a stay of discovery, unless otherwise ordered by the court, any party in the case, including any plaintiff and any defendant that has been properly served with the complaint, shall preserve all documents, data compilations including but not limited to electronically recorded data and electronically stored data, and tangible objects that are in the custody or control of such party and that are relevant to the allegations in the complaint as though a request for production of those documents and things had been served pursuant to court rule.

AGE OF COMPETENCE - TRANSPLANT AND TRANSFUSION LIMITATION

Law reviews: For article "Consent to Treatment and Access to Minors' Medical Records", see 17 Colo. Law. 1323 (1988).

13-22-101. Competence of persons eighteen years of age or older. (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law enacted or any judicial decision made prior to July 1, 1973, every person, otherwise competent, shall be deemed to be of full age at the age of eighteen years or older for the following specific purposes:

(a) To enter into any legal contractual obligation and to be legally bound thereby to the full extent as any other adult person; but such obligation shall not be considered a family expense of the parents of the person who entered into the contract, under section 14-6-110, C.R.S.;

(b) To manage his estate in the same manner as any other adult person. This section shall not apply to custodial property given or held under the terms of the "Colorado Uniform Transfers to Minors Act", article 50 of title 11, C.R.S., or property held for a protected person under the "Colorado Probate Code", article 14 of title 15, C.R.S., unless otherwise permitted in said articles;

(c) To sue and be sued in any action to the full extent as any other adult person in any of the courts of this state, without the necessity for a guardian ad litem or someone acting in his behalf;

(d) To make decisions in regard to his own body and the body of his issue, whether natural or adopted by such person, to the full extent allowed to any other adult person.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Age Requirements in Colorado: A Guide for Estate Planners", see 34 Colo. Law. 87 (August 2005).

Legislative intent. The title of this section and the relevant language of subsection (1)(c) do not suggest that the general assembly intended to change the age of majority for bringing actions on contract but not for personal actions. McKinney v. Armco Recreational Prods., Inc., 419 F. Supp. 464 (D. Colo. 1976).

The context of § 19-3-602 (3) requires that "minor" be defined as a person 18 years of age or older. Defining "minor" in § 19-3-602 (3) as a person under the age of 21 would be inconsistent with this section and the definitions of "child" and "adult" in the Colorado Children's Code. People ex rel. L.A.C., 97 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2004).

The definition of a "minor" in § 2-4-401 (6) is not applicable in § 19-3-602 (3) because "the context otherwise requires". People ex rel. L.A.C., 97 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2004).

Contract entered into by minor is not void but only voidable by the minor, and on reaching the age of 18 one is required either to disaffirm a contract made during minority within a reasonable time, or be bound thereby. Jones v. Dressel, 40 Colo. App. 459, 582 P.2d 1057 (1978), aff'd, 623 P.2d 370 (Colo. 1981).

As matter of public policy, courts have protected minors from improvident and imprudent contractual commitments by declaring that the contract of a minor is voidable at the election of the minor after he attains his majority. Jones v. Dressel, 623 P.2d 370 (Colo. 1981).

Parent's duty to support not abrogated. There is no general mandate in this section or §§ 19-1-103 (3) or 19-7-101 (2) (now § 19-6-101 (2)) which abrogates the duty of support a parent has toward his minor child until the age of 21 or emancipation. In re Weaver, 39 Colo. App. 523, 571 P.2d 307 (1977).

The "disability" of minority of a plaintiff in an employment discrimination action was prospectively removed on July 1, 1973, the effective date of this section, at which time he was 20 years old, and not May 5, 1974, when he turned 21. McKinney v. Armco Recreational Prods., Inc., 419 F. Supp. 464 (D. Colo. 1976).

Industrial commission not a court. A claimant before the industrial commission does not have to be regarded as an adult in determining benefits because the commission is a tribunal of the executive branch of government. Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 677 P.2d 344 (Colo. App. 1983) (decided prior to the abolition of the industrial commission in 1986).

Because child was not represented by guardian ad litem in initial paternity proceeding, she was not a party to the action for purposes of determining whether doctrine of res judicata and collateral estoppel barred a present paternity hearing. People in Interest of M.C., 895 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 914 P.2d 355 (Colo. 1996).

There is no conflict between the provisions of this section and § 13-81-103. This section addresses how a suit may be brought while the other section addresses how the statute of limitations applies to a suit. Elgin v. Bartlett, 994 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1999).

Applied in In re A.W., 637 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1981); Hesseltine v. United States, 538 F. Supp. 1003 (D. Colo. 1982).

13-22-102. Minors - consent for medical care and treatment for addiction to or use of drugs. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any physician licensed to practice in this state, upon consultation by a minor as a patient, with the consent of such minor patient, may examine, prescribe for, and treat such minor patient for addiction to or use of drugs without the consent of or notification to the parent, parents, or legal guardian of such minor patient, or to any other person having custody or decision-making responsibility with respect to the medical care of such minor patient. In any such case the physician or any person acting pursuant to the minor's direction shall incur no civil or criminal liability by reason of having made such examination or prescription or having rendered such treatment, but this immunity shall not apply to any negligent acts or omissions by the physician or any person acting pursuant to the physician's direction.

13-22-103. Minors - consent for medical, dental, and related care. (1) Except as otherwise provided in sections 18-1.3-407 (4.5), 18-6-101, 25-4-402, and 12-34-104, C.R.S., a minor eighteen years of age or older, or a minor fifteen years of age or older who is living separate and apart from his or her parent, parents, or legal guardian, with or without the consent of his or her parent, parents, or legal guardian, and is managing his or her own financial affairs, regardless of the source of his or her income, or any minor who has contracted a lawful marriage may give consent to organ or tissue donation or the furnishing of hospital, medical, dental, emergency health, and surgical care to himself or herself. Such consent shall not be subject to disaffirmance because of minority, and, when such consent is given, said minor shall have the same rights, powers, and obligations as if he or she had obtained majority. Consent to organ or tissue donation may be revoked pursuant to section 12-34-106, C.R.S.

(2) The consent of the parent, parents, or legal guardian of a minor described in subsection (1) of this section shall not be necessary in order to authorize organ or tissue donation or hospital, medical, dental, emergency health, or surgical care, and no hospital, physician, surgeon, dentist, trained emergency health care provider, or agent or employee thereof who, in good faith, relies on such a minor's consent shall be liable for civil damages for failure to secure the consent of such a minor's parent, parents, or legal guardian prior to rendering such care. The parent, parents, or legal guardian of a minor described in subsection (1) of this section shall not be liable to pay the charges for the care provided the minor on said minor's consent, unless said parent, parents, or legal guardian agrees to be so liable.

(3) In addition to the authority granted in section 25-4-1704 (2.5), C.R.S., any parent, including a parent who is a minor, may request and consent to organ or tissue donation of his or her child or the furnishing of hospital, medical, dental, emergency health, and surgical care to his or her child or ward. The consent of a minor parent shall not be subject to disaffirmance because of minority, and, when such consent is given, said minor parent has the same rights, powers, and obligations as if he or she were of legal age.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Involuntary Sterilization of Retarded Minors in Colorado", see 11 Colo. Law. 421 (1982).

Sterilization is special case. While this section empowers parents to consent to normal medical procedures on their minor offspring, sterilization is a special case which requires more than parental consent. A court, using uniform criteria, must be the ultimate arbiter. In re A.W., 637 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1981).

13-22-103.5. Minors - consent for medical care - pregnancy. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a pregnant minor may authorize prenatal, delivery, and post-delivery medical care for herself related to the intended live birth of a child.

13-22-104. Transplants and transfusions generally - declaration of policy - limit on liability of minors. (1) The availability of scientific knowledge, skills, and materials for the transplantation, injection, transfusion, or transfer of human tissue, organs, blood, or components thereof is important to the health and welfare of the people of this state. Equally important is the duty of those performing such service or providing such materials to exercise due care under the attending circumstances to the end that those receiving health care will benefit and adverse results therefrom will be minimized by the use of available and proven scientific safeguards. The imposition of legal liability without fault upon the persons and organizations engaged in such scientific procedures may inhibit the exercise of sound medical judgment and restrict the availability of important scientific knowledge, skills, and materials. It is, therefore, the public policy of this state to promote the health and welfare of the people by emphasizing the importance of exercising due care, and by limiting the legal liability arising out of such scientific procedures to instances of negligence or willful misconduct.

(2) The donation, whether for or without valuable consideration, the acquisition, preparation, transplantation, injection, or transfusion of any human tissue, organ, blood, or component thereof for or to a human being is the performance of a medical service and does not, in any way, constitute a sale. No physician, surgeon, hospital, blood bank, tissue bank, or other person or entity who donates, obtains, prepares, transplants, injects, transfuses, or otherwise transfers, or who assists or participates in donating, obtaining, preparing, transplanting, injecting, transfusing, or transferring any tissue, organ, blood, or component thereof from one or more human beings, living or dead, to another living human being for the purpose of therapy or transplantation needed by him for his health or welfare shall be liable for any damages of any kind or description directly or indirectly caused by or resulting from any such activity; except that each such person or entity remains liable for his or its own negligence or willful misconduct.

(3) Any provision of the law to the contrary notwithstanding, any minor who has reached the age of eighteen years may give consent to the donation of his or her blood, organs, or tissue and to the penetration of tissue which is necessary to accomplish such donation. Such consent shall not be subject to disaffirmance because of minority. The consent of the parent, parents, or legal guardian of such a minor shall not be necessary in order to authorize such donation of blood, organs, or tissue and penetration of tissue.

(4) Any provision of the law to the contrary notwithstanding, a minor who is at least sixteen years of age but is less than eighteen years of age may give consent to the donation of his or her blood and to the penetration of tissue that is necessary to accomplish the donation, so long as the minor's parent or legal guardian consents to authorize the donation of the minor's blood and the penetration of tissue. A minor's consent shall not be subject to disaffirmance because of minority.

For comment, "Liability Without Fault and the Aids Plague Compel a New Approach to Cases of Transfusion-Transmitted Disease", see 61 U. Colo. L. Rev. 81 (1990).

This section does not have retroactive application. Belle Bonfils Mem. Blood Bank v. Hansen, 665 P.2d 118 (Colo. 1983).

This section affirms that general negligence standards, not product liability standards, shall apply in determining the liability of a blood bank supplying blood tainted with the AIDS virus. Quintana v. United Blood Servs., 811 P.2d 424 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 827 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1992).

This section expresses a twofold purpose. One purpose is to foster the development of medical services and to make those services more available to health care recipients by relieving blood banks from unduly rigid standards of legal liability. The other purpose is to minimize the risk of harm to health care recipients by requiring a blood bank to exercise due care by utilizing "available and proven scientific safeguards" in its operations. United Blood Servs. v. Quintana, 827 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1992).

The implantation of an embryo is not a sale of a good or product; rather it constitutes the provision of a medical service pursuant to this section. Am. Econ. Ins. Co. v. Schoolcraft, 551 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (D. Colo. 2007).

The statutory scheme of this section clearly contemplates that a blood bank's conduct in procuring and processing blood is to be measured by a professional standard of care because subsection (2) expressly categorizes the acquisition, preparation, and transfer of human blood or its components for medical transfusion as the performance of a medical service. United Blood Servs. v. Quintana, 827 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1992).

The trial court erred in excluding expert testimony on the unreasonably deficient character of the blood banking community's screening and testing procedures. The trial court, after correctly ruling that a professional standard of conduct applied, erroneously applied that standard in a manner that effectively precluded the plaintiffs from establishing that the national blood banking community's standard of care was itself unreasonably deficient in not incorporating available safeguards designed to provide substantially more protection against the risk of infecting a transfusion recipient with AIDS. United Blood Servs. v. Quintana, 827 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1992).

13-22-105. Minors - birth control services rendered by physicians. Except as otherwise provided in part 1 of article 6 of title 18, C.R.S., birth control procedures, supplies, and information may be furnished by physicians licensed under article 36 of title 12, C.R.S., to any minor who is pregnant, or a parent, or married, or who has the consent of his parent or legal guardian, or who has been referred for such services by another physician, a clergyman, a family planning clinic, a school or institution of higher education, or any agency or instrumentality of this state or any subdivision thereof, or who requests and is in need of birth control procedures, supplies, or information.

13-22-106. Minors - consent - sexual offense. (1) Any physician licensed to practice in this state, upon consultation by a minor as a patient who indicates that he or she was the victim of a sexual offense pursuant to part 4 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., with the consent of such minor patient, may perform customary and necessary examinations to obtain evidence of the sexual offense and may prescribe for and treat the patient for any immediate condition caused by the sexual offense.

(2) (a) Prior to examining or treating a minor pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, a physician shall make a reasonable effort to notify the parent, parents, legal guardian, or any other person having custody or decision-making responsibility with respect to the medical care of such minor of the sexual offense.

(b) So long as the minor has consented, the physician may examine and treat the minor as provided for in subsection (1) of this section whether or not the physician has been able to make the notification provided for in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) and whether or not those notified have given consent, but, if the person having custody or decision-making responsibility with respect to the minor's medical care objects to treatment, then the physician shall proceed under the provisions of part 3 of article 3 of title 19, C.R.S.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to relieve any person from the requirements of the provisions of part 3 of article 3 of title 19, C.R.S., concerning child abuse.

(3) If a minor is unable to give the consent required by this section by reason of age or mental or physical condition and it appears that the minor has been the victim of a sexual assault, the physician shall not examine or treat the minor as provided in subsection (1) of this section but shall proceed under the provisions of part 3 of article 3 of title 19, C.R.S.

(4) A physician shall incur no civil or criminal liability by reason of having examined or treated a minor pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, but this immunity shall not apply to any negligent acts or omissions by the physician.

13-22-107. Legislative declaration - definitions - children - waiver by parent of prospective negligence claims. (1) (a) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares it is the public policy of this state that:

(I) Children of this state should have the maximum opportunity to participate in sporting, recreational, educational, and other activities where certain risks may exist;

(II) Public, private, and non-profit entities providing these essential activities to children in Colorado need a measure of protection against lawsuits, and without the measure of protection these entities may be unwilling or unable to provide the activities;

(III) Parents have a fundamental right and responsibility to make decisions concerning the care, custody, and control of their children. The law has long presumed that parents act in the best interest of their children.

(IV) Parents make conscious choices every day on behalf of their children concerning the risks and benefits of participation in activities that may involve risk;

(V) These are proper parental choices on behalf of children that should not be ignored. So long as the decision is voluntary and informed, the decision should be given the same dignity as decisions regarding schooling, medical treatment, and religious education; and

(VI) It is the intent of the general assembly to encourage the affordability and availability of youth activities in this state by permitting a parent of a child to release a prospective negligence claim of the child against certain persons and entities involved in providing the opportunity to participate in the activities.

(b) The general assembly further declares that the Colorado supreme court's holding in case number 00SC885, 48 P.3d 1229 (Colo. 2002), has not been adopted by the general assembly and does not reflect the intent of the general assembly or the public policy of this state.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Child" means a person under eighteen years of age.

(b) For purposes of this section only, "parent" means a parent, as defined in section 19-1-103 (82), C.R.S., a person who has guardianship of the person, as defined in section 19-1-103 (60), C.R.S., a person who has legal custody, as defined in section 19-1-103 (73), C.R.S., a legal representative, as defined in section 19-1-103 (73.5), C.R.S., a physical custodian, as defined in section 19-1-103 (84), C.R.S., or a responsible person, as defined in section 19-1-103 (94), C.R.S.

(3) A parent of a child may, on behalf of the child, release or waive the child's prospective claim for negligence.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit a parent acting on behalf of his or her child to waive the child's prospective claim against a person or entity for a willful and wanton act or omission, a reckless act or omission, or a grossly negligent act or omission.

(2) A person has notice if the person has knowledge of the notice or has received notice.

13-22-203. Applicability. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, this part 2 shall govern an agreement to arbitrate made on or after August 4, 2004.

(2) This part 2 shall govern an agreement to arbitrate made before August 4, 2004, if all parties to the agreement or to the arbitration proceeding so agree in a record.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-222 as it existed prior to 2004.

13-22-204. Effect of agreement to arbitrate - nonwaivable provisions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, a party to an agreement to arbitrate or to an arbitration proceeding may waive, or, the parties may vary the effect of, the requirements of this part 2 to the extent permitted by law.

(2) Before a controversy arises that is subject to an agreement to arbitrate, a party to the agreement may not:

(a) Waive or agree to vary the effect of the requirements of section 13-22-205 (1), 13-22-206 (1), 13-22-208, 13-22-217 (1) or (2), 13-22-226, or 13-22-228;

(b) Agree to unreasonably restrict the right under section 13-22-209 to notice of the initiation of an arbitration proceeding;

(c) Agree to unreasonably restrict the right under section 13-22-212 to disclosure of any facts by a neutral arbitrator; or

(d) Waive the right under section 13-22-216 of a party to an agreement to arbitrate to be represented by a lawyer at any proceeding or hearing under this part 2, but an employer and a labor organization may waive the right to representation by a lawyer in a labor arbitration.

(3) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), a party to an agreement to arbitrate or arbitration proceeding may not waive, or the parties may not vary the effect of, the requirements of this section or section 13-22-203 (1), 13-22-207, 13-22-214, 13-22-218, 13-22-220 (4) or (5), 13-22-222, 13-22-223, 13-22-224, 13-22-225 (1) or (2), or 13-22-229.

(b) If the parties to an agreement to arbitrate or to an arbitration proceeding are a government, governmental subdivision, governmental agency, governmental instrumental-ity, public corporation, or any commercial entity, the parties may waive the requirements of section 13-22-223 except if the award was procured by corruption or fraud.

(2) Unless a civil action involving the agreement to arbitrate is pending, notice of an initial motion to the court under this part 2 must be served in the manner provided by law for the service of a summons in a civil action. Otherwise, notice of the motion must be given in the manner provided by law or court rule for serving motions in pending cases.

(3) An arbitrator shall decide whether a condition precedent to arbitrability has been fulfilled and whether a contract containing a valid agreement to arbitrate is enforceable.

(4) If a party to a judicial proceeding challenges the existence of, or claims that a controversy is not subject to, an agreement to arbitrate, the arbitration proceeding may continue pending final resolution of the issue by the court, unless the court otherwise orders.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-206 is similar to § 13-22-203 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Colorado's arbitration act encompasses all forms of contract and contract conditions that expressly or impliedly include a duty to arbitrate. Lane v. Urgitus, 145 P.3d 672 (Colo. 2006).

An agreement to arbitrate can take the form of previously executed consents to arbitrate. Where licensed real estate brokers signed membership agreements consenting to arbitration with other members of the professional organization should disputes arise among themselves, and where those brokers were members of the organization at the time they entered into the alleged referral fee agreement that led to the dispute, their previously executed consents to arbitrate constituted an implied condition of the alleged referral fee agreement enforceable under Colorado's arbitration act. Lane v. Urgitus, 145 P.3d 672 (Colo. 2006).

Binding grievance arbitration of public employment agreement disputes. Binding grievance arbitration of disputes arising under the terms of a public employment collective bargaining agreement is not per se unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative authority. City & County of Denver v. Denver Firefighters Local 858, 663 P.2d 1032 (Colo. 1983).

Parties may expand an original contract for arbitration by agreeing to submit other matters of dispute to arbitration. Cabus v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1982).

Once a controversy is submitted, it remains before the arbitrator until an award is rendered unless the parties mutually agree to withdraw it. Cabus v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1982).

That an issue was voluntarily submitted or submitted by an agreement expanding the original scope of the arbitrator's jurisdiction does not alter the fact that, once agreed upon, it becomes part of a binding contract to arbitrate. Cabus v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1982).

Parties' agreement for binding Rabbinical arbitration in a legal separation proceeding that was later dismissed remained valid and applicable to the subsequent dissolution of marriage proceeding between the same parties where the agreement stated that the parties would submit any future issues that might arise relating to the marriage to the "Beth Din" and where the agreement contained no qualifying or limiting language indicating that the parties intended to link the agreement to any particular proceeding. In re Popack, 998 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 2000).

Arbitration of claim that underlying contract induced by fraud. Where a party does not contest the validity of the arbitration clause itself, the statutory exception contained in this section does not preclude arbitration of the claim that underlying contract was induced by fraud. Nat'l Camera, Inc. v. Love, 644 P.2d 94 (Colo. App. 1982).

Former § 13-22-204(1) contemplates that the trial court will have the authority to consider one issue: The existence of the agreement to arbitrate. All other issues, including challenges to the enforceability of the agreement under former § 13-22-203, implicitly are the province of the arbitrator. Furthermore, the trial court's authority is limited to specific challenges to the agreement to arbitrate, not the broader contract containing the arbitration provision. A fraudulent inducement claim, if it is to be considered by the trial court, must be directed specifically to fraud inducing the plaintiff to agree to arbitrate. Broader allegations of fraudulent inducement must be resolved in arbitration. Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Allegations of fraudulent inducement directed specifically to an arbitration provision in a contract must be decided by a trial court; allegations of fraudulent inducement directed more broadly to the contract as a whole must be decided by the arbitrator. Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment); J.A. Walker Co. v. Cambria Corp., 159 P.3d 126 (Colo. 2007).

Allegation of fraudulent inducement not directed specifically to lease's arbitration provision is an issue to be decided by the arbitrator and not the trial court. Ingold v. AIMCO/

Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Despite the expiration of the contract, an arbitration clause survives as to disputes that arise under the contract. Shams v. Howard, 165 P.3d 876 (Colo. App. 2007).

The Uniform Arbitration Act cannot breathe life into an arbitration agreement that the Wage Claim Act deems void. The compensation provisions of an employment contract of a Colorado employee that mandated arbitration of disputes concerning payment of his commission was void as it waived his substantive and procedural rights under the Wage Claim Act. Lambdin v. District Ct. of Arapahoe County, 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

For a discussion of whether certain claims were within the scope of an arbitration clause in an employment agreement, see Austin v. U S West, Inc., 926 P.2d 181 (Colo. App. 1996).

Prior to ordering arbitration, the court was required to determine whether the arbitration clause was enforceable and whether the plaintiff had sufficient mental capacity to enter into the contract. The doctrine of separability applies, and the court must resolve any challenge to an arbitration provision before an arbitrator can decide any challenge to the entire contract. However, there is a difference between questions about the contract's validity and whether any agreement was ever concluded, and a mental capacity defense requires the court to make a determination whether an agreement exists. Therefore, the mental capacity defense is exempt from the separability inquiry under the Colorado Uniform Arbitration Act. Estate of Grimm v. Evans, 251 P.3d 574 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in Cabs, Inc. v. Delivery Drivers Local 435, 39 Colo. App. 241, 566 P.2d 1078 (1977).

13-22-207. Motion to compel or stay arbitration. (1) On the motion of a person showing an agreement to arbitrate and alleging another person's refusal to arbitrate pursuant to the agreement:

(a) If the refusing party does not appear or does not oppose the motion, the court shall order the parties to arbitrate; and

(b) If the refusing party opposes the motion, the court shall proceed summarily to decide the issue and order the parties to arbitrate unless it finds that there is no enforceable agreement to arbitrate.

(2) On the motion of a person alleging that an arbitration proceeding has been initiated or threatened but that there is not an agreement to arbitrate, the court shall proceed summarily to decide the issue. If the court finds that there is an enforceable agreement to arbitrate, it shall order the parties to arbitrate.

(3) If the court finds that there is no enforceable agreement, it may not invoke the provisions of subsection (1) or (2) of this section to order the parties to arbitrate.

(4) The court may not refuse to order arbitration because the claim subject to arbitration lacks merit or because one or more grounds for the claim have not been established.

(5) If a proceeding involving a claim referable to arbitration under an alleged agreement to arbitrate is pending in court, a motion made under this section shall be filed with that court. Otherwise, a motion made under this section may be filed in any court pursuant to section 13-22-227.

(6) If a party files a motion with the court to order arbitration, the court on just terms shall stay any judicial proceeding that involves a claim alleged to be subject to the arbitration until the ordering court renders a final decision under this section.

(7) If the court orders arbitration, the court on just terms shall stay any judicial proceeding that involves a claim subject to the arbitration. If a claim subject to the arbitration is severable, the court may limit the stay to that claim.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-207 is similar to § 13-22-204 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

When arbitration proceedings stayed. A court is empowered to stay arbitration proceedings upon a showing that there is no agreement to arbitrate; and where it is apparent from the language of the contract that the issue sought to be arbitrated lies clearly beyond the scope of the arbitration clause, a court cannot order arbitration. Cabs, Inc. v. Delivery Drivers Local 435, 39 Colo. App. 241, 566 P.2d 1078 (1977).

This section gives the court authority to stay an arbitration only if there is no arbitration agreement or it appears from the arbitration agreement that the claim sought to be arbitrated is beyond the scope of the arbitration clause. Sopko v. Clear Channel Satellite Servs., Inc., 151 P.3d 663 (Colo. App. 2006).

Where, however, there is an agreement to arbitrate and there is a reasonable basis for construing the agreement in support of arbitrability of the claim, the scope of the arbitration agreement must be determined by the arbitrator, not by the court. Sopko v. Clear Channel Satellite Servs., Inc., 151 P.3d 663 (Colo. App. 2006).

Scope of arbitration to be determined by arbitrator. Where there is a reasonable basis for construing the agreement in support of arbitrability, the legislative policy underlying the article requires that the scope of the arbitration be determined by the arbitrator. Cabs, Inc. v. Delivery Drivers Local 435, 39 Colo. App. 241, 566 P.2d 1078 (1977).

Order compelling arbitration not appealable. An order compelling parties to arbitrate is not a final appealable order. Frontier Materials, Inc. v. City of Boulder, 663 P.2d 1065 (Colo. App. 1983).

Uniform Arbitration Act authorizes party to arbitration agreement to apply to district court for order compelling arbitration. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Proper procedure to stay action pending arbitration. A stay of the proceeding preserves plaintiff's right to foreclose on its mechanic's lien if it prevails in arbitration. Mountain Plains Constructors v. Torrez, 785 P.2d 928 (Colo. 1990).

Party's unsuccessful attempt to stay the arbitration of a contract dispute does not mean that the party is estopped from obtaining clarification of issues which may be arbitrated. Associated Natural Gas v. Nordic Petro., 807 P.2d 1195 (Colo. App. 1990).

A trial court has limited power to preserve the status quo even though there is a statutory requirement that a pending civil action be stayed pending an arbitrator's decision. Hughley v. Rocky Mountain HMO, Inc., 927 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1996).

Appealable order. A denial of a motion to compel arbitration is an appealable order. However, an immediate appeal is permissive and not mandatory. Therefore, an order denying a motion to compel arbitration may also be appealed after final judgment. Mountain Plains Constructors v. Torrez, 785 P.2d 928 (Colo. 1990).

The phrase "proceed to summarily decide the issue" in subsection (1)(b) requires that a trial court considering a fraudulent inducement challenge to an arbitration agreement should begin by considering the undisputed affidavits, pleadings, discovery, and stipulations. If the material facts are undisputed, trial court can resolve the challenge on the record before it. J.A. Walker Co. v. Cambria Corp., 159 P.3d 126 (Colo. 2007).

If, however, the material facts are in dispute, the trial court should proceed expeditiously in holding an evidentiary hearing to consider the disputed facts and resolve the party's challenge to the arbitration agreement. J.A. Walker Co. v. Cambria Corp., 159 P.3d 126 (Colo. 2007).

Parties may enter into an enforceable agreement to arbitrate notwithstanding the absence of their signatures. Trial court should hold an evidentiary hearing to consider disputed facts and resolve the challenge regarding the existence of the alleged arbitration agreement. E-21 Eng'g v. Steve Stock & Assocs., 252 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2010).

Once the court determines that a valid, enforceable arbitration agreement exists, the court is divested of jurisdiction over matters submitted to arbitration and the proper procedure is to stay the proceedings until arbitration is completed. An order granting a motion to stay the proceedings is an interlocutory order that is not immediately appealable. Lane v. Urgitus, 145 P.3d 672 (Colo. 2006).

Arbitration is a favored means of dispute resolution and any doubts about the scope of an arbitration clause should be resolved in favor of arbitration. Gergel v. High View Homes, LLC, 996 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1999); Lane v. Urgitus, 145 P.3d 672 (Colo. 2006).

A court may refuse to compel arbitration upon application by a party showing an agreement to arbitrate, only if there is no agreement to arbitrate or if the issue sought to be arbitrated is clearly beyond the scope of the arbitration provision. Shorey v. Jefferson County Sch. District No. R-1, 807 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1990); Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993); Gergel v. High View Homes, LLC, 996 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1999); Eagle Ridge

Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

In resolving a motion to compel arbitration the court must inquire whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate between the parties to the action, and whether the issues being disputed are within the scope of that agreement. Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993).

In considering a motion to compel arbitration, the court must first determine whether a valid agreement to arbitrate exists. Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

Intertwining doctrine no longer good law in Colorado. Claims that are subject to an arbitration agreement must be arbitrated regardless of their joinder with non-arbitrable claims. Claims that are not subject to arbitration should be stayed or proceed separately in litigation based on the discretion of the trial court. Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007) (overruling Sandefer v. District Court, 635 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981)).

Intertwining doctrine does not prevent a court from ordering arbitration where all claims to be decided fall within the scope of an arbitration clause. Gergel v. High View Homes, LLC, 996 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1999); Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

When facts and issues are intertwined, if some issues require arbitration and others do not, consideration of the interests of judicial economy, time, and expense leads to the conclusion that all the issues should be resolved by litigation. Atmel Corp. v. Vitesse Semiconductor Corp., 30 P.3d 789 (Colo. App. 2001), overruled in Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007); Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004), overruled in Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007).

Determining whether the intertwining doctrine applies requires determinations as to whether any claims fall under the arbitration provision at issue and whether any nonarbitrable claims are so inextricably intertwined with the arbitrable claims as to prevent severance. Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004), overruled in Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007).

Intertwining doctrine does not prevent a court from ordering arbitration where all claims to be decided fall within the scope of an arbitration clause. Gergel v. High View Homes, LLC, 996 P.2d 233 (Colo. App. 1999); Eagle

Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

The right to compel arbitration is derived from contract. Unless the intent of the parties to the contract is to bring a nonparty within the scope of an arbitration agreement, one who is not a party to the contract lacks standing to compel, or to be subject to, arbitration. Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993); Parker v. Center for Creative Leadership, 15 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2000); Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

In determining whether the parties agreed or intended to submit an issue to arbitration, the ordinary principles of contract interpretation apply. Eagle Ridge Condo. Ass'n v. Metro. Builders, Inc., 98 P.3d 915 (Colo. App. 2004).

In determining the scope of an arbitration clause, the court must strive to ascertain and give effect to the mutual intent of the parties and must consider the subject matter and purposes to be accomplished by the agreement. Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993); Hughley v. Rocky Mountain HMO, Inc., 910 P.2d 30 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 927 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1996); Parker v. Center for Creative Leadership, 15 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2000).

When arbitration agreement covers interpretation of contract terms, arbitrator, not court, empowered to decide whether dispute falls within scope of arbitration provision. BRM Constr., Inc. v. Marais Gaylord, L.L.C., 181 P.3d 283 (Colo. App. 2007).

If a party asserts that the entire contract is illegal, the court must determine this threshold issue first. R.P.T. v. Innovative Commc'ns, 917 P.2d 340 (Colo. App. 1996).

Allegations of fraudulent inducement directed specifically to an arbitration provision in a contract must be decided by a trial court; allegations of fraudulent inducement directed more broadly to the contract as a whole must be decided by the arbitrator. Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Applied in Paul Mullins Constr. Co. v. Alspaugh, 628 P.2d 113 (Colo. App. 1980); Weedon v. United States, 509 F. Supp. 1052 (D. Colo. 1981); Sandefer v. District Court, 635 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981); City & County of Denver v. Denver Firefighters Local 858, 663 P.2d 1032 (Colo. 1983); Lawrence St. Part. v. Lawrence St. Vent., 786 P.2d 508 (Colo. App. 1989); Shorey v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. R-1, 807 P.2d 1181 (Colo. App. 1990); Lane v. Urgitus, 145 P.3d 672 (Colo. 2006).

13-22-208. Provisional remedies. (1) Before an arbitrator is appointed and is authorized and able to act, the court, upon motion of a party to an arbitration proceeding and for good cause shown, may enter an order for provisional remedies to protect the effectiveness of the arbitration proceeding to the same extent and under the same conditions as if the controversy were the subject of a civil action.

(2) After an arbitrator is appointed and is authorized and able to act:

(a) The arbitrator may issue such orders for provisional remedies, including interim awards, as the arbitrator finds necessary to protect the effectiveness of the arbitration proceeding and to promote the fair and expeditious resolution of the controversy, to the same extent and under the same conditions as if the controversy were the subject of a civil action; and

(b) A party to an arbitration proceeding may request the court to issue an order for a provisional remedy only if the matter is urgent and the arbitrator is not able to act timely or the arbitrator cannot provide an adequate remedy.

(3) A party does not waive a right of arbitration by making a motion under subsection (1) or (2) of this section.

13-22-209. Initiation of arbitration. (1) A person may initiate an arbitration proceeding by giving notice in a record to the other parties to the agreement to arbitrate in the agreed manner between the parties or, in the absence of an agreement, by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested and obtained, or by service as authorized by law for the commencement of a civil action. The notice shall describe the nature of the controversy and the remedy sought.

(2) Unless a person objects to the lack of notice or the insufficiency of notice under section 13-22-215 (3) not later than the beginning of the arbitration hearing, a person who appears at the arbitration hearing waives any objection to the lack of notice or insufficiency of notice.

13-22-210. Consolidation of separate arbitration proceedings. (1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section, upon the motion of a party to an agreement to arbitrate or to an arbitration proceeding, the court may order consolidation of separate arbitration proceedings as to all or some of the claims if all parties in the arbitration proceedings consent and:

(a) There are separate agreements to arbitrate or separate arbitration proceedings between or among the same persons or one of the persons is a party to a separate agreement to arbitrate or a separate arbitration proceeding with a third person;

(b) The claims subject to the agreements to arbitrate arise in substantial part from the same transaction or series of related transactions;

(c) The existence of a common issue of law or fact creates the possibility of conflicting decisions in the separate arbitration proceedings; and

(d) Prejudice resulting from a failure to consolidate is not outweighed by the risk of undue delay or prejudice to the rights of or hardship to parties opposing consolidation.

(2) The court may order consolidation of separate arbitration proceedings as to some claims and allow other claims to be resolved in separate arbitration proceedings.

(3) The court may not order consolidation of the claims of a party to an agreement to arbitrate if the agreement prohibits consolidation.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part R&RE, p. 1722, § 1, effective August 4.

13-22-211. Appointment of arbitrator - service as a neutral arbitrator. (1) If the parties to an agreement to arbitrate agree on a method for appointing an arbitrator, the method shall be followed unless the method fails. If the parties have not agreed on a method, or the agreed method fails, or an appointed arbitrator fails to act or is unable to act and a successor has not been appointed, the court, on the motion of a party to the arbitration proceeding, shall appoint the arbitrator. An arbitrator appointed pursuant to this subsection

(1) shall have all the powers of an arbitrator designated in an agreement to arbitrate or appointed pursuant to an agreed method.

(2) An individual who has a known, direct, and material interest in the outcome of the arbitration proceeding or a known, existing, and substantial relationship with a party may not serve as an arbitrator if the agreement requires the arbitrator to be neutral.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-205 as it existed prior to 2004.

13-22-212. Disclosure by arbitrator. (1) Before accepting an appointment, an individual who is requested to serve as an arbitrator, after making a reasonable inquiry, shall disclose to all parties to the agreement to arbitrate and arbitration proceeding and to any other arbitrators any known facts that a reasonable person would consider likely to affect the impartiality of the arbitrator in the arbitration proceeding, including:

(a) A financial or personal interest in the outcome of the arbitration proceeding; and

(b) A current or previous relationship with any of the parties to the agreement to arbitrate or the arbitration proceeding, their counsel or representatives, a witness, or another arbitrator.

(2) An arbitrator shall have a continuing obligation to disclose to all parties to the agreement to arbitrate and to the arbitration proceeding and to any other arbitrators any facts that the arbitrator learns after accepting appointment that a reasonable person would consider likely to affect the impartiality of the arbitrator.

(3) If an arbitrator discloses a fact required to be disclosed by subsection (1) or (2) of this section and a party timely objects to the appointment or continued service of the arbitrator based upon the fact disclosed, the objection may be a ground under section 13-22-223 (1) (b) for vacating an award made by an arbitrator.

(4) If the arbitrator does not disclose a fact as required by subsection (1) or (2) of this section, upon timely objection by a party, the court may vacate an award under section 13-22-223 (1) (b).

(5) An arbitrator appointed as a neutral arbitrator who does not disclose a known, direct, and material interest in the outcome of the arbitration proceeding or a known, existing, and substantial relationship with a party shall be presumed to act with evident partiality under section 13-22-223 (1) (b).

(6) If the parties to an arbitration proceeding agree to the procedures of an arbitration organization or any other procedures for challenges to arbitrators before an award is made, substantial compliance with those procedures is a condition precedent to a motion to vacate an award on that ground under section 13-22-223 (1) (b).

13-22-213. Action by majority. If there is more than one arbitrator, the powers of an arbitrator shall be exercised by a majority of the arbitrators, except that all of the arbitrators shall conduct the hearing under the provisions of section 13-22-215 (3).

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-205 as it existed prior to 2004.

13-22-214. Immunity of arbitrator - competency to testify - attorney fees and costs.

(1) An arbitrator or an arbitration organization acting in the capacity of an arbitrator is immune from civil liability to the same extent as a judge of a court of this state acting in a judicial capacity.

(2) The immunity afforded by this section is in addition to, and not in lieu of, or in derogation of, immunity conferred under any other provision of law.

(3) The failure of an arbitrator to make a disclosure required by section 13-22-212 shall not cause any loss of immunity that is granted under this section.

(4) (a) In a judicial proceeding, administrative proceeding, or other similar proceeding, an arbitrator or representative of an arbitration organization shall not be competent to testify and may not be required to produce records as to any statement, conduct, decision, or ruling that occurred during the arbitration proceeding, to the same extent as a judge of a court of this state acting in a judicial capacity.

(b) This subsection (4) shall not apply:

(I) To the extent necessary to determine the claim of an arbitrator, arbitration organization, or representative of the arbitration organization against a party to the arbitration proceeding; or

(II) To a hearing on a motion to vacate an award under section 13-22-223 (1) (a) or (1) (b) if the movant makes a prima facie showing that a ground for vacating the award exists.

(5) If a person commences a civil action against an arbitrator, arbitration organization, or representative of an arbitration organization arising from the services of the arbitrator, organization, or representative, or if a person seeks to compel an arbitrator or a representative of an arbitration organization to testify or produce records in violation of subsection (4) of this section, and the court decides that the arbitrator, arbitration organization, or representative of an arbitration organization is immune from civil liability or that the arbitrator or representative of the organization is not competent to testify, the court shall award to the arbitrator, organization, or representative reasonable attorney fees and reasonable expenses of litigation.

13-22-215. Arbitration process. (1) An arbitrator may conduct an arbitration in a manner that the arbitrator considers appropriate for a fair and expeditious disposition of the proceeding. The authority conferred upon the arbitrator by this part 2 shall include, but not be limited to, the power to hold conferences with the parties to the arbitration proceeding before the hearing and the power to determine the admissibility, relevance, materiality, and weight of any evidence.

(2) An arbitrator may decide a request for summary disposition of a claim or particular issue:

(a) If all interested parties agree; or

(b) Upon request of one or more parties to the arbitration proceeding if that party gives notice to all other parties to the proceeding and the other parties have a reasonable opportunity to respond.

(3) If an arbitrator orders a hearing, the arbitrator shall set a time and place and give notice of the hearing not less than five days before the hearing begins. Unless a party to the arbitration proceeding makes an objection to lack or insufficiency of notice not later than the beginning of the hearing, the party's appearance at the hearing shall waive the objection. Upon the request of a party to the arbitration proceeding and for good cause shown, or upon the arbitrator's own initiative, the arbitrator may adjourn the hearing from time to time as necessary but may not postpone the hearing to a time later than that fixed by the agreement to arbitrate for making the award unless the parties to the arbitration proceeding consent to a later date. The arbitrator may hear and decide the controversy upon the evidence produced even if a party who was duly notified of the arbitration proceeding does not appear. The court, on motion, may direct the arbitrator to conduct the hearing promptly and render a timely decision.

(4) At a hearing under subsection (3) of this section, a party to the arbitration proceeding has a right to be heard, to present evidence material to the controversy, and to cross-examine witnesses appearing at the hearing.

(5) If an arbitrator ceases or is unable to act during the arbitration proceeding, a replacement arbitrator shall be appointed in accordance with section 13-22-211 to continue the proceeding and to resolve the controversy.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-215 is similar to § 13-22-207 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Generally, arbitrators are not bound by either substantive or procedural rules of law, except as required under the terms of the arbitration agreement. Cabus v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1982).

No absolute right to a hearing under this section if the arbitration agreement does not require a hearing. Section 10203 (a) of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., code of arbitration procedure does not require an arbitrator to hold a hearing. Therefore, it was within the discretion of the arbitrator whether to hold a hearing. Carson v. PaineWebber, Inc., 62 P.3d 996 (Colo. App. 2002).

Taking of oath not required. The taking of an oath prior to commencing deliberations is not required by the hearing procedures set forth in this section. In re Salter v. Farner, 653 P.2d 413 (Colo. App. 1982).

13-22-217. Witnesses - subpoenas - depositions - discovery. (1) An arbitrator may issue a subpoena for the attendance of a witness and for the production of records and other evidence at any hearing and may administer oaths. A subpoena issued under this section shall be served in the manner for service of subpoenas in a civil action and, upon motion to the court by a party to the arbitration proceeding or by the arbitrator, enforced in the manner for enforcement of subpoenas in a civil action.

(2) In order to make the proceedings fair, expeditious, and cost effective, upon the request of a party or a witness in an arbitration proceeding, an arbitrator may permit a deposition of any witness to be taken for use as evidence at the hearing, including a witness who cannot be subpoenaed for a hearing or who is unable to attend a hearing. The arbitrator shall determine the conditions under which the deposition is taken.

(3) An arbitrator may permit such discovery as the arbitrator decides is appropriate in the circumstances, taking into account the needs of the parties to the arbitration proceeding and other affected persons and the desirability of making the proceeding fair, expeditious, and cost effective.

(4) If an arbitrator permits discovery under subsection (3) of this section, the arbitrator may order a party to the arbitration proceeding to comply with the arbitrator's discovery-related orders, issue subpoenas for the attendance of a witness and for the production of records and other evidence at a discovery proceeding, and take action against a non-complying party to the extent a court could take such action if the controversy were the subject of a civil action; except that the arbitrator shall not have the power of contempt.

(5) An arbitrator may issue a protective order to prevent the disclosure of privileged information, confidential information, trade secrets, and other information protected from disclosure to the extent a court could if the controversy were the subject of a civil action.

(6) All provisions of law that compel a person under subpoena to testify and all fees for attending a judicial proceeding, a deposition, or a discovery proceeding as a witness shall apply to an arbitration proceeding in the same manner as if the controversy were the subject of a civil action.

(7) The court may enforce a subpoena or discovery-related order for the attendance of a witness within this state and for the production of records and other evidence issued by an arbitrator in connection with an arbitration proceeding in another state upon conditions determined by the court so as to make the arbitration proceeding fair, expeditious, and cost effective. A subpoena or discovery-related order issued by an arbitrator in another state shall be served in the manner provided by law for service of subpoenas in a civil action and, upon motion to the court by a party to the arbitration proceeding or the arbitrator, enforced in the manner provided by law for enforcement of subpoenas in a civil action.

13-22-218. Judicial enforcement of pre-award ruling by arbitrator. If an arbitrator makes a pre-award ruling in favor of a party to the arbitration proceeding, the party may request the arbitrator to incorporate the ruling into an award under section 13-22-219. A prevailing party may make a motion to the court for an expedited order to confirm the award under section 13-22-222, in which case the court shall summarily decide the motion. The court shall issue an order to confirm the award unless the court vacates, modifies, or corrects the award under section 13-22-223 or 13-22-224.

13-22-219. Award. (1) An arbitrator shall make a record of an award. The record shall be signed or otherwise authenticated by an arbitrator who concurs with the award. The arbitrator or the arbitration organization shall give notice of the award, including a copy of the award, to each party to the arbitration proceeding.

(2) An award must be made within the time specified by the agreement to arbitrate or, if not specified therein, within the time ordered by the court. The court may extend the time or the parties to the arbitration proceeding may agree in a record to extend the time. The court or the parties may do so within or after the time specified or ordered. A party shall be deemed to have waived any objection that an award was not timely made unless the party gives notice of the objection to the arbitrator before receiving notice of the award.

Clear Channel Satellite Servs., Inc.*, 151 P.3d 663 (Colo. App. 2006).

13-22-220. Change of award by arbitrator. (1) On motion to an arbitrator by a party to an arbitration proceeding, the arbitrator may modify or correct an award:

- (a) Upon a ground stated in section 13-22-224 (1) (a) or (1) (c);
  - (b) If the arbitrator has not made a final and definite award upon a claim submitted by the parties to the arbitration proceeding; or
  - (c) To clarify the award.
- (2) A motion made under subsection (1) of this section shall be made and notice shall be given to all parties within twenty days after the movant receives notice of the award.
- (3) A party to the arbitration proceeding shall give notice of any objection to the motion within ten days after receipt of the notice.
- (4) If a motion to the court is pending under section 13-22-222, 13-22-223, or 13-22-224, the court may submit the claim to the arbitrator to consider whether to modify or correct the award:

Annotator’s note. Since § 13-22-220 is similar to § 13-22-211 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

An application for modification of award pursuant to this section tolls the time limits in §§ 13-22-214 and 13-22-215 for seeking review by the court. Swan v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2000).

Amendment or modification of the award by the arbitrator is permitted only under the narrow circumstances listed in this section. Applehans v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 68 P.3d 594 (Colo. App. 2003); Rocha v. Fin. Indem. Corp., 155 P.3d 602 (Colo. App. 2006).

“Clarify”, in subsection (1)(a), does not connote a reassessment or redetermination, but rather involves making something clear or understandable. This does not mean that an arbitrator may reexamine the merits under the auspices of clarification — merely that an arbitrator’s mistake, ambiguity, or general lack of clarity may require elucidation for the parties and reviewing courts to make sense of an arbitration award. Sooper Credit Union v. Sholar Group Architects, P.C., 113 P.3d 768 (Colo. 2005).

According to former § 13-22-211, an arbitrator may “modify or correct the award . . . for the purpose of clarifying the award”. This unambiguous phrase means that a confusing award may be clarified as required for better understanding. Nowhere does the statute impose an additional requirement that the confusion be evident or apparent strictly on the face of the award. Had the general assembly intended to limit clarification to patently ambiguous awards, it would have said so. Sooper Credit Union v. Sholar Group Architects, P.C., 113 P.3d 768 (Colo. 2005) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Where an award is confusing because of an error, ambiguity, or general lack of clarity, an arbitrator may modify it to make it clearer and thereby effectuate the arbitrator's intent. The statute does not require that the confusion be evident on the face of the award or patently ambiguous, but an arbitrator may not redetermine the merits when clarifying an award. Sooper Credit Union v. Sholar Group Architects, P.C., 113 P.3d 768 (Colo. 2005).

Failure to object to an arbitrator's authority to issue a clarification or explanation of an award precludes raising an objection to the same on appeal. Osborn v. Packard, 117 P.3d 77 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under law in effect prior to 2004 repeal and reenactment).

If an arbitrator's rulings are ambiguous, the court should attempt to resolve the ambiguity from the record whenever possible. If that is not possible, however, the matter must be remanded to the arbitrator for issuance of a modified arbitration award that clarifies the ambiguity. The arbitrator may conduct such further proceedings as he or she deems necessary. Osborn v. Packard, 117 P.3d 77 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under law in effect prior to 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Arbitrator acted within his or her statutory authority by correcting an award that was initially miscalculated, thus clarifying the initial award's ruling on the merits of the case. Sooper Credit Union v. Sholar Group Architects, P.C., 113 P.3d 768 (Colo. 2005).

Applied in Red Carpet Armory Realty Co. v. Golden W. Realty, 644 P.2d 93 (Colo. App. 1982).

13-22-221. Remedies - fees and expenses of arbitration proceeding. (1) An arbitrator may award reasonable attorney fees and other reasonable expenses of arbitration if such an award is authorized by law in a civil action involving the same claim or by the agreement of the parties to the arbitration proceeding.

(2) An arbitrator's expenses and fees, together with other expenses, shall be paid as provided in the award.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the provisions of section 13-21-102 (5).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-221 is similar to § 13-22-212 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Where appellants have not shown section arbitrarily singles out a group of persons similarly situated for disparate treatment, provisions of section, which allow an interlocutory appeal of an order denying a motion to compel arbitration but do not authorize an interlocutory appeal of an order compelling arbitration, are rationally based and do not violate equal protection. Ferla v. Infinity Dev. Assocs., LLC, 107 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court is not required to conduct an evidentiary hearing on an arbitrator's request for payment of fees. Although the necessity or reasonableness of an arbitrator's fees may be subject to dispute, the parties' due process rights to litigate the scope of the services and the amounts requested are well protected by written motion practice. In re Eggert, 53 P.3d 794 (Colo. App. 2002).

Although section excludes "counsel fees," it appears to cover other costs incurred in the arbitration. Because there was no agreement to the contrary, the statute compels the parties to pay these costs as provided under the arbitrator's award. Thus, to the extent the arbitrator's award represented costs other than counsel fees, the trial court should have confirmed the award. Compton v. Lemon Ranches, Ltd., 972 P.2d 1078 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section prohibits an arbitrator from awarding attorney fees unless the parties have specifically agreed that the arbitrator shall address that issue. Therefore, the trial court did not err in awarding the defendant its attorney fees incurred in the trial court, and the trial court's order was not void for lack of jurisdiction. Camelot Invs., LLC v. LANDesign, LLC, 973 P.2d 1279 (Colo. App. 1999).

13-22-222. Confirmation of award. (1) After a party to an arbitration proceeding receives notice of an award, the party may make a motion to the court for an order confirming the award at which time the court shall issue a confirming order unless the award is modified or corrected pursuant to section 13-22-220 or 13-22-224 or is vacated pursuant to section 13-22-223.

Purpose of article is to provide ground rules and procedures for enforcement of awards through the courts, but not to supersede any agreement entered into by the parties. Water Works Employees Local 1045 v. Bd. of Water Works, 44 Colo. App. 178, 615 P.2d 52 (1980).

Court's role is limited. The role of the court is considering an arbitrator's award is strictly limited. Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982).

The issues before the court in a confirmation proceeding are limited by this article. Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. v. Auto. Ins. Co., 960 P.2d 93 (Colo. 1998).

The trial court erred in considering defendant's substantive defense concerning the constitutionality of the statute because the only defenses permitted to a request for confirmation of an arbitration award are whether grounds exist to vacate, modify, or correct such award and such defenses must be made within specified time limits. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. v. Cabs, Inc., 751 P.2d 61 (Colo. 1988).

In the absence of appropriate grounds to modify, vacate, or correct an award, a trial court is required to affirm the award without review of the merits. McNaughton & Rodgers v. Besser, 932 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1996); Osborn v. Packard, 117 P.3d 77 (Colo. App. 2004).

When arbitration award is for all damages incurred by plaintiff, which under state law includes prejudgment interest, district court's subsequent order granting prejudgment interest was an impermissible modification of arbitration award. Levy v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Trial court correctly denied plaintiff's motion to confirm the award where defendant had filed an application to modify or correct the award with the arbitrator. Applehans v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 68 P.3d 594 (Colo. App. 2003).

Failure to take oath does not invalidate proceedings. Failure of the arbitrators to take an oath does not invalidate proceedings which comply with the requirement of both the uniform act and the arbitration agreement. In re Salter v. Farner, 653 P.2d 413 (Colo. App. 1982).

Arbitrator held deprived of binding power by contract. Where under the contract at issue, binding arbitration had been expressly excluded by the specific provision for advisory arbitration, arbitrator was deprived of any power to bind either party. Water Works Employees Local 1045 v. Bd. of Water Works, 44 Colo. App. 178, 615 P.2d 52 (1980).

The party challenging the validity of an arbitration award bears a heavy burden of establishing sufficient evidence of partiality. McNaughton & Rodgers v. Besser, 932 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1996).

Arbitrators may not be deposed for the purpose of inquiring into their thought processes. Container Tech. v. J. Gadsden Pty., 781 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1989).

13-22-223. Vacating award. (1) Upon motion to the court by a party to an arbitration proceeding, the court shall vacate an award made in the arbitration proceeding if the court finds that:

- (a) The award was procured by corruption, fraud, or other undue means;
  - (b) There was:
    - (I) Evident partiality by an arbitrator appointed as a neutral arbitrator;
    - (II) Corruption by an arbitrator; or
    - (III) Misconduct by an arbitrator prejudicing the rights of a party to the arbitration proceeding;
  - (c) An arbitrator refused to postpone the hearing upon showing of sufficient cause for postponement, refused to consider evidence material to the controversy, or otherwise conducted the hearing contrary to section 13-22-215, so as to prejudice substantially the rights of a party to the arbitration proceeding;
  - (d) An arbitrator exceeded the arbitrator's powers;
  - (e) There was no agreement to arbitrate, unless the person participated in the arbitration proceeding without raising the objection under section 13-22-215 (3) not later than the beginning of the arbitration hearing; or
  - (f) The arbitration was conducted without proper notice of the initiation of an arbitration as required in section 13-22-209 so as to substantially prejudice the rights of a party to the arbitration proceeding.
- (1.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the fact that the relief was such that it could not or would not be granted by a court of law or equity is not grounds for vacating or refusing to confirm the award.
- (2) A motion made under this section shall be filed within ninety-one days after the movant receives notice of the award pursuant to section 13-22-219 or within ninety-one days after the movant receives notice of a modified or corrected award pursuant to section 13-22-220, unless the movant alleges that the award was procured by corruption, fraud, or other undue means, in which case the motion must be made within ninety-one days after either the ground is known or by the exercise of reasonable care should have been known by the movant.
- (3) If the court vacates an award on a ground other than that set forth in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section, it may order a rehearing. If the award is vacated on a ground stated in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (1) of this section, the rehearing shall be held before a new arbitrator. If the award is vacated on a ground stated in paragraph (c), (d), or (f) of subsection (1) of this section, the rehearing may be held before the arbitrator who made the award or the arbitrator's successor. The arbitrator must render the decision in the rehearing within the same time as that provided in section 13-22-219 (2) for an award.
- (4) If the court denies a motion to vacate an award, it shall confirm the award unless a motion to modify or correct the award is pending.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-223 is similar to § 13-22-214 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Generally, arbitrators are not bound by either substantive or procedural rules of law, except as required under the terms of the arbitration agreement. Cabus v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1982); Byerly v.

Kirkpatrick Pettis Smith Polian, Inc., 996 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 2000).

The arbitrators do not exceed their authority by rendering a decision that is contrary to the rules of law that would have been applied by a court. Byerly v. Kirkpatrick Pettis Smith Polian, Inc., 996 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 2000).

An arbitrator's manifest disregard of the law is not a ground for vacating an arbitration award as exceeding the arbitrator's power under former § 13-22-214 (1)(a)(III) or as a nonstatutory common law ground. An arbitrator does not necessarily exceed his power when he does not properly apply the law. Coors Brewing Co. v. Cabo, 114 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under former law).

Failure to take oath does not invalidate proceedings. Failure of the arbitrators to take an oath does not invalidate proceedings which comply with the requirement of both the uniform act and the arbitration agreement. In re Salter v. Farnier, 653 P.2d 413 (Colo. App. 1982).

Rule's inconsistency with section overridden. To the extent C.R.C.P. 109 is inconsistent with this section, it would appear to be overridden. Copper Mt., Inc. v. Project Oneco, Inc., 3 Bankr. 284 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1980).

If an arbitrator exceeds his authority by going beyond the contract terms and, in effect, enacting new binding terms and conditions of employment, the dissatisfied party may apply to the court to vacate the award. City & County of Denver v. Denver Firefighters Local 858, 663 P.2d 1032 (Colo. 1983).

Applicable statute of limitations for breach of contract/duty of fair representation claim under the federal Railway Labor Act was the six-month period provided by the federal National Labor Relations Act and not the 90-day period in subsection (2). Barnett v. United Airlines, Inc., 738 F.2d 358 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1087, 105 S. Ct. 594, 83 L. Ed.2d 703 (1984).

Uniform Arbitration Act authorizes party to arbitration agreement to apply to district court for order vacating arbitration award after entry of award. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Failure of a party to move to vacate an arbitration award within the prescribed time period precludes such party from using the grounds as an affirmative defense in a subsequent action by the other party to enforce the award. Elec. Workers Local 969 v. Babcock & Wilcox, 826 F.2d 962 (10th Cir. 1987).

Failure to bring a motion to vacate, modify, or correct the arbitration award within the prescribed time limit prevents the defendant from raising the contractual policy limits as a defense in a confirmation proceeding held after expiration of the statutory time limit. Kutch v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 960 P.2d 93 (Colo. 1998).

However, an application to arbitrator pursuant to § 13-22-211 to modify award tolls the 30-day time limit under this section for seeking judicial review. Swan v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2000).

When a party moves to vacate an award under subsection (1)(f), the court must independently determine the adequacy of the notice and any resulting prejudice. Braata, Inc. v. Oneida

Cold Storage Co., 251 P.3d 584 (Colo. App. 2010).

Vacating, modifying, or correcting awards by court permissible only on the basis of the statutory grounds set forth in this section or § 13-22-215. Foust v. Aetna Cas. & Ins. Co., 786 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1989); Sportsman's Quikstop I, Ltd. v. Didonato, 32 P.3d 633 (Colo. App. 2001).

An arbitrator's award is not a "final judgment" reviewable by an appellate court. Upon confirmation of the award by a district court in accordance with § 13-22-213, and absent a timely motion to vacate, modify, or correct the award, there is no appealable issue. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

General assembly's authority to determine the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is exclusive. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Parties to an arbitration agreement cannot define and prescribe the powers of a court of law. Where a contract term purported to allow an appellate court to conduct a substantive review of the arbitration panel's award, contrary to the controlling statutes, clause was void and unenforceable. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Trial court erred in finding arbitrators had the authority to decide whether insureds were entitled to stack uninsured motorist benefits. Arbitration clause in policy was a limited clause and provided only for the arbitration of two stated issues. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Stein, 886 P.2d 323 (Colo. App. 1994).

An unfavorable interpretation of a contract is not a basis for setting aside an arbitration award. Container Tech. v. J. Gadsden Pty., 781 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1989).

The five enumerated grounds for relief set forth in subsection (1)(a) are exclusive. Byerly v. Kirkpatrick Pettis Smith Polian, Inc., 996 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 2000).

In order to establish that the award was "procured by" undue means, there must be a causal connection between the improper conduct and the arbitration award. Nasca v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 12 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2000); BFN-Greeley, LLC, 141 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2006).

Affidavits of the arbitration panel members may be properly considered on the causation issue as long as the purpose is not to establish the thought process of the panel members. Nasca v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 12 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2000).

The ordinary meaning of "undue means" suggests some type of impropriety in the arbitration process. The terms are broad enough to include a party-appointed arbitrator's non-disclosure of a substantial business relationship. Thus, if an arbitrator in a law firm with attorneys who have a substantial business relationship with an insurance carrier in the arbitration proceeding, including service as expert witnesses, has a duty to disclose the relationship to the parties in the proceeding. Nasca v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 12 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2000).

Party must demonstrate that he or she was substantially prejudiced by an arbitrator's refusal to consider evidence material to the controversy before a court can vacate an award. Carson v. PaineWebber, Inc., 62 P.3d 996 (Colo. App. 2002).

One of the statutory grounds for vacation of an award is that the arbitrator exceeded the powers granted in the arbitration agreement. It is not sufficient to argue merely that the arbitrator committed an error of law on the merits, but rather, plaintiff must establish that the arbitrator refused to apply or ignored the legal standard agreed upon by the parties for resolution of the dispute. Giraldi by and through Giraldi v. Morrell, 892 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1994).

When provision states that arbitrator shall award "fees and expenses (including reasonable attorneys' fees)" to the prevailing party, whether attorney fees should be awarded to the prevailing party was not an arbitrable issue, and the arbitrator exceeded his powers in refusing to award any attorney fees. Magenis v. Bruner, 187 P.3d 1222 (Colo. App. 2008).

Evident partiality is a fact-sensitive standard. It depends on the nature of the conflict between the arbitrator and the party, the issue being arbitrated, and the structure of the arbitration agreement. McNaughton & Rodgers v. Besser, 932 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1996).

Arbitrators have a duty to disclose any potential conflict that could constitute evident partiality, which is a relationship that would persuade a reasonable person that the arbitrator is likely to be partial to one side in the dispute. McNaughton & Rodgers v. Besser, 932 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1996).

Some facts indicating bias include pecuniary interest, familial relationship, and the existence of an adversarial or sympathetic relationship. McNaughton & Rodgers v. Besser, 932 P.2d 819 (Colo. App. 1996).

Evident partiality was not established in medical malpractice case by mere fact that some of arbitrator's relatives were health care professionals. Giraldi by and through Giraldi v. Morrell, 892 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1994).

If a party asserts that the entire contract is illegal, the court must determine this threshold issue first. R.P.T. v. Innovative Commc'ns, 917 P.2d 340 (Colo. App. 1996).

Colorado law affords an arbitrator great flexibility in fashioning appropriate remedies, including specific performance and conditional assessment of damages. R.P.T. v. Innovative Commc'ns, 917 P.2d 340 (Colo. App. 1996).

To determine if the arbitrator exceeded his or her authority within the meaning of this section, the court must determine the scope of the arbitration clause contained in the contract. Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Taylor, 45 P.3d 759 (Colo. App. 2001).

Award does not exceed arbitrator's power because its explanation was lacking or mistaken, as long as there was a reason that could have justified the award. Treadwell v. Vill. Homes of Colo., Inc., 222 P.3d 398 (Colo. App. 2009).

When an arbitration award is secured by fraud, the court must vacate the whole award unless there is a discrete and severable part of the award that was procured by fraud. Superior Constr. Co. v. Bentley, 104 P.3d 331 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under former § 13-22-214 prior to 2004 repeal and reenactment).

Fraudulent testimony that was brought to the attention of the arbitrators well before they issued the award could not have "procured" the award. BFN-Greely, LLC v. Adair Group, Inc., 141 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982); Red Carpet Armory Realty Co. v. Golden W. Realty, 644 P.2d 93 (Colo. App. 1982); S. Conejos Sch. District RE-10 v. Martinez, 709 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1985).

13-22-224. Modification or correction of award. (1) Upon motion made within ninety-one days after the movant receives notice of the award pursuant to section 13-22-219 or within ninety-one days after the movant receives notice of a modified or corrected award pursuant to section 13-22-220, the court shall modify or correct the award if:

(a) There is an evident mathematical miscalculation or an evident mistake in the description of a person, thing, or property referred to in the award;

(b) The arbitrator has made an award on a claim not submitted to the arbitrator and the award may be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision upon the claims submitted; or

(c) The award is imperfect in a matter of form not affecting the merits of the decision on the claims submitted.

(2) If a motion made under subsection (1) of this section is granted, the court shall modify or correct and confirm the award as modified or corrected. Otherwise, unless a motion to vacate is pending, the court shall confirm the award.

(3) A motion to modify or correct an award pursuant to this section may be joined with a motion to vacate the award.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-224 is similar to § 13-22-215 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

"Evident miscalculation of figures" refers only to mathematical errors committed by arbitrators which would be patently clear to a reviewing court. Court cannot use these grounds to review the merits of the award on appeal. In re Gavend, 781 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1989).

Such a mistake which permits a modification under subsection (1)(a) must be so gross as to evidence that the award did not actually represent the arbitrator's intent. Such a modification is only authorized if it seeks to effectuate the clearly expressed intent of the arbitrator by correcting a mathematical error without altering the arbitrator's conclusion on the merits. Foust v. Aetna Cas. & Ins. Co., 786 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1989).

Vacating, modifying, or correcting awards by court permissible only on the basis of the statutory grounds set forth in this section or § 13-22-214. Foust v. Aetna Cas. & Ins. Co., 786 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1989); Sportsman's Quikstop I, Ltd. v. Didonato, 32 P.3d 633 (Colo. App. 2001).

General assembly's authority to determine the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is exclusive. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Parties to an arbitration agreement cannot define and prescribe the powers of a court of law. Where a contract term purported to allow an appellate court to conduct a substantive review of the arbitration panel's award, contrary to the controlling statutes, clause was void and unenforceable. S. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to bring a motion to vacate, modify, or correct the arbitration award within the prescribed time limit prevents the defendant from raising the contractual policy limits as a defense in a confirmation proceeding held after expiration of the statutory time limit. Kutch v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 960 P.2d 93 (Colo. 1998).

Since defendant failed to follow prescribed time limit in motion to vacate, modify, or correct the arbitration award, he is barred from presenting the substantive defenses to plaintiff's motion. Sportsman's Quikstop I, Ltd. v. Didonato, 32 P.3d 633 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where there is no evidence that the parties disagreed over policy limits, the issue of policy limits was not arbitrable. Court could modify arbitration award to reduce the award to the policy limits. Rocha v. Fin. Indem. Corp., 155 P.3d 602 (Colo. App. 2006).

However, an application to arbitrator pursuant to § 13-22-211 to modify award tolls the 30-day time limit under this section for seeking judicial review. Swan v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2000).

Trial court's award of prejudgment interest upon confirmation of the arbitration award is an impermissible modification of the arbitration award where such interest was not requested during the arbitration. Duncan v. Nat'l Home Ins. Co., 36 P.3d 191 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Atencio v. Mid-Century Ins. Co., 619 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1980); Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982).

13-22-225. Judgment on award - attorney fees and litigation expenses. (1) Upon granting an order confirming, vacating without directing a rehearing, modifying, or correcting an award, the court shall enter a judgment in conformity therewith. The judgment may be recorded, docketed, and enforced as any other judgment in a civil action.

(2) A court may award the reasonable costs of the motion and subsequent judicial proceedings.

(3) On the application of a prevailing party to a contested judicial proceeding under section 13-22-222, 13-22-223, or 13-22-224, the court may add reasonable attorney fees and other reasonable expenses of litigation incurred in a judicial proceeding after the award is made to a judgment confirming, vacating without directing a rehearing, modifying, or correcting an award.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-225 is similar to § 13-22-216 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Arbitration award is tantamount to a judgment. Judd Constr. Co. v. Evans Joint Venture, 642 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1982); Container Tech. v. J. Gadsden Pty., 781 P.2d 119 (Colo. App. 1989).

A judgment confirming an arbitration award is enforceable in the same manner as any other judgment. Therefore, the district court did not err in ordering post-judgment interest on the unpaid portion of the judgment. Barrett v. Inv. Mgmt. Consultants, 190 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2008).

District court erred in granting costs in favor of plaintiff. Where plaintiff did not petition court to confirm the arbitration award pursuant to subsection (2) and is not the prevailing party to a contested judicial proceeding under subsection (3), plaintiff is not entitled to costs of the court proceedings. Levy v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Collateral estoppel and res judicata apply to arbitration proceedings. To determine whether an arbitration proceeding should be given preclusive effect, the court looks to the factors of the collateral estoppel test. Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, bars relitigation of an issue determined in a prior proceeding if: (1) The issue precluded is identical to an issue actually determined in the prior proceeding; (2) the party against whom estoppel is asserted has been a party to or is in privity with a party in the prior proceeding; (3) there is a final judgment on the merits in the prior proceeding; and (4) the party against whom the doctrine is asserted has had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding. Dale v. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co., 948 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1997); Barnett v. Elite Props. of Am., 252 P.3d 14 (Colo. App. 2010).

Collateral estoppel precludes relitigation of issues decided in an arbitration proceeding if the traditional collateral estoppel test has been met. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Williams, 982 P.2d 306 (Colo. 1999); Barnett v. Elite Props. of Am., 252 P.3d 14 (Colo. App. 2010).

While certiorari is unresolved, arbitration proceeding is not final for issue preclusion purposes. Certiorari can be resolved in any of three ways: (1) The parties fail to file a timely petition for certiorari; (2) the court denies the petition for certiorari; or (3) the court issues an opinion after granting certiorari. Barnett v. Elite Props. of Am., 252 P.3d 14 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-22-226. Jurisdiction. (1) A court having jurisdiction over the controversy and the parties may enforce an agreement to arbitrate.

(2) An agreement to arbitrate providing for arbitration in this state confers jurisdiction on the court to enter judgment on an award under this part 2.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-219 as it existed prior to 2004.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-226 is similar to § 13-22-219 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

A motion to compel arbitration is a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction which cannot be resolved by the presumpt-tive truthfulness of the complaint but which must be determined in a factual hearing.

Eychner v. Van Vleet, 870 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1993).

13-22-227. Venue. A motion pursuant to section 13-22-205 shall be made in a court of the county in which the agreement to arbitrate specifies the arbitration hearing is to be held or, if the hearing has been held, in a court of the county in which it was held. Otherwise, a motion pursuant to section 13-22-205 may be made in the court of any county in which an adverse party resides or has a place of business or, if no adverse party has a residence or place of business in this state, in a court of any county in this state. All subsequent motions must be made in the court hearing the initial motion unless the court otherwise directs.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-220 as it existed prior to 2004.

13-22-228. Appeals. (1) An appeal may be taken from:

- (a) An order denying a motion to compel arbitration;
- (b) An order granting a motion to stay arbitration;
- (c) An order confirming or denying confirmation of an award;
- (d) An order modifying or correcting an award;
- (e) An order vacating an award without directing a rehearing; or
- (f) A final judgment entered pursuant to this part 2.

(2) An appeal under this section shall be taken in the same manner as an appeal of an order or judgment in a civil action.

Source: L. 2004: Entire part R&RE, p. 1730, § 1, effective August 4.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-221 as it existed prior to 2004.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 13-22-228 is similar to § 13-22-221 as it existed prior to the 2004 repeal and reenactment of this part 2, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

When denial of application to compel arbitration not appealable. An appeal may not be taken from an order denying an application to compel arbitration on an employment contract entered into before July 14, 1975. Monatt v. Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc., 42 Colo. App. 265, 592 P.2d 1352 (1979).

Order compelling arbitration not appealable. An order compelling parties to arbitrate, pursuant to § 13-22-204, is not a final appealable order. Frontier Materials, Inc. v. City of Boulder, 663 P.2d 1065 (Colo. App. 1983); Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Order compelling arbitration is interlocutory order which is not appealable even if court's order determines the substantive issue of arbitrability. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Order denying a stay of arbitration not appealable. Section expressly authorizes an appeal from an order granting a stay of arbitration, not an order denying such a stay. Therefore, court of appeals lacked jurisdiction to review an order denying a stay of arbitration. Gergel v. High View Homes, L.L.C., 58 P.3d 1132 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where the district court's denial of Denver's motion to dismiss contractor's claims and Denver's request to stay proceedings pending alternative dispute resolution raised issues of substantial public importance, permissive immediate appeal under this section was appropriate. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 939 P.2d 1353 (Colo. 1997).

Securities brokers acted inconsistently with right to arbitrate by pursuing discovery and confirming intent to go to trial in open court, after they knew that they had legally enforceable arbitration clause. Therefore, brokers waived right to arbitration, where brokers had completed discovery, but customer had not done so. Norden v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 739 P.2d 914 (Colo. App. 1987).

Defendants' failure to assert right to arbitration contemporaneously with their motions to dismiss was an act deemed to be a waiver of the right to have the dispute resolved by arbitration. Bashor v. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, 773 P.2d 578 (Colo. App. 1989).

No waiver of right to arbitrate by failing to appeal denial of motion to dismiss where issue reserved in answer, trial data certificate, and motion for a new trial. Mountain Plains Constructors v. Torrez, 785 P.2d 928 (Colo. 1990).

No waiver of right to arbitrate by litigating claims that arose under a separate agreement that did not contain an arbitration clause. Breaker v. Corrosion Control Corp., 23 P.3d 1278 (Colo. App. 2001).

Appealable order. A denial of a motion to compel arbitration is an appealable order. However, an immediate appeal is permissive and not mandatory. Therefore, an order denying a motion to compel arbitration may also be appealed after final judgment. Mountain Plains Constructors v. Torrez, 785 P.2d 928 (Colo. 1990).

Appeals court had jurisdiction under this section although the trial court dismissed the action for lack of jurisdiction, finding that the dispute was subject to arbitration, and entered an order awarding attorney fees. Camelot Invs., LLC v. LANDesign, LLC, 973 P.2d 1279 (Colo. App. 1999).

Uniform Arbitration Act authorizes party to arbitration agreement to appeal certain district court orders in the same manner and to the same extent as appeals may be taken from court orders and judgments in other civil actions. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Court of appeals lacks jurisdiction to review an arbitration award; jurisdiction extends only to orders and judgments entered by statutorily specified courts. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

Assertion that trial court erred in directing arbitration cannot be raised before an appellate court until there has been an award by the arbitrator on the merits of the controversy and a court order entered confirming the award. Thomas v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 857 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1993).

An arbitrator's award is not a "final judgment" reviewable by an appellate court. Upon confirmation of the award by a district court in accordance with § 13-22-213, and absent a timely motion to vacate, modify, or correct the award, there is no appealable issue. So. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

While certiorari is unresolved, arbitration proceeding is not final for issue preclusion purposes. Certiorari can be resolved in any of three ways: (1) The parties fail to file a timely petition for certiorari; (2) the court denies the petition for certiorari; or (3) the court issues an opinion after granting certiorari. Barnett v. Elite Props. of Am., 252 P.3d 14 (Colo. App. 2010).

The determination of the existence of a valid agreement to arbitrate does not trigger a right to appeal under the Act. Gergel v. High View Homes, L.L.C., 58 P.3d 1132 (Colo. App. 2002).

An interlocutory appeal under subsection (1)(a) of this section may only be taken from the denial of a motion that seeks to compel arbitration based on "an agreement to arbitrate" as described in § 13-22-207 (1). Vulcan Power Co. v. Munson, 252 P.3d 511 (Colo. App. 2011).

General assembly's authority to determine the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is exclusive. So. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

Parties to an arbitration agreement cannot define and prescribe the powers of a court of law. Where a contract term purported to allow an appellate court to conduct a substantive review of the arbitration panel's award, contrary to the controlling statutes, clause was void and unenforceable. So. Washington Assoc. v. Flanagan, 859 P.2d 217 (Colo. 1992).

13-22-229. Uniformity of application and construction. In applying and construing this part 2, consideration shall be given to the need to promote uniformity of the law with respect to its subject matter among states that enact it.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 13-22-223 as it existed prior to 2004.

13-22-230. Savings clause. This part 2 shall not affect an action or proceeding commenced or a right accrued before this part 2 takes effect. Except as otherwise provided in section 13-22-203, an arbitration agreement made before August 4, 2004, is governed by the "Uniform Arbitration Act of 1975".

ANNOTATION

“Mediation communications” does not extend to all communications that may be related to the mediation. Mediation communications are limited to those made in the presence or at the behest of the mediator. After a preliminary settlement agreement had been signed following a mediation, negotiations between counsel and statements to the court were not mediation communications required to be kept confidential pursuant to § 13-22-307. Yaekle v. Andrews, 195 P.3d 1101 (Colo. 2008).

13-22-303. Office of dispute resolution - establishment. There is hereby established in the judicial department the office of dispute resolution, the head of which shall be the director of the office of dispute resolution, who shall be appointed by the chief justice of the supreme court and who shall receive such compensation as determined by the chief justice.

13-22-304. Director - assistants. The director shall be an employee of the judicial department and shall be responsible to the chief justice for the administration of the office. The director may be but need not be an attorney and shall be hired on the basis of training and experience in management and mediation. The director, subject to the approval of the chief justice, may appoint such additional employees as deemed necessary for the administration of the office of dispute resolution.

Mediation services. (1) In order to resolve disputes between persons or organizations, dispute resolution programs shall be established or made available in such judicial districts or combinations of such districts as shall be designated by the chief justice of the supreme court, subject to moneys available for such purpose. For all office of dispute resolution programs, the director shall establish rules, regulations, and procedures for the prompt resolution of disputes. Such rules, regulations, and procedures shall be designed to establish a simple nonadversary format for the resolution of disputes by neutral mediators in an informal setting for the purpose of allowing each participant, on a voluntary basis, to define and articulate the participant's particular problem for the possible resolution of such dispute.

(2) Persons involved in a dispute shall be eligible for the mediation services set forth in this section before or after the filing of an action in either the county or the district court.

(3) Each party who uses the mediation services or ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution in section 13-22-313 of the office of dispute resolution shall pay a fee as prescribed by order of the supreme court. Fees shall be set at a level necessary to cover the reasonable and necessary expenses of operating the program. Any fee may be waived at the discretion of the director. The fees established in this part 3 shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the dispute resolution fund created in section 13-22-310.

(4) All rules, regulations, and procedures established pursuant to this section shall be subject to the approval of the chief justice.

(5) No adjudication, sanction, or penalty may be made or imposed by any mediator or the director.

13-22-307. Confidentiality. (1) Dispute resolution meetings may be closed at the discretion of the mediator.

(2) Any party or the mediator or mediation organization in a mediation service proceeding or a dispute resolution proceeding shall not voluntarily disclose or through discovery or compulsory process be required to disclose any information concerning any mediation communication or any communication provided in confidence to the mediator or a mediation organization, unless and to the extent that:

(a) All parties to the dispute resolution proceeding and the mediator consent in writing; or

(b) The mediation communication reveals the intent to commit a felony, inflict bodily harm, or threaten the safety of a child under the age of eighteen years; or

(c) The mediation communication is required by statute to be made public; or

(d) Disclosure of the mediation communication is necessary and relevant to an action alleging willful or wanton misconduct of the mediator or mediation organization.

(3) Any mediation communication that is disclosed in violation of this section shall not be admitted into evidence in any judicial or administrative proceeding.

(4) Nothing in this section shall prevent the discovery or admissibility of any evidence that is otherwise discoverable, merely because the evidence was presented in the course of a mediation service proceeding or dispute resolution proceeding.

(5) Nothing in this section shall prevent the gathering of information for research or educational purposes, or for the purpose of evaluating or monitoring the performance of a mediator, mediation organization, mediation service, or dispute resolution program, so long as the parties or the specific circumstances of the parties' controversy are not identified or identifiable.

ANNOTATION

“Mediation communications” does not extend to all communications that may be related to the mediation. Mediation communications are limited to those made in the presence or at the behest of the mediator. After a preliminary settlement agreement had been signed following a mediation, negotiations between counsel and statements to the court were not mediation communications required to be kept confidential pursuant to this section. Yaekle v. Andrews, 195 P.3d 1101 (Colo. 2008).

Testimony of mediator and attorneys inadmissible to prove existence of a final, unsigned settlement agreement. GLN Compliance v. Aviation Manual Solutions, 203 P.3d 595 (Colo. App. 2008).

13-22-308. Settlement of disputes. (1) If the parties involved in a dispute reach a full or partial agreement, the agreement upon request of the parties shall be reduced to writing and approved by the parties and their attorneys, if any. If reduced to writing and signed by the parties, the agreement may be presented to the court by any party or their attorneys, if any, as a stipulation and, if approved by the court, shall be enforceable as an order of the court.

ANNOTATION

Oral agreement not enforceable as an order of the court. Alleged oral settlement agreement entered into during private mediation was not enforceable by a court under this section.

Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Price, 78 P.3d 1138 (Colo. App. 2003).

In the absence of a signed settlement agreement, agreement entered into during private mediation could not be enforced by court. Agreement unenforceable even if terms of the settlement were read into the record and parties acknowledged that the oral statements constituted the full agreement. GLN Compliance v. Aviation Manual Solutions, 203 P.3d 595 (Colo. App. 2008).

This section does not control in the context of an agreement to modify parenting time. Because § 14-10-129 allows the trial court to modify parenting time whenever doing so would be in the child's best interests, the court did not abuse its discretion in adopting the agreement and modifying the parenting time accordingly despite the fact that the agreement was not reduced to writing or signed. In re Barker, 251 P.3d 591 (Colo. App. 2010).

This section specifies the requirements for an agreement to become an order of court. This section does not limit the ways by which the parties may form a binding agreement; but § 13-22-307 limits the admissibility of some evidence of such an agreement. Yackle v. Andrews, 195 P.3d 1101 (Colo. 2008).

13-22-310. Dispute resolution fund - creation - source of funds. (1) There is hereby created in the state treasury a fund to be known as the dispute resolution fund, which fund shall consist of:

- (a) All moneys collected pursuant to section 13-22-305 (3);
- (b) Any moneys appropriated by the general assembly for credit to the fund; and
- (c) Any moneys collected by the office from federal grants and other contributions, grants, gifts, bequests, and donations.

(2) (a) All moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly. Any moneys not appropriated shall remain in the fund at the end of any fiscal year and shall not revert to the general fund.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) to the contrary, on April 20, 2009, the state treasurer shall transfer the balance of moneys in the dispute resolution fund to the general fund.

13-22-311. Court referral to mediation - duties of mediator. (1) Any court of record may, in its discretion, refer any case for mediation services or dispute resolution programs, subject to the availability of mediation services or dispute resolution programs; except that the court shall not refer the case to mediation services or dispute resolution programs where one of the parties claims that it has been the victim of physical or psychological abuse by the other party and states that it is thereby unwilling to enter into mediation services or dispute resolution programs. In addition, the court may exempt from referral any case in which a party files with the court, within five days of a referral order, a motion objecting to mediation and demonstrating compelling reasons why mediation should not be ordered. Compelling reasons may include, but are not limited to, that the costs of mediation would be higher than the requested relief and previous attempts to resolve the issues were not successful. Parties referred to mediation services or dispute resolution programs may select said services or programs from mediators or mediation organizations or from the office of dispute resolution. This section shall not apply in any civil action where injunctive or similar equitable relief is the only remedy sought.

(2) Upon completion of mediation services or dispute resolution programs, the mediator shall supply to the court, unless counsel for a party is required to do so by local rule or order of the court, a written statement certifying that parties have met with the mediator.

(3) In the event the mediator and the parties agree and inform the court that the parties are engaging in good faith mediation, any pending hearing in the action filed by the parties shall be continued to a date certain.

(4) In no event shall a party be denied the right to proceed in court in the action filed because of failure to pay the mediator.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Selecting Cases for Mediation", see 17 Colo. Law. 2007 (1988).

Where petitioner files a verified, uncontroverted claim of physical and psychological abuse by husband, the trial court "shall not refer" such a case to mediation; the plain and obvious language of subsection (1) forbids a court from ordering mediation where a party claims physical and psychological abuse. Pearson v. District Court, 18th Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 512 (Colo. 1996).

This section does not require a party to file a declaration of abuse and an unwillingness to participate in mediation prior to the entry of a court order to mediate. Pearson v. District Court, 18th Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 512 (Colo. 1996).

Subsection (1) covers two distinct circumstances: First, it contains a mandatory command that a court "shall not refer" a case to mediation services where a party claims physical or psychological abuse, which requirement has no time limitations. Second, it contains a discretionary "compelling reasons" excusal that is subject to the five-day rule and exists independently of the mandatory excusal for physical or psychological abuse. Pearson v. District Court, 18th Jud. Dist., 924 P.2d 512 (Colo. 1996).

13-22-312. Applicability. This part 3 shall apply to all mediation services or dispute resolution programs conducted in this state, whether conducted through the office of dispute resolution or through a mediator or mediation organization.

13-22-313. Judicial referral to ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution.

(1) Any court of record, in its discretion, may refer a case to any ancillary form of alternative dispute resolution; except that the court shall not refer the case to any ancillary form of alternative dispute resolution where one of the parties claims that it has been the victim of physical or psychological abuse by the other party and states that it is thereby unwilling to enter into ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution. In addition, the court may exempt from referral any case in which a party files with the court, within five days of a referral order, a motion objecting to ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution and demonstrating compelling reasons why ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution should not be ordered. Compelling reasons may include, but are not limited to, that the costs of ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution would be higher than the requested relief and previous attempts to resolve the issues were not successful. Such forms of alternative dispute resolution may include, but are not limited to: arbitration, early neutral evaluation, med-arb, mini-trial, multi-door courthouse concepts, settlement conference, special master, summary jury trial, or any other form of alternative dispute resolution which the court deems to be an effective method for resolving the dispute in question. Parties and counsel are encouraged to seek the most appropriate forum for the resolution of their dispute. Judges may provide guidance or suggest an appropriate forum. However, nothing in this section shall impinge upon the right of parties to have their dispute tried in a court of law, including trial by jury.

(2) Ancillary programs may be established, made available, and promoted in any judicial district or combination of districts as designated by the chief judge of the affected district. Rules and regulations for ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution shall be promulgated by the director of the office of dispute resolution.

(3) All rules, regulations, and procedures established pursuant to this section shall be subject to the approval of the chief justice.

(4) Nothing in this section shall preclude any court from making a referral to mediation services provided for in this article.

(5) All referrals under this section shall be made subject to the availability of alternative dispute resolution programs. Parties referred to ancillary forms of alternative dispute resolution may select services offered by the office of dispute resolution or by other individuals or organizations.

(6) This section shall not apply in any civil action where injunctive or similar equitable relief is the only remedy sought.

ANNOTATION

This section and § 14-10-128.1 are in conflict and cannot be harmonized with respect to the standards for the appointment of a parenting coordinator if abuse by one parent is alleged by the other. Although this section bars the court from referring a case to any ancillary form of alternative dispute resolution if one of the parties claims abuse by the other party, under § 14-10-128.1, a mere claim of abuse by one parent is insufficient to bar the appointment of a parenting coordinator. Even documented evidence of domestic violence does not automatically bar such an appointment. Rather, the court is required only to consider the effect of the evidence on the parties' ability to engage in parenting coordination. In re Rozzi, 190 P.3d 815 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in Sego v. Mains, 41 Colo. App. 1, 578 P.2d 1069 (1978).

13-25-102. Mortality table as evidence. In all civil actions, special proceedings, or other modes of litigation in courts of justice or before magistrates or other persons having power and authority to receive evidence, when it is necessary to establish the expectancy of continued life of any person from any period of such person's life, whether he is living at the time or not, the table set out in section 13-25-103 shall be received as evidence, together with other evidence as to health, constitution, habits, and occupation of such person of such expectancy.

ANNOTATION

Tables are admissible where personal injuries are alleged to be permanent. Where in an action for personal injuries there is evidence that the disability complained of is permanent, the mortuary tables are admissible to establish the plaintiff's expectancy of life. Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912).

Under this section, a mortality table which has legislative recognition at any given time is evidence to be considered with other pertinent matter as bearing upon the life expectancy of person whose rights are being adjudicated; such table does not fix the liability of an employer, and under certain circumstances might be wholly disregarded by the industrial commission. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 557, 367 P.2d 597 (1961).

However, the tables are not conclusive, but are to be considered in connection with other evidence as to the health, habits, and condition of the injured party. Rio Grande S. R. R. v. Nichols, 52 Colo. 300, 123 P. 318 (1912); Riss & Co. v. Anderson, 108 Colo. 78, 114 P.2d 278 (1941); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 557, 367 P.2d 597 (1961).

Evidence as to the age, habits, and health of the absentee is admissible, because bearing upon the probable duration of his life. The mortuary table prescribed by this section is admissible for the reason that it bears upon the probable duration of his life. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Holck, 59 Colo. 416, 151 P. 916 (1915).

In such cases the litigant may avail himself of the admissibility of the mortality tables or not, at his pleasure. Gilligan v. Blakesley, 93 Colo. 370, 26 P.2d 808 (1933).

In determining the life expectancy of a claimant, the industrial commission may use any recognized expectancy tables without their formal introduction by either party at the hearing. Indus. Comm'n v. Big Six Coal Co., 72 Colo. 377, 211 P. 361 (1922) (decided prior to the abolition of the industrial commission in 1986).

13-25-104. Proof of handwriting. Comparison of a disputed writing, with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the court to be genuine, shall be permitted to be made by witnesses in all trials and proceedings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same may be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute.

Source: L. 1893: p. 264, § 1. R.S. 08: § 2492. C.L. § 6538. CSA: C. 63, § 4. CRS 53: § 52-1-4. C.R.S. 1963: § 52-1-4.

ANNOTATION

An expert in handwriting may depose as to the authenticity of the handwriting in question, though he acquires his knowledge of the writing of the person to whom it is ascribed merely by examination of specimens proven or admitted to be his genuine handwriting, such specimens being produced in court and the witness comparing them and stating his conclusions as to their similarity or dissimilarity. Salazar v. Taylor, 18 Colo. 538 (1893); Ausmus v. People, 47 Colo. 167, 107 P. 204 (1910).

It is not necessary that an expert testify as to the authenticity of the writing. If there is a genuine writing which may be used to compare the handwriting of the disputed handwritings, then such disputed writings are admissible into evidence. Lewis v. People, 174 Colo. 334, 483 P.2d 949 (1971).

Anyone can identify handwriting by comparison. The rule is that when a writing in issue is claimed on the one hand and denied upon the other to be the writing of a particular person, any other writing of that person's may be admitted in evidence for the mere purpose of comparison with the writing in dispute, whether the latter is susceptible of or supported by direct proof or not; but before any such writing shall be admissible for such purpose, its genuineness must be found as a preliminary fact by the presiding judge, upon clear and undoubted evidence. Wilson v. Scroggs, 85 Colo. 537, 277 P. 784 (1929).

Preliminary determination of genuineness of writing. This section requires that before a disputed writing is admissible for comparison purposes, the court shall make a preliminary determination that the writing is genuine. In order for the court to make such a determination, the party offering the evidence must make a prima facie showing of genuineness based on clear and competent evidence. People v. Taylor, 197 Colo. 161, 591 P.2d 1017 (1979).

For proof of extraneous writing as genuine, see Bradford v. People, 22 Colo. 157, 43 P. 1013 (1896); Brindisi v. People, 76 Colo. 244, 230 P. 797 (1924).

Something must connect the authors of the two writings. Before such standards of comparison are admissible, there must be something to connect the author of them with the writing, the authenticity of which is in dispute. Wilson v. Scroggs, 85 Colo. 537, 277 P. 784 (1929).

If shown to be authentic it is admissible as standard of comparison. Where the genuineness of a signature is an issue, the court should allow all evidence which tends to establish the genuineness of a signature offered in evidence as a basis of comparison, and should then determine as a matter of law whether the authenticity of such signature has been established, and if this has been done to his satisfaction, then the proven signature should be admitted as a standard of comparison to be used by witnesses and jurors in determining the issue. Wilson v. Scroggs, 85 Colo. 537, 277 P. 784 (1929).

Disputed signature need not be admitted to be genuine if comparison shows it is. In an action involving a disputed signature, it is not the law that before an alleged genuine signature may be admitted in evidence as a standard of comparison, it must be admitted to be genuine. If the evidence establishes the signature to be genuine to the satisfaction of the court, it is admissible. Wilson v. Scroggs, 85 Colo. 537, 277 P. 784 (1929).

The words "the same" appearing in this section refer to "writing proved" as well as to "disputed writing" and the words "and such writings" may well have been stricken from the original bill as superfluous. Brindisi v. People, 76 Colo. 244, 230 P. 797 (1924).

This section is not applicable to a prosecution for forgery in a federal court. Withaup v. United States, 127 F. 530 (8th Cir. 1903).

Applied in People v. Todd, 189 Colo. 117, 538 P.2d 433 (1975).

13-25-105. Certificate of register - patent. The official certificate of any register or receiver of any land office of the United States to any fact or matter on record in his office shall be received and held competent to prove the fact as certified. The certificate of any such register of the entry or purchase of any tract of land within his district shall be taken to be evidence of title in the party who made such entry or purchase, or his heirs and assigns; but a patent for land shall be considered a better legal and paramount title in the patentee, his heirs, or his assigns than such register's certificate of the entry and purchase of the same land.

ANNOTATION

The statute was clearly intended to cover only facts and matters affirmatively appearing on record in the land office; and it is too simple a proposition to admit of argument that it does not authorize receiving in evidence a certificate stating that a certain fact or matter does not appear on record. Knoth v. Barclay, 8 Colo. 300, 6 P. 924 (1885).

Land entered as herein prescribed has always been held to be the subject of contract and sale, and the receipt of the money and the issuance of the certificate have universally been held to be such a segregation of the land from the public domain as to entitle the party to his patent, and to warrant legal proceedings for the purposes of procuring it. Godding v. Decker, 3 Colo. App. 198, 32 P. 832 (1893).

A purchase money receipt from land office is prima facie evidence. A receipt for the purchase money of lands issued by the receiver of a land office of the United States is prima facie evidence of title to the lands therein described. Carson v. Cudworth, 26 Colo. App. 131, 140 P. 935 (1914).

A record of a receiver's receipt constitutes recorded title within the meaning of this section. Dallemand v. Mannon, 4 Colo. App. 262, 35 P. 679 (1894).

A receiver's duplicate receipt is by this section made evidence of title in the person making the entry or purchase of the land, and is entitled to be recorded. Dallemand v. Mannon, 4 Colo. App. 262, 35 P. 679 (1894).

It has been held good as against a subsequent patent. A receiver's receipt, regular in all respects, both as to its form and the antecedent acts of entryman leading up to it, has been held to be good as against a subsequent patent issued by the government. Carson v. Cudworth, 26 Colo. App. 131, 140 P. 935 (1914).

A patent is conclusive evidence of compliance with federal statutes. A patent for lands purchased of the United States relates to the entry, and is conclusive evidence of compliance by the entryman with all the requirements of the federal statutes. Carson v. Cudworth, 26 Colo. App. 131, 140 P. 935 (1914).

A purchaser cannot complain that vendor has only a final receipt. That the vendor holds only a final receipt, and not a patent for the land, is not a defect of which the purchaser can complain. Godding v. Decker, 3 Colo. App. 198, 32 P. 832 (1893).

13-25-106. Judicial notice of laws of other jurisdictions. (1) Every court of this state shall take judicial notice of the common law and statutes of every state, territory, and other jurisdiction of the United States.

(2) The court may inform itself of such laws in such manner as it may deem proper, and the court may call upon counsel to aid it in obtaining such information.

(3) The determination of such laws shall be made by the court and not by the jury and is reviewable.

(4) Any party may also present to the trial court any admissible evidence of such laws, but, to enable a party to offer evidence of the law in another jurisdiction or to ask that judicial notice be taken thereof, reasonable notice shall be given to the adverse parties either in the pleadings or otherwise.

(5) The law of a jurisdiction other than those referred to in subsection (1) of this section is an issue for the court but shall not be subject to the foregoing provisions concerning judicial notice.

(6) This section shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it and may be cited as the "Uniform Judicial Notice of Foreign Law Act".

cost and expense due from any piece of real estate, or from the owner thereof, because of the construction of any kind of local improvement in the taxing district wherein such property is located, or in front of, abutting upon, or adjacent to said realty within any such municipality shall be accepted and treated by such tribunals as prima facie evidence of the lawful existence, and due and proper performance of all preliminary steps essential to make such assessment a legal and valid assessment against the realty or owner thereof, or both, against whom it appears to be made.

ANNOTATION

Under this section the filing of a proper affidavit lays the foundation for the introduction of secondary evidence as to the contents of a lost instrument; but where such secondary evidence is admitted, it must be clear and satisfactory as to the contents of the document involved, and if the proceeding is one for specific performance, the evidence must be strong and unequivocal. Walker v. Drogmund, 101 Colo. 521, 74 P.2d 1235 (1937).

Affidavit must show original is unavailable. The reception of secondary evidence of the contents of a writing in the absence of a showing that the original is unavailable is error. Epple v. First Nat'l Bank, 143 Colo. 319, 352 P.2d 796 (1960).

Affidavit was not sufficient to comply with this section where it was not based upon the affiant's personal knowledge of the existence of the document and his personal knowledge that it was lost. People v. Heckers, 37 Colo. App. 166, 543 P.2d 1311 (1975).

It need not be lost as long as affiant does not have power to produce. This section does not require proof that the original deed has been lost. It is sufficient if affidavit be made that the original is not in the affiant's possession or power to produce. Coleman v. Davis, 13 Colo. 98, 21 P. 1018 (1889).

The greater the value of the instrument, the more conclusive should be the proof of its existence and contents. People v. Heckers, 37 Colo. App. 166, 543 P.2d 1311 (1975).

Secondary evidence adduced to prove contents of lost instrument must be clear and convincing especially in criminal case. People v. Heckers, 37 Colo. App. 166, 543 P.2d 1311 (1975).

Nothing in this section shall be construed to restrict the right of any party to any legal proceeding to subpoena a state employee to testify to matters going beyond the foundation or authenticity of the records of the executive department.

ANNOTATION

This section concerns the authentication of official state documents and not the competency or relevance of the documents themselves. Liber v. Flor, 160 Colo. 7, 415 P.2d 332 (1966); Orth v. Bauer, 163 Colo. 136, 429 P.2d 279 (1967).

It is a codification of the hearsay exception for official records. The section is not specific in requiring the admission of findings, adjudications, and conclusions, and, thus, it is nothing more than a codification of the common-law exception to the hearsay rule in favor of official records. Orth v. Bauer, 163 Colo. 136, 429 P.2d 279 (1967).

The records themselves cannot contain hearsay. The section does not authorize the reception in evidence of every report of an investigation regardless of its hearsay character and of whether it contains conclusions and adjudications. Orth v. Bauer, 163 Colo. 136, 429 P.2d 279 (1967).

Where the officer was not present, and the defendant was not given the opportunity to cross-examine him, the entire report was properly excluded. "Official documents" to be admissible in evidence must first be tested by common-law principles of testimonial competency. The mere writing down of hearsay does not remove the bar to its admission. Orth v. Bauer, 163 Colo. 136, 429 P.2d 279 (1967).

The court has invariably noticed the documents evidencing action of the general assembly, subscribed by the proper officials, and found in the office of the secretary of state. They are accepted as prima facie evidence of the law, and whoever asserts the contrary has the burden of proof. Harrison v. People ex rel. Whatley, 57 Colo. 137, 140 P. 203 (1914).

13-25-116. Water officials' records. In all civil actions, special proceedings, or other modes of litigation before a water judge or referee having power to receive evidence, all records, reports, tables, and other documents of division engineers and water commissioners of the state of Colorado and all records, streamflow tables, rating curves, automatic water register sheets, and special reports of the state engineer and his deputies, hydrographers, and employees, and of the division engineers of the several divisions, and all records of canal headgate keepers, reservoir outlet keepers, gauge readers, and other systematically compiled records or reports of diversions, storage, and discharge of waters or of the flows of streams on file in or constituting a part of the records and files of the state engineer of the state of Colorado, and all copies duly certified as correct by the state engineer or his deputy shall be admitted as evidence of the facts contained therein.

ANNOTATION

Water commissioners' reports will be assumed by an appellate court to be properly verified. Where portions of water commissioners' reports are admitted in evidence, it will be assumed on review, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that they were properly verified where such verification is required by statute. Commonwealth Irrigation Co. v. Rio Grande Canal Water Users Ass'n, 96 Colo. 478, 45 P.2d 622 (1935).

An objection to their admissibility cannot first be made on appeal. A party may not successfully urge an objection to the admission in evidence of water commissioners' reports on the ground that they were not sworn to, where the question is raised for the first time in the reviewing court. Commonwealth Irrigation Co. v. Rio Grande Canal Water Users Ass'n, 96 Colo. 478, 45 P. 2d 622 (1935).

The water court did not abuse its discretion when it admitted the state's water records into evidence despite fact the state failed to furnish copies to the owner of the water rights within time specified in the pretrial order, when reason for the delay was explained, the exhibit was matter of public record, and additional time to respond was given. Masters Inv. Co. v. Irrigationists Ass'n, 702 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1985).

13-25-117. Parties plaintiff. In trials of actions upon contracts, expressed or implied, where the action is brought by partners or by joint payees or obligees, it shall not be necessary for the plaintiff, in order to maintain any such action, to prove the partnership of the individuals named in such action or to prove the first names or surnames of such partners or of joint payees or obligees, but the names of the partners or joint payees or obligees shall be presumed to be truly set forth in the declaration, petition, or bill. Nothing in this section shall prevent the defendant from pleading in abatement or proving on the trial that more persons should have been made plaintiffs, or that more persons have been made plaintiffs than have the legal right to sue, in which event the defendant's right shall be as at common law.

13-25-118. Joint defendants. In actions upon express contracts against two or more defendants alleged to have been made or executed by such defendants as partners or joint obligors or payors, proof of the joint liability or partnership of the defendants, or their first names or surnames, shall not in the first instance be required to entitle the plaintiff to judgment, unless such proof is rendered necessary by the filing of pleas denying the execution of such writing, verified by affidavit as required by law.

ANNOTATION

Joint liability as partners need not be proved unless denied. Under this section a plaintiff is not required to prove the joint liability of defendants sued as partners, unless the execution of the instrument sued on is denied by plea verified by affidavit. Litchfield v. Daniels, 1 Colo. 268 (1871).

Denial of partnership may be made by general issue, without oath. In assumpsit against two persons as partners to recover damages for failure to deliver stock pursuant to a contract which was not in writing, the general issue by one of the defendants, without oath, operates to deny the partnership. Rogers v. Nuckolls, 2 Colo. 281 (1874).

13-25-119. Dying declarations. (1) The dying declarations of a deceased person are admissible in evidence in all civil and criminal trials and other proceedings before courts, commissions, and other tribunals to the same extent and for the same purposes that they might have been admissible had the deceased survived and been sworn as a witness in the proceedings, under the following restrictions. To render the declarations of the deceased competent evidence, it must be satisfactorily proved:

(a) That at the time of the making of such declaration he was conscious of approaching death and believed there was no hope of recovery;

(b) That such declaration was voluntarily made, and not through the persuasion of any person;

(c) That such declaration was not made in answer to interrogatories calculated to lead the deceased to make any particular statement;

(d) That he was of sound mind at the time of making the declaration.

It is admission of declarations resulting from persuasion or leading questions that this section seeks to prohibit. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Fact that declaration was in response to question does not violate either subsection (1)(b) or (1)(c) of this section. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Declarant need not declare that he has sense of impending death. To make a dying declaration admissible in evidence it is not necessary that the declarant should have stated that at the time it was made under a sense of impending death. It is enough if it satisfactorily appears, in any mode, that they were made under that sanction; whether it be directly proved by the express language of the declarant, or be inferred from his evident danger. Dolan v. People, 168 Colo. 19, 449 P.2d 828 (1969).

Deceased motorist’s statement, in regard to collision, admitted under this section where all the essential elements of a dying declaration under this section were positively established. Barsch v. Hammond, 110 Colo. 441, 135 P.2d 519 (1943).

Statements made two months prior to death admissible. Where a victim of homicide caused by an abortion made statements two months before her death as to who performed the unlawful operation, knowing at the time that death was inevitable, such statements would be admissible under this section. Ferguson v. People, 118 Colo. 54, 192 P.2d 523 (1948).

In an abortion case where deceased was not conscious of approaching death, and where it was not a voluntary statement, but was made through persuasion by her physician in order to obtain a history of her case, her statement did not satisfy the requirements of this section so as to make it admissible. Polly v. People, 107 Colo. 6, 108 P.2d 220 (1940).

Judge passes on admissibility. The rule as to determination of the sufficiency of the foundation proof which will allow dying declarations to be admitted into evidence is that the judge is to pass on the preliminary conditions necessary to the admissibility. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

After dying declaration has been admitted, the weight to be given to it is matter exclusively for jury. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

13-25-120. Corporate resolutions and minutes. (1) A certified copy of a resolution purportedly adopted by a meeting of the board of directors, or by a meeting of the stockholders of a corporation, or of the minutes or of a portion of the minutes of a meeting of the board of directors or stockholders of a corporation, when the same purports to be certified by an officer of such corporation and purports to have the seal of such corporation affixed to such certification, shall be admissible in evidence as prima facie evidence of the adoption of such resolution or as prima facie evidence of the truth of the statements or recitals contained in such minutes or portion of such minutes insofar as the same may affect the title to real estate, and it shall not be necessary to prove any facts as the foundation for the admission of the same in evidence. If any such certified copy has been filed for record in the office of the county clerk and recorder of the county where the real estate affected thereby is situate, the record thereof in the office of said clerk and recorder, or a certified copy of such record certified by the county clerk and recorder, shall be admissible in evidence in the same manner as the certified copy itself.

(2) The word “corporation” as used in this section shall include both foreign and domestic corporations. The words “board of directors” as used in this section shall include both a board of directors and any other board or body of a corporation which has powers and duties similar to those exercised by a board of directors. The word “stockholders” as used in this section shall include both stockholders and members of corporations.

(3) The provisions of this section apply to certified copies of resolutions adopted prior to April 16, 1941, as well as those adopted after such date, and to certified copies of minutes of meetings or portions of minutes of meetings held prior to April 16, 1941, as well as those held after such date, and to certified copies which were certified prior to April 16, 1941, as well as those which were certified after such date.

13-25-121. Reports of death. A written finding of actual death, made by the secretary of the Army, the secretary of the Navy, or other officer or employee of the United States authorized to make such finding pursuant to the federal missing persons act (50 U.S.C. app. supp. 1001-17), as now or hereafter amended, or a duly certified copy of such finding may be received in any court, office, or other place in this state as evidence of the death of the person therein found to be dead in place of and with like effect as a state certificate of death. A written finding by such federal officer or employee of presumed death because missing in action or a duly certified copy of such finding after one year from the cessation of war in that theatre of war where missing may be received in any court, office, or other place in this state as evidence of the death of the person therein found presumed dead and the date, circumstances, and place of disappearance.

Person missing, interned, or captured. An official written report or record, or duly certified copy thereof, that a person is missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, or beleaguered, besieged, or captured by an enemy, or is dead, or is alive made by any officer or employee of the United States authorized by the act referred to in section 13-25-121, or by any other law of the United States to make the same, may be received in any court, office, or other place in this state as evidence that such person was, on the date of the certificate, missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, or beleaguered, besieged, or captured by an enemy, or was dead, or was alive, as the case may be.

13-25-123. Report deemed pursuant to law. For purposes of sections 13-25-121 and 13-25-122, any finding, report, or record, or duly certified copy thereof, purporting to have been signed by an officer or employee of the United States as described in sections 13-25-121 and 13-25-122 shall prima facie be deemed to have been signed and issued by such officer or employee pursuant to law, and the person signing same shall prima facie be deemed to have acted within the scope of his authority. If a copy purports to have been certified by a person authorized by law to certify the same, that certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of his authority to so certify.

13-25-124. Libel and slander - how pleaded. In an action for libel or slander, it shall not be necessary to state in the complaint any extrinsic facts for the purpose of showing the application to the plaintiff of the defamatory matter out of which the cause of action arose. It shall be sufficient to state generally that the same was published or spoken concerning the plaintiff; and, if such allegation is controverted, the plaintiff shall establish on the trial that it was so published or spoken.

Annotator's note: For statements by officers within scope of duties as an absolute privilege, see Barr v. Matteo, 360 U.S. 564, 79 S. Ct. 1335, 3 L. Ed.2d 1434 (1959) and Howard v. Lyons, 360 U.S. 593, 79 S. Ct. 1331, 3 L. Ed.2d 1454 (1959).

Identity of party who committed libel may be generally pleaded. It has been held under a similar statute that even where the person against whom the libelous charge is made is so ambiguously described that, without the aid of extrinsic facts, his identity cannot be ascertained, it is sufficient to state generally that it was published concerning the plaintiff and that the averments and colloquium which were formerly necessary to connect the libel with the plaintiff may be dispensed with. Craig v. Pueblo Press Publ'g Co., 5 Colo. App. 208, 37 P. 945 (1894).

It is proper for the injured party to plead that the defamatory words were spoken by the master, although in fact they were uttered by his employee. In such a situation the acts of the servant are the acts of the master, where the defamatory words were spoken or published by the authority or with the consent of the latter. Kendall v. Lively, 94 Colo. 483, 31 P.2d 343 (1934).

Evidence of pecuniary loss is unnecessary to a right of action for a libelous charge of attempt to commit murder. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Miner, 12 Colo. 77, 20 P. 345 (1888).

Effect of retraction demand. Whether a demand to the publisher for retraction of an allegedly false statement should be a condition precedent to the commencement of an action for libel is more properly within the legislative ambit than the subject of initial judicial purview. Walker v. Colo. Springs Sun, Inc., 188 Colo. 86, 538 P.2d 450, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1025, 96 S. Ct. 469, 46 L. Ed.2d 399 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Diversified Management, Inc. v. Denver Post, Inc., 653 P.2d 1103 (Colo. 1982).

Certain foreseeable "self-publication" can impose responsibility for publication on an originator, when the originator of the defamatory statement has reason to believe that the person defamed will be under a strong compulsion to disclose the contents of the defamatory statement to a third party. Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988) (decided prior to enactment of § 13-25-125.5).

13-25-125. Justification - pleaded and proved. In an action for libel or slander, the defendant, in his answer, may allege both the truth of the matter charged as defamatory and any mitigating circumstances to reduce the amount of damages; and, whether he proves the justification or not, he may give in evidence the mitigating circumstances.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Law of Libel in Colorado", see 28 Dicta 121 (1951). For article, "Emotional Distress, The First Amendment, and 'This kind of speech': A Heretical Perspective on Hustler Magazine v. Falwell", see 50 U. Colo. L. Rev. 315 (1989).

II. DEFENSES.

A. Truth.

Truth of published matter, established by evidence, is a complete justification and de- fense. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Mosman, 15 Colo. 399, 24 P. 1051 (1890); Gomba v. McLaughlin, 180 Colo. 232, 504 P.2d 337 (1972).

The truth of the charge must be shown. Where the publication is not privileged, the rule is that where the libelous article is published as being alleged in the complaint, it is not sufficient as a defense to show that it was thus alleged, but the truth of the charge must be shown. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Miner, 3 Colo. App. 568, 34 P. 485 (1893).

He only must justify that the gist of the matter is true. A defendant asserting truth as a defense in a libel action is not required to justify every word of the alleged defamatory matter; it is sufficient if the substance, the gist, the sting, of the matter is true. Gomba v. McLaughlin, 180 Colo. 232, 504 P.2d 337 (1972).

Question to be decided is whether there is substantial difference between truth and libelous statement. Where the defendant asserts truth as a defense in a libel suit, the question, a factual one, is whether there is a substantial difference between the allegedly libelous statement and the truth; or stated differently whether the statement produces a different effect upon the reader than that which would be produced by the literal truth of the matter. Gomba v. McLaughlin, 180 Colo. 232, 504 P.2d 337 (1972).

The defendant may plead the truth of the alleged libel without admitting the publication. Daniels v. Stock, 21 Colo. App. 651, 126 P. 281 (1912).

Even where libel is per se. Evidence of the truth of any allegedly libelous statement is admissible, even where the libel is per se, or where the publication is admittedly false. Gomba v. McLaughlin, 180 Colo. 232, 504 P.2d 337 (1972).

Defamatory statement of public concern libelous only if knowingly false. When a defamatory statement has been published concerning one who is not a public official or a public figure, but the matter involved is of public or general concern, the publisher of the statement will be liable to the person defamed if, and only if, he knew the statement to be false or made the statement with reckless disregard for whether it was true or not. Walker v. Colo. Springs Sun, Inc., 188 Colo. 86, 538 P.2d 450, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1025, 96 S. Ct. 469, 46 L. Ed.2d 399 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Diversified Mgmt., Inc. v. Denver Post, Inc., 653 P.2d 1103 (Colo. 1982).

For definition of "reckless disregard", see Diversified Mgmt., Inc. v. Denver Post, Inc., 653 P.2d 1103 (Colo. 1982).

Publisher can assume the truth of facts contained in his reporters' stories but this rule cannot apply to the publication of letters to the editor selected for publication in the paper by the publisher. Walker v. Colo. Springs Sun, Inc., 188 Colo. 86, 538 P.2d 450, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1025, 96 S. Ct. 469, 46 L. Ed.2d 399 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Diversified Mgmt., Inc. v. Denver Post, Inc., 653 P.2d 1103 (Colo. 1982).

There can be no libel by innuendo of a public figure if the allegedly libelous statements are true. Pietrafesa v. D.P.I., Inc., 757 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1988).

Question of truth is jury question. One who is alleged to have defamed another has a constitutional and statutory right to assert the truth of the defamatory statement and to have a jury decide such a defense. Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988).

B. Qualified Privilege.

Qualified privilege is an affirmative defense to be pleaded by defendant. Radovich v.

Douglas, 84 Colo. 149, 268 P. 575 (1928); Morley v. Post Printing & Publ'g Co., 84 Colo. 41, 268 P. 540 (1928).

The defense of qualified privilege is precluded where it is not pleaded, and facts alleged in the complaint, upon which it might be based, are denied. Radovich v. Douglas, 84 Colo. 149, 268 P. 575 (1928).

This defense may be pleaded without admitting the publication. Daniels v. Stock, 21 Colo. App. 651, 126 P. 281 (1912).

Defense of privilege is destroyed if plaintiff proves actual malice. It is the law that the condition that makes a published communication privileged is that it be not made maliciously. In such a case the law does not imply malice from the publication itself, but casts upon the plaintiff the burden of alleging and proving actual malice; but if he does this, the defense of privilege is destroyed. Morley v. Post Printing & Publ'g Co., 84 Colo. 41, 268 P. 540 (1928).

If the complaint sufficiently pleads facts showing that the publication is privileged, then it is not necessary that defendant affirmatively plead that defense. Radovich v. Douglas, 84 Colo. 149, 268 P. 575 (1928).

This point is raised by demurrer. Where it appears from the allegations of the complaint that the publication sued upon is privileged, a demurrer is the proper method of raising the point. Morley v. Post Printing & Publ'g Co., 84 Colo. 41, 268 P. 540 (1928).

Balancing test is used to determine when a qualified privilege should protect a communication. It is a question of law requiring the court to balance the interests protected by a privilege and the interests served by allowing a defamation action. Churchey v. Adolph Coors Co., 759 P.2d 1336 (Colo. 1988).

National labor policy does not require unqualified privilege be given employer in a defamation action based upon statements made in a grievance proceeding. Thompson v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 800 P.2d 1299 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 973, 112 S. Ct. 452, 116 L. Ed.2d 469 (1991).

A state law defamation action based upon statements made in a grievance or disciplinary proceeding may go forward when a qualified privilege for such statements is recognized. Thompson v. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo., 800 P.2d 1299 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 973, 112 S. Ct. 452, 116 L. Ed.2d 469 (1991).

III. MITIGATION OF DAMAGES.

Defendant may rely upon mitigating circumstances to reduce the damages, though pleaded in bar of the action. Rocky Mt. News Printing Co. v. Fridborn, 46 Colo. 440, 104 P. 956 (1909).

Even if publication was in fact false. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Mosman, 15 Colo. 399, 24 P. 1051 (1890).

The mitigating circumstances are limited to those tending to show a mitigation of the injury inflicted — a mitigation of the damages naturally flowing therefrom. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Miner, 12 Colo. 77, 20 P. 345 (1888).

Such as retraction by defendant. Thus, the circumstances showing the acts and conduct of the party inflicting injury by libel or slander in retracting or explaining the matter published, or anything else tending to lessen or to remove the injury or in any way to restore the injured party to the esteem previously enjoyed, are admissible in mitigation. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Miner, 12 Colo. 77; 20 P. 345 (1888).

Rumors and reports prior to publication are admissible. Giving our statute a liberal construction, and especially considering how the pleadings in this action are framed, we are of the opinion that common reports and rumors, to the same effect as the defamatory publication complained of, if circulated before such publication and without the agency of the defendant, were proper to be admitted in evidence, and should have been submitted to the jury by an appropriate and well-guarded instruction, not in any sense as a justification of the publication, but as matter tending in some degree, perhaps, to show that the plaintiff had suffered less damages than he might otherwise have sustained by reason of the publication. Republican Publ'g Co. v. Mosman, 15 Colo. 399, 24 P. 1051 (1890).

13-25-125.5. Libel and slander - self-publication. No action for libel or slander may be brought or maintained unless the party charged with such defamation has published, either orally or in writing, the defamatory statement to a person other than the person making the allegation of libel or slander. Self-publication, either orally or in writing, of the defamatory statement to a third person by the person making such allegation shall not give rise to a claim for libel or slander against the person who originally communicated the defamatory statement.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 759, § 1, effective April 8.

ANNOTATION

Certain foreseeable "self-publication" can impose responsibility for publication on an originator, when the originator of the defamatory statement has reason to believe that the person defamed will be under a strong compulsion to disclose the contents of the defamatory statement to a third party. Churchey v. Adolph

13-25-126. Genetic tests to determine parentage. (1) (a) (I) In any action, suit, or proceeding in which the parentage of a child is at issue, including but not limited to actions or proceedings pursuant to section 14-10-122 (6) or 19-4-107.3, C.R.S., upon motion of the court or any of the interested parties, the court shall order the alleged mother, the child or children, and the alleged father to submit to genetic testing and other appropriate testing of inherited characteristics, including but not limited to blood and tissue type, for the purpose of determining probability of parentage. If a party refuses to submit to these tests, the court may resolve the question of parentage against the party to enforce its order if the rights of others and the interests of justice so require.

(II) A court, pursuant to this section, or delegate child support enforcement unit pursuant to section 26-13.5-105, C.R.S., shall not order genetic testing of a child whose parentage has previously been determined by or pursuant to the law of another state, but a court may stay a support proceeding for such reasonable time as determined by the court to allow the party asserting the defense to pursue the nonparentage claim in the other state.

(b) The tests shall be conducted by a laboratory approved by an accreditation body designated by the secretary of the federal department of health and human services, utilizing any genetic test of a type generally acknowledged as reliable by such accreditation body. Costs of any such expert witness for the first test administered shall be fixed at a reasonable amount and shall be paid as the court orders. If the results of the tests or the expert analysis of inherited characteristics are disputed by any party, the court shall order that an additional test be made by the same or another laboratory at the expense of the party disputing the test results or analysis.

(c) Documentation from the testing laboratory of the following information is sufficient to establish a reliable chain of custody that makes the results of genetic testing admissible without testimony:

(I) The names and photographs of the individuals from whom specimens have been taken;

(II) The names of the individuals who collected the specimens;

(III) The places at which and dates on which the specimens were collected;

(IV) The names of the individuals who received the specimens in the testing laboratory; and

(V) The dates the specimens were received.

(d) A specimen used in genetic testing may consist of one or more samples or a combination of samples, of blood, buccal cells, bone, hair, or other body tissue or fluid. The specimen used in the testing need not be of the same kind for each individual undergoing genetic testing.

(e) Specimens and reports are confidential. An individual who intentionally releases an identifiable specimen of another individual for any purpose other than that relevant to the proceeding regarding parentage without a court order or the written permission of the individual who furnished the specimen commits a class 1 misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501 (1), C.R.S.

(f) A report of genetic testing shall be in a record, defined in section 19-1-103 (91.5), C.R.S., and signed under penalty of perjury by a designee of the testing laboratory. A report made pursuant to the requirements of this article is self-authenticating.

(g) Under this section, a man is presumed to be the father of a child if the genetic testing complies with the requirements of this section and the results disclose that the man is not excluded and that the man has at least a ninety-seven percent probability of paternity.

(h) A man presumed to be the father of the child pursuant to paragraph (g) of this subsection (1) may rebut the genetic testing results only by other genetic testing that satisfies the requirements of this section and that:

(I) Excludes the man as the genetic father of the child; or

(II) Identifies another man as the father of the child.

(i) The presumption of legitimacy of a child born during wedlock may be overcome, as provided in section 19-4-105 (2) (a), C.R.S., if the court finds that the conclusion of the experts conducting the tests, as disclosed by the evidence based upon the tests, shows that the husband or wife is not the parent of the child.

(2) Any objection to genetic testing results shall be made in writing not less than fifteen days before the first scheduled hearing at which the results may be introduced into evidence or fifteen days after motion for summary judgment is served on such person; except that a person shall object to the genetic testing results not less than twenty-four hours prior to the first scheduled hearing if such person did not receive the results fifteen or more days before such hearing. The test results shall be admissible as evidence of paternity in an action filed pursuant to article 10 of title 14, C.R.S., article 4 of title 19, C.R.S., or article 13.5 of title 26, C.R.S., without the need for foundation testimony or other proof of authenticity or accuracy.

(3) For good cause shown, the court may order genetic testing of a deceased individual.

(4) The court may order genetic testing of a brother of a man presumed to be the father of a child if the man is commonly believed to have an identical brother and evidence suggests that the brother may be the genetic father of the child. If genetic testing excludes none of the brothers as the genetic father, and each brother satisfies the requirements as the presumed father of the child under section 19-4-105, C.R.S., without consideration of another identical brother being presumed to be the father of the child, the court may rely on nongenetic evidence to adjudicate which brother is the father of the child.

The presumption of legitimacy is one of the strongest known to law, and, prior to the adoption of this section, could be overcome only by proof of nonaccess or impotency of the husband; the rule has now been broadened by this section with respect to blood tests in cases where definite exclusion is established. Beck v. Beck, 153 Colo. 90, 384 P.2d 731 (1963).

Under this section, a reputed father is entitled as a matter of right to have blood tests made and to have such tests received in evidence when definite exclusion is established and proper foundation therefor is laid. Beck v. Beck, 153 Colo. 90, 384 P.2d 731 (1963).

The right to have blood tests performed cannot be denied an indigent defendant without violating the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution. Franklin v. District Court, 194 Colo. 189, 571 P.2d 1072 (1977).

Right to genetic testing does not apply where a legal paternity judgment was already entered and a challenge based on mistake of material fact is barred by the six-month time limit set forth in C.R.C.P. 60(b). People ex rel. J.A.U. v R.L.C., 47 P.3d 327 (Colo. 2002).

This section and former § 19-6-117 (now § 19-4-117) are inconsistent on the question of who bears the cost of additional blood tests in paternity actions but this section controls. L.D.G. v. E.R., 723 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1986).

Conclusive evidence overcomes presumption of legitimacy. Where accuracy of blood test relating to paternity of child was not challenged by the mother and shows conclusively that husband could not have been the father of the child, the evidence of such tests was competent and sufficient to overcome the presumption of legitimacy. Beck v. Beck, 153 Colo. 90, 384 P.2d 731 (1963).

It is abundantly clear that the general assembly intended the section for paternity proceedings to be the only vehicle for establishing paternity because under the statute the putative father has the right to trial by jury in paternity proceedings and blood grouping tests may be ordered by the court and received as evidence, whereas the statute on support proceedings allows neither of the above. In re People in Interest of L.B., 179 Colo. 11, 498 P.2d 1157 (1972), dismissed, 410 U.S. 976, 93 S. Ct. 1497, 36 L. Ed.2d 173 (1973).

No basis for diagnostic testing of minor. There is no statutory basis for a guardian ad litem obtaining, in a paternity proceeding, genetic testing, at the expense of the department of social services or a county, to provide a basis for diagnosing problems that a minor child may encounter in later years. 13-25-126.5. Documents arising from environmental self-evaluation - admissibility in evidence. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that protection of the environment is enhanced by the public's voluntary compliance with environmental laws and that the public will benefit from incentives to identify and remedy environmental compliance issues. It is further declared that limited expansion of the protection against disclosure will encourage such voluntary compliance and improve environmental quality and that the voluntary provisions of this act will not inhibit the exercise of the regulatory authority by those entrusted with protecting our environment.

(2) For the purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Administrative law judge" means any person appointed to be an administrative law judge pursuant to part 10 of article 30 of title 24, C.R.S.

(b) "Environmental audit report" means any document, including any report, finding, communication, or opinion or any draft of a report, finding, communication, or opinion, related to and prepared as a result of a voluntary self-evaluation that is done in good faith.

(c) "Environmental law" means any requirement contained in article 20.5 of title 8, C.R.S., articles 7, 8, 11, and 15 of title 25, C.R.S., or article 20 of title 30, C.R.S., in regulations promulgated under such provisions, or in any orders, permits, licenses, or closure plans under such provisions.

(d) "In camera review" means a hearing or review in a courtroom, hearing room, or chambers to which the general public is not admitted. After such hearing or review, the content of the oral and other evidence and statements of the judge and counsel shall be held in confidence by those participating in or present at the hearing or review, and any transcript of the hearing or review shall be sealed and not considered a public record, until and unless its contents are disclosed by a court or administrative law judge having jurisdiction over the matter.

(e) "Voluntary self-evaluation" means a self-initiated assessment, audit, or review, not otherwise expressly required by environmental law, that is performed by any person or entity, for itself, either by an employee or employees employed by such person or entity who are assigned the responsibility of performing such assessment, audit, or review or by a consultant engaged by such person or entity expressly and specifically for the purpose of performing such assessment, audit, or review to determine whether such person or entity is in compliance with environmental laws. Once initiated, such voluntary self-evaluation shall be completed within a reasonable period of time. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize uninterrupted voluntary self-evaluations.

(3) An environmental audit report is privileged and is not admissible in any legal action or administrative proceeding and is not subject to any discovery pursuant to the rules of civil procedure, criminal procedure, or administrative procedure, unless:

(a) The entity or person for whom the environmental audit report was prepared, whether the environmental audit report was prepared by the entity or by a consultant hired by the entity, waives the privilege under this section;

(b) (I) A court of record, or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., an administrative law judge, after an in camera review, determines that:

(A) The environmental audit report shows evidence that the person or entity for which the environmental audit report was prepared is not or was not in compliance with an environmental law; and

(B) The person or entity did not initiate appropriate efforts to achieve compliance with the environmental law or complete any necessary permit application promptly after the noncompliance with the environmental law was discovered and, as a result, the person or entity did not or will not achieve compliance with the environmental law or complete the necessary permit application within a reasonable amount of time.

(II) For the purposes of this paragraph (b) only, if the evidence shows noncompliance by a person or entity with more than one environmental law, the person or entity may demonstrate that appropriate efforts to achieve compliance were or are being taken by instituting a comprehensive program that establishes a phased schedule of actions to be taken to bring the person or entity into compliance with all of such environmental laws.

(c) A court of record, or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., an administrative law judge, after an in camera review, determines that compelling circumstances exist that make it necessary to admit the environmental audit report into evidence or that make it necessary to subject the environmental audit report to discovery procedures;

(d) A court of record, or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., an administrative law judge, after an in camera review, determines that the privilege is being asserted for a fraudulent purpose or that the environmental audit report was prepared to avoid disclosure of information in an investigative, administrative, or judicial proceeding that was underway, that was imminent, or for which the entity or person had been provided written notification that an investigation into a specific violation had been initiated; or

(e) A court of record, or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., an administrative law judge, after an in camera review, determines that the information contained in the environmental audit report demonstrates a clear, present, and impending danger to the public health or the environment in areas outside of the facility property.

(4) The self-evaluation privilege created by this section does not apply to:

(a) Documents or information required to be developed, maintained, or reported pursuant to any environmental law or any other law or regulation;

(b) Documents or other information required to be available or furnished to a regulatory agency pursuant to any environmental law or any other law or regulation;

(c) Information obtained by a regulatory agency through observation, sampling, or monitoring;

(d) Information obtained through any source independent of the environmental audit report or any person covered under section 13-90-107 (1) (j) (I) (A);

(e) Documents existing prior to the commencement of and independent of the voluntary self-evaluation;

(f) Documents prepared subsequent to the completion of and independent of the voluntary self-evaluation; or

(g) Any information, not otherwise privileged, including the privilege created by this section, that is developed or maintained in the course of regularly conducted business activity or regular practice.

(5) (a) Upon a showing by any party, based upon independent knowledge, that probable cause exists to believe that an exception to the self-evaluation privilege under subsection (3) of this section is applicable to an environmental audit report or that the privilege does not apply to the environmental audit report pursuant to the provisions of subsection (4) of this section, then a court of record or, pursuant to section 24-4-105, C.R.S., any administrative law judge, may allow such party limited access to the environmental audit report for the purposes of an in camera review only. The court of record or the administrative law judge may grant such limited access to all or part of the environmental audit report under the provisions of this subsection (5) upon such conditions as may be necessary to protect the confidentiality of the environmental audit report. A moving party who obtains access to an environmental audit report pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (5) may not divulge any information from the report except as specifically allowed by the court or administrative law judge.

(b) (I) If any party divulges all or any part of the information contained in an environmental audit report in violation of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) or if any other person or entity knowingly divulges or disseminates all or any part of the information contained in an environmental audit report that was provided to such person or entity in violation of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5), such party or other person or entity is liable for any damages caused by the divulgence or dissemination of the information that are incurred by the person or entity for which the environmental audit report was prepared.

(II) If any public entity, public employee, or public official divulges all or any part of the information contained in an environmental audit report in violation of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) or knowingly divulges or disseminates all or any part of the information contained in an environmental audit report that was provided to such public entity, public employee, or public official in violation of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (5), such public entity, public employee, or public official shall be guilty of a class 1 misdemeanor, may be found in contempt of court by a court of record, and may be assessed a penalty not to exceed ten thousand dollars by a court of record or an administrative law judge.

(6) Nothing in this section limits, waives, or abrogates the scope or nature of any statutory or common-law privilege.

(7) A person or entity asserting a voluntary self-evaluation privilege has the burden of proving a prima facie case as to the privilege. A party seeking disclosure of an environmental audit report has the burden of proving that such privilege does not exist under this section.

(8) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (3) of this section, the existence of an environmental audit report shall be subject to discovery proceedings pursuant to the rules of civil procedure, criminal procedure, or administrative procedure; except that the contents of such a report or any other privileged information contained therein shall remain confidential.

(9) This section applies to voluntary self-evaluations that are performed on or after June 1, 1994.

13-25-127. Civil actions - degree of proof required. (1) Any provision of the law to the contrary notwithstanding and except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, the burden of proof in any civil action shall be by a preponderance of the evidence. The provisions of this subsection (1) shall not apply to the burden of proof required in determining the validity of any legislative enactment.

(2) Exemplary damages against the party against whom the claim is asserted shall only be awarded in a civil action when the party asserting the claim proves beyond a reasonable doubt the commission of a wrong under the circumstances set forth in section 13-21-102. Nothing in this subsection (2) shall be construed as preventing a party asserting the claim from being awarded money damages or other appropriate relief, other than exemplary damages, if he sustains the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence.

(3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 95, p. 15, § 5, effective March 9, 1995.)

Burden of proof in quiet title action to obtain title by adverse possession is preponderance of evidence, as required by this section, since such action does not constitute a taking, nor does it raise fundamental constitutional concerns. Burden of party asserting equitable grounds. The party attempting to set aside a transaction on equitable grounds should only be required to prove the truth of his contentions by a preponderance of the evidence. Page v. Clark, 197 Colo. 306, 592 P.2d 792 (1979).

Burden in proceedings to terminate parental rights. In the absence of a specific directive from the general assembly to use the "clear and convincing evidence" standard as the burden of proof in proceedings to terminate parental rights, courts are compelled to use the "preponderance of evidence" standard of civil actions. People in Interest of B.J.D., 626 P.2d 727 (Colo. App. 1981).

Burden of proof does not shift. The burden of proof resting upon the plaintiff to prove the elements of his case, as determined by the pleadings, by a preponderance of the evidence, does not shift during the course of trial, although it may be aided by a presumption or a shift of the burden of going forward with the evidence once the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. *Exch. Where preponderance acceptable burden in federal law controversy. Although the right to mine claims located on federal land is derived from federal law, there is no provision made as to the quantum of proof necessary to prevail in a dispute over title to those claims. Thus, the application of state law imposing a preponderance of the evidence regarding burden of proof is not in conflict with the national policy for mining claims. *Silver Core Mining Co. v. Proof by clear and convincing evidence is required in guardianship proceedings because of the possibility of being deprived of basic liberties. Sabrosky v. Denver DDS, 781 P.2d 106 (Colo. App. 1989).

This section is inapplicable to a motion to set aside a default judgment. A motion to set aside a default judgment is not a "civil action" but is instead a simple procedural motion taking place within the context of a substantive "civil action". Borer v. Lewis, 91 P.3d 375 (Colo. 2004).

In enacting this section, the general assembly did not legislatively override the "clear and convincing" burden of proof that has been applied to proceedings to set aside de- fault judgments. To decide otherwise would require the court to find the statute unconstitutional as an impermissible infringement on the judiciary's authority to promulgate procedural rules. Borer v. Lewis, 91 P.3d 375 (Colo. 2004).

Higher standard of clear and convincing evidence is required for setting aside of default judgment. Salle v. Howe, 757 P.2d 154 (Colo. App. 1988). (Holding modified in White Front Auto Sales, Inc. v. Mygatt, 810 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1990)).

13-25-128. Rules of evidence - grant of authority subject to reservation. The supreme court of the state of Colorado shall have the power to prescribe general rules of evidence for the courts of record in the state of Colorado. Such rules of evidence shall be construed to be rules of practice and procedure and shall not be construed in such manner that such rules would fix, abridge, enlarge, modify, or diminish any substantive rights. The general assembly specifically reserves to itself the power to enact laws relating to substantive rights including, but not limited to, laws modifying or eliminating said rules of evidence.

13-25-129. Statements of child victim of unlawful sexual offense against a child or of child abuse - hearsay exception. (1) An out-of-court statement made by a child, as child is defined under the statutes which are the subject of the action, describing any act of sexual contact, intrusion, or penetration, as defined in section 18-3-401, C.R.S., performed with, by, on, or in the presence of the child declarant, not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule which provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, is admissible in evidence in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceedings in which a child is a victim of an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), C.R.S., or is a victim of incest, as defined in section 18-6-301, C.R.S., when the victim was less than fifteen years of age at the time of the commission of the offense, or in which a child is the subject of a proceeding alleging that a child is neglected or dependent under section 19-1-104 (1) (b), C.R.S., and an out-of-court statement by a child, as child is defined under the statutes which are the subject of the action, describing any act of child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401, C.R.S., to which the child declarant was subjected or which the child declarant witnessed, not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule which provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, is admissible in evidence in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceedings in which a child is a victim of child abuse or the subject of a proceeding alleging that a child is neglected or dependent under section 19-1-104 (1) (b), C.R.S., and an out-of-court statement made by a person under thirteen years of age describing all or part of an offense contained in part 1 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., or describing an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S., not otherwise admissible by statute or court rule which provides an exception to the objection of hearsay is admissible in evidence in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceeding, if:

(a) The court finds in a hearing conducted outside the presence of the jury that the time, content, and circumstances of the statement provide sufficient safeguards of reliability; and

(b) The child either:

(I) Testifies at the proceedings; or

(II) Is unavailable as a witness and there is corroborative evidence of the act which is the subject of the statement.

(2) If a statement is admitted pursuant to this section, the court shall instruct the jury in the final written instructions that during the proceeding the jury heard evidence repeating a child's out-of-court statement and that it is for the jury to determine the weight and credit to be given the statement and that, in making the determination, the jury shall consider the age and maturity of the child, the nature of the statement, the circumstances under which the statement was made, and any other relevant factor.

(3) The proponent of the statement shall give the adverse party reasonable notice of his intention to offer the statement and the particulars of the statement.

Statutory child hearsay exception for statements by sexual assault victims violates the confrontation clause of the sixth amendment of the U.S. constitution where the statements admitted are testimonial in nature and where defendant has not been afforded the opportunity to cross-examine the witness. People v. Moreno, 160 P.3d 242 (Colo. 2007).

Further, to use the forfeiture doctrine to deprive a defendant of the protection of the confrontation clause, the prosecution must show that defendant's wrongful conduct was designed, at least in part, to subvert the criminal justice system by depriving that system of the evidence upon which it depends. The people must prove that defendant intended to prevent or dissuade the child from testifying against him or her. People v. Moreno, 160 P.3d 242 (Colo. 2007).

This section may only be applied constitutionally to admit out-of-court testimonial statements when the defendant has forfeited the right to confrontation. Pena v. People, 173 P.3d 1107 (Colo. 2007).

Trial court must find that the time, content, and circumstances of contested statements provide sufficient safeguards of reliability and that there is sufficient corroborative evidence of the charged acts for statements of unavailable witness to be admitted under this section. Pena v. People, 173 P.3d 1107 (Colo. 2007).

Testimonial hearsay statements are admissible only if: (1) The declarant is unavailable to testify and (2) the defendant had a previous opportunity to cross-examine the declarant. The juvenile victim's statement to an investigating officer in a question and answer format is a testimonial statement. Since, the defendant did not have an opportunity to cross-examine the juvenile victim, the statement is inadmissible. People ex rel. R.A.S., 111 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2004).

Admission of testimony under subsection (1) committed to sound discretion of trial court and not violative of defendant's constitutional rights. People v. Galloway, 726 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1986).

The admission into evidence at trial of prior out-of-court statements does not violate the confrontation clause, if the declarant is not absent but is present to testify and to submit to cross-examination. People v. Argomaniz-Ramirez, 102 P.3d 1015 (Colo. 2004); People v. Whitman, 205 P.3d 371 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section not unconstitutional on its face or as applied. Because the victims were available, testified, and were subject to cross-examination, the sixth amendment confrontation issue does not apply. People v. Whitman, 205 P.3d 371 (Colo. App. 2007).

Application of section held not to be barred on the basis of constituting an ex post facto law. People v. Koon, 724 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court is required to instruct contemporaneously with admission of hearsay evidence pursuant to subsection (2), and, where no such instruction is given, the judgment of conviction had to be reversed. People v. Mathes, 703 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1985).

If a hearsay statement is admitted pursuant to this section, a court must instruct the jury as required in subsection (2). However, failure to object to proffered evidence at trial constitutes a waiver of the objection, and such objection may not thereafter be raised on appeal. People v. Lucero, 724 P.2d 1374 (Colo. App. 1986).

This section constitutes the exclusive basis for admitting a child victim's hearsay statement of a sexual act committed against the child when such hearsay statement is not otherwise admissible under any other specific hearsay exception created by statute or court rule. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989); People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990); People v. Wilson, 838 P.2d 284 (Colo. 1992); People v. Jones, 851 P.2d 247 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. Juvenile Court, 937 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1997).

This section is not controlling in every instance in which child hearsay is admitted. People v. Bolton, 859 P.2d 303 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Bolton, 859 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1993).

The general assembly enacted this section to balance the interests of a person accused of the sexual abuse of a child and the interests of the truth-seeking process. McPeck v. Colo. Dept. of Soc. Servs., 919 P.2d 942 (Colo. App. 1996).

In administrative adjudication in which the sexual abuse of a child is an issue, this section provides the appropriate standard for determining the admissibility of hearsay statements of the child-declarant which describe the alleged sexual abuse. McPeck v. Colo. Dept. of Soc. Servs., 919 P.2d 942 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section provides sufficient guidelines for consistent and fair application in the trial courts. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989); McPeck v. Colo. Dept. of Soc. Servs., 919 P.2d 942 (Colo. App. 1996).

Two-step analysis used when challenging hearsay evidence based on the constitutional ground of lack of confrontation: Initially, the prosecution must either produce the hearsay declarant for cross-examination, or in most instances, demonstrate his unavailability and secondly, in those instances when the unavailability of the witness is demonstrated, only hearsay bearing sufficient indicia of reliability is admissible. People v. Hise, 738 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Where there is a confrontation clause challenge to hearsay evidence, the two-step analysis is still applicable when considering exceptions to the hearsay rule which are nontraditional, i.e., exceptions which are not "firmly rooted" in the law of hearsay. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

This section is in many ways more protective than the required two-step analysis, since first, unlike that analysis, it requires a showing of "sufficient safeguards of reliability" whether or not the declarant is unavailable and, second, if the declarant is unavailable, it requires corroborative evidence of the act which is the subject of the statement. Therefore, statements meeting the standard of this section also fulfill the requirements of the two-step analysis. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989); People v. Dill, 904 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996).

Statements admissible when victim testifies, in accord with subsection (1)(b)(I). People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995).

Victim need not be a "child" at the time of trial for victim's out-of-court statement to be admissible. People v. Gookins, 111 P.3d 525 (Colo. App. 2004).

Phrase "at the proceedings" in subsection (1)(b)(I) does not mean at every stage of the proceedings. Where prosecution expressed that victim would testify at trial, the requirements of this section were conditionally met. People v. Juvenile Court, 937 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1997).

The phrase “when the victim was less than 15 years of age at the time of the commission of the offense” in subsection (1) applies only to a victim of incest, as defined in § 18-6-301. Therefore, the court did not err in applying this section to defendant’s case when the victim was 16 and defendant was charged with unlawful sexual offenses other than incest. People v. Trujillo, 251 P.3d 477 (Colo. App. 2010).

Purpose of hearing under this section is not to determine the victim’s competency. Rather, the determinations to be made are (1) whether sufficient safeguards of reliability exist to permit the admission of the victim’s hearsay statements into evidence, and (2) whether the victim is available to testify. People v. Juvenile Court, 937 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1997).

Child’s hearsay statements are admissible under this section only if court finds: (1) The time, context, and circumstances of statement provides sufficient safeguards of reliability; and (2) if child is unavailable as a witness, there must be corroborative evidence of sexual abuse that is the subject of the statement. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Although the trial court should make specific findings on which factors establish sufficient safeguards of reliability of its decision to admit the child hearsay statements, the trial court’s ruling will be affirmed absent such findings if the record shows adequate factual basis to support the trial court’s findings. People v. Rojas, 181 P.3d 1216 (Colo. App. 2008).

The fact that not all the relevant factors support admissibility does not require exclusion of the statements. People v. Rojas, 181 P.3d 1216 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applicability of this section is not limited to those circumstances in which the child is unavailable to testify or when the child has difficulty expressing herself. People v. Salas, 902 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1994).

Statutory requirement of “corroborative evidence” means any evidence, direct or by proof of surrounding circumstances, that tends to establish the act described in child’s hearsay statement occurred. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990); People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Corroboration requirement of this section is objective method of establishing commission of sexual act rather than a guarantee of reliability of child’s hearsay statement. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

This requirement ensures sexual abuse occurred and indirectly safeguards against wrongful conviction by requiring corroborative evidence sufficient to induce person of ordinary prudence and caution to entertain reasonable belief that sexual abuse that is subject of hearsay statement occurred. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Attendant circumstances necessary to provide adequate description of the sexual conduct are admissible and within scope of statute. People v. Serna, 738 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1987).

Preponderance of evidence standard of proof is applicable to trial court’s determination of whether requirements for the admissibility of child’s hearsay statement, as set forth in this section, have been satisfied. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Finding child incompetent to testify due to child’s reluctance to answer questions in courtroom setting does not automatically impair the guarantees of reliability of child’s hearsay statement and render such statement inadmissible. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Child’s use of anatomically correct dolls and gestures were part and parcel of hearsay statements and, without independent corroborative evidence, fail to meet statutory requirements. People v. Bowers, 773 P.2d 1093 (Colo. App. 1988), aff’d, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Corroborative evidence required for admissibility of child’s hearsay statement pursuant to this section is evidence, direct or circumstantial, that is independent of and supplementary to statement and that tends to confirm act described in statement occurred and child’s verbal or nonverbal assertions made during statement does not constitute corroborative evidence. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990); People v. Nara, 964 P.2d 578 (Colo. App. 1998).

However, even where pretrial ruling approved admission of hearsay statement by child-victim to pediatrician it was error to permit pediatrician to give impermissible opinion testimony. People v. Gaffney, 769 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1989).

Trial court’s findings concerning reliability of child victim’s hearsay statements will not be disturbed on appeal if supported by the evidence. People v. Serna, 738 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court properly considered the age of the child in light of the extensive case authority holding that such statements of very young children relating incidents of sexual abuse tend to be reliable. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Trial court examines evidence as a whole to determine whether sufficient corroboration exists to admit child’s hearsay statement under this section and such determination will not be overturned unless trial court abused its discretion. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Trial judge’s statements that he did not know much about the victim’s character, that he had some concerns that the victim’s mother was present during an interview between the child and a social worker and about the cumulative effect and rehearsal factor of the child's statements, and, as a result, that he would leave the issues of credibility and reliability to the jury did not constitute an improper delegation of duty from the court to the jury where the court found on balance that the child's statements met the reliability standard of the hearsay exception. People v. Cordova, 854 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1992).

Children's age-appropriate sexual terminology cannot supply corroborative evidence of sexual abuse. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Children's demonstrations with anatomically correct dolls contained sufficient indicia of reliability for purposes of this section. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Children's behavioral changes constituted corroborative evidence of existence of sexual abuse even though such changes are not conclusive of sexual abuse. Stevens v. People, 796 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1990).

Where a child's hearsay statements falls within a recognized exception to the hearsay rule, the statement will be held to bear sufficient indicia of reliability. If it does not come within any recognized hearsay exception, it may still be admitted if it falls within the residual exception to the hearsay rule. People v. District Court, 776 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1989).

Although trial court did not adequately identify specific factors which provided sufficient guarantees of reliability of child's hearsay statements, offer of proof by prosecuting attorney cured deficiency in trial court's ruling. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Where hearsay evidence is admitted pursuant to the provisions of this section, the trial court must give the cautionary instruction contemporaneously with the admission of this particular type of evidence and again in the court's general charge to the jury at the conclusion of the case, and failure to do so is reversible error. People v. McClure, 779 P.2d 864 (Colo. 1989); People v. Cowan, 813 P.2d 810 (Colo. App. 1991).

Trial court could not admit evidence of alleged sexual assault under § 16-10-301, then in effect before prosecution presented prima facie case to jury. Yet child's out-of-court statements could not establish a prima facie case warranting submission to the jury because, under subsection (1)(b), the statements were not admissible without the corroborative evidence. People v. Nara, 964 P.2d 578 (Colo. App. 1998).

As a result of the interplay of this section and § 16-10-301 then in effect, alleged victim's out-of-court statements could not be corroborated by similar acts, and those statements could not provide the prima facie case necessary for admission of evidence of the similar act. The trial court therefore could not properly admit evidence of either. People v. Nara, 964 P.2d 578 (Colo. App. 1998).

Sole purpose of contemporaneous instruction is to alert jury to the suspect nature of hearsay testimony and thereby promote jury's critical examination of the hearsay evidence as it is being received. People v. Jones, 843 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1992).

Failure to give a jury instruction on the credibility of a child's testimony at the time child's hearsay statement is admitted is not plain error in a prosecution for aggravated incest and sexual assault on a child, so long as such instruction was given as a jury instruction at the conclusion of the evidence. People v. Flysaway, 807 P.2d 1179 (Colo. App. 1990).

To find plain error, the court must conclude, after reviewing the record as a whole, that trial court's failure to give contemporaneous cautionary instruction so undermined the fundamental fairness of the trial that it cast serious doubt on the reliability of the conviction. People v. Jones, 843 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1992).

Plain error resulted where court failed to give cautionary instruction contemporaneously with the testimony of two expert witnesses and four other witnesses who testified as to hearsay statements made by a four year old victim and her six year old brother identifying the defendant as the perpetrator. People v. Jones, 843 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1992).

Cautionary instruction required by subsection (2) incorporates defendant's rights to due process and confrontation. Court should not accompany instruction with comments tending to denigrate its importance. People v. Talley, 824 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where several witnesses gave testimony concerning child's hearsay statements and cautionary statement was given before the most extensive of those statements there was no plain error although the cautionary statement should be given before any testimony regarding such hearsay statements by a child. People v. Wilson, 838 P.2d 284 (Colo. 1992).

Omission of contemporaneous cautionary instruction regarding the victim's hearsay statement was not error. The 1993 amendment to subsection (2) eliminated the requirement for such a contemporaneous cautionary instruction. The amended section requires a cautionary instruction only with the final written instructions. People v. Burgess, 946 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Strean, 74 P.3d 387 (Colo. App. 2002).

Nor did it cause unfair prejudice to give a contemporaneous cautionary instruction despite the 1993 change in the law. People v. Burgess, 946 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1997).

Although this section requires the court to instruct the jury regarding the weight of the witness's testimony, and no such specific instruction was given, the omission did not undermine the fundamental fairness of the trial because the testimony of the witness was merely corroborative of that of the victim. People v. Wood, 743 P.2d 422 (Colo. 1987); People v. Miller, 821 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1991).

The court's error in failing to instruct the jury as to the witnesses' credibility did not so undermine the fairness of the trial as to require reversal of defendant's conviction where one witness' testimony was corroborative of the victim's testimony and the other witness' testimony consisted mainly of the witness' observations of the victim and the witness' experience in interpreting body language of victims of sexual abuse. People v. Miller, 821 P.2d 881 (Colo. App. 1991).

Although the state failed to fully comply with this section by not informing the defendant of the particulars of the witness's testimony, there is no reversible error because the defendant was already aware of the substance of the testimony. People v. Wood, 743 P.2d 422 (Colo. 1987); People v. Brown, 761 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1988).

A child who is not competent to testify is unavailable both within the meaning of subsection (1)(b)(II) and under the two-step analysis. People v. District Court, 776 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1989); People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

"Unavailability", both within the meaning of this section and the constitutionally required two-step analysis, can be met when the court makes a particularized finding that the child's emotional or psychological health would be substantially impaired if she were forced to testify and that such impairment will be long standing rather than transitory in nature. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Mere inconvenience or discomfort at the prospect of testifying does not meet the statutory standard of unavailability. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Where the trial court found that requiring child victim to testify would be traumatic, where the evidence showed that the trauma would be long lasting rather than transitory, and where the potential benefit to the defendant of requiring the child victim's testimony was not substantial, there was no error in the court's determination that the child victim was unavailable. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

The final requirement in order to admit statements under this section when the witness is unavailable to testify at trial is that there be corroborative evidence of the act which is the subject of the statement. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Admitting a child's hearsay statements held not in error when there was expert testimony to the effect that substantial long-term emotional impairment would result from testifying in court as well as corroborative evidence in the form of physical evidence and expert opinion to satisfy the finding of unavailability. People v. Haynie, 826 P.2d 371 (Colo. App. 1991).

Both C.R.E. 803(24) and this section are residuary rules and apply only if hearsay is not otherwise admissible under the other hearsay exceptions. This section applies only to hearsay statements not otherwise admissible by statute or court rule. C.R.E. 803(24) applies to hearsay statements which are not covered by the more specific hearsay exceptions in C.R.E. 803(1) - (23). Because this section and C.R.E. 803(24) have different requirements for the admission of hearsay statements, confusion and inconsistent results may occur if either residuary provision may be applied to the same hearsay statement of a child sexual assault victim which is otherwise not admissible into evidence. Since the more specific provision should prevail, this section is the sole basis upon which hearsay evidence, which otherwise comes within the terms of that statute, may be admitted. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989); People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Statements made by child victim to investigator and social services caseworker were properly admissible under this section where the statements in question: (1) Are reliable; (2) the child victim was unavailable; and (3) there existed corroborating evidence consisting of incriminating statements made by defendant to the investigator and the child victim's physiological reaction to a child psychiatrist's questioning regarding the abuse incident. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

This section does not infringe on a court's procedural rulemaking powers since, as with the "rape shield" statute, it effects the substantive policy of protecting certain witnesses from the sometimes traumatizing effect of facing their abusers openly in court. People v. Diefenderfer, 784 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1989).

Hearing mandated by this section is not required where prior statements were otherwise admissible by court rule. People v. Doss, 782 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section does not apply to preliminary hearings. This section applies to trial proceedings but not to such probable cause proceedings as a preliminary hearing. People v. Jensen, 765 P.2d 1028 (Colo. 1988).

This section provides a hearsay exception only for testimony regarding statements from the child victim of, or a child witness to, the charged offense and does not authorize the admission of otherwise inadmissible hearsay statements of similar transactions. People in Interest of G.W.R., 943 P.2d 466 (Colo. App. 1996).

But the better public policy to follow is that when a child is a victim of an unlawful sexual offense, this section permits the admission into evidence of hearsay statements that are not otherwise admissible under the statutes or court rule, provided the court gives a cautionary instruction to the jury both at the time the evidence is received and again in the general charge. In the event such evidence is admissible under other statutes or court rules, then the procedural requirements of this section are not implicated. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court's ruling as to admissibility of child's hearsay statement pursuant to this section is based solely upon matters presented at in-limine hearing and therefore, for purposes of an effective appellate review, the court's decision shall state on the record its findings regarding: (1) The time, content, and circumstances of statements that provide sufficient safeguards of reliability; (2) if the child is determined to be an unavailable witness, the factors rendering the child unavailable; and (3) if the child's statement is ruled admissible, the nature of the corroborative evidence of the act which is the subject of the statement. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion by granting guardian ad litem's motion to admit child's out of court statements during the proceedings to adjudicate whether the child was dependent and neglected even though the jury ultimately found the child had not been subjected to mistreatment or abuse. People in Interest of C.L.S., 934 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1996).

Appellate review of trial court's determination pursuant to this section regarding admissibility of child's hearsay statement should be based upon record made at in-limine hearing and may go beyond record only if issue of harmless error or plain error is raised. People v. Bowers, 801 P.2d 511 (Colo. 1990).

This section is not applicable to videotaped statements of child abuse victim. A child victim videotape may be admitted only if it is a videotaped deposition made in compliance with § 18-3-413 which governs all videotaped statements obtained from child sexual abuse victims. People v. Newbrough, 803 P.2d 155 (Colo. 1990); People v. Carter, 919 P.2d 862 (Colo. App. 1996).

If the evidence is admissible under other statutes or court rules, then the procedural requirements of this section need not be followed. People v. Aldrich, 849 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (1) does not require that a child declarant be determined as competent in order for that declarant's statement to be admissible so long as the reliability requirement of the statute is met. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where both the children's statements were made shortly after the sexual assault, the statements made by them during the course of their videotaped interviews used age-appropriate language, they were made in response to nonleading questions, and while each displayed some reluctance to discuss sexual matters, their demeanor during the course of the interviews reinforced their reliability, the trial court's admission of these statements was proper. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

In determining the reliability of a child's statements under this section, the following factors may be helpful for the court to consider: (1) Whether the statement was made spontaneously; (2) whether the statement was made while the child was still upset or in pain from the alleged abuse; (3) whether the language of the statement was likely to have been used by a child the age of the declarant; (4) whether the allegation was made in response to a leading question; (5) whether the child or the hearsay witness has any bias against the defendant or any motive for lying; (6) whether any other event occurred between the time of the abuse and the time of the statement which could account for the contents of the statement; (7) whether more than one person heard the statement; and (8) the general character of the child. People v. District Court, 776 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1989); People v. Dill, 904 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 927 P.2d 1315 (Colo. 1996); McPeck v. Colo. Dept. of Soc. Servs., 919 P.2d 942 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Frost, 5 P.3d 317 (Colo. App. 1999); People v. Underwood, 53 P.3d 765 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Streaun, 74 P.3d 387 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court's decision to admit child hearsay is overturned only upon a finding of an abuse of discretion. Court found victim's statement to her mother was reliable and "an outcry" made while explaining her mood swings and depression. People v. Underwood, 53 P.3d 765 (Colo. App. 2002).

Court did not err in admitting statements where statements were spontaneous, made in response to an open-ended question and not in response to any leading question, and the victim used age-appropriate language. People v. Trujillo, 923 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court properly admitted videotaped interview. Although defendant argued on appeal that the court should have made a "particularized assessment" of the videotape's reliability, he never asked the trial court for such an assessment, and the court's findings demonstrate that it was addressing the reliability of the taped statement as well as the other out-of-court statements. People v. Melendez, 80 P.3d 883 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 102 P.3d 315 (Colo. 2004).

The videotaped interview was not unfairly prejudicial as both the child and the interviewer testified at trial and were subject to cross-examination. The substance of the videotaped interview did not differ significantly from testimony by these and other prosecution witnesses at trial. People v. Melendez, 80 P.3d 883 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 102 P.3d 315 (Colo. 2004).

Trial court's failure to exercise its discretion with regard to controlling jury access to testimonial evidence during deliberations was not harmless. Trial court could have admonished the jury not to give the exhibit undue weight or emphasis, instructed the jury that it watch the video no more than a specific number of times, or even required that the video be viewed in open court or under the supervision of a bailiff. In selecting those controls appropriate for each case, the trial court would have made a record of assessment. DeBella v. People, 233 P.3d 664 (Colo. 2010).

Admission of testimony of witness who did not participate in a pre-trial hearing, where such testimony was cumulative of other similar evidence properly admitted, did not undermine the fairness of the trial or cast serious doubt on the reliability of the verdict. People v. Burgess, 946 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section permits hearsay testimony related to acts of mental and emotional abuse in a child abuse case. The term "health" in § 18-6-401 (1) includes both physical and mental well-being. People v. Sherrod, 204 P.3d 472 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 204 P.3d 466 (Colo. 2009).

It was not plain error for court to admit child's statements where defendant did not touch the child but where there was testimony that defendant intimidated the child into undressing herself and touching herself for the defendant's sexual gratification while threatening the child if she did not comply. The "constructive touching" of the child was sufficient to permit the testimony under the statute. People v. Cook, 197 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in People v. Woertman, 786 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Hansen, 920 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1995).

13-25-129.5. Statements of persons with developmental disabilities - hearsay exception. (1) An out-of-court statement made by a person with a developmental disability, as defined in section 27-10.5-102 (11) (a), C.R.S., not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule that provides an exception to the objection of hearsay is admissible in any criminal or delinquency proceeding in which the person is alleged to have been a victim if the conditions of subsection (5) of this section are satisfied.

(2) (a) An out-of-court statement made by a person with a developmental disability, as defined in section 27-10.5-102 (11) (a), C.R.S., that describes all or part of an offense described in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) performed with, by, on, or in the presence of the declarant, and that is not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule that provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, is admissible in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceeding if the conditions of subsection (5) of this section are satisfied.

exception to the objection of hearsay, is admissible in evidence in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceeding in which a child is alleged to be a victim of child abuse or the subject of a proceeding alleging that a child is neglected or dependent under section 19-1-104 (1) (b), C.R.S., if the conditions of subsection (5) of this section are satisfied.

(4) An out-of-court statement made by a person with a developmental disability, as defined in section 27-10.5-102 (11) (a), C.R.S., that describes all or part of an offense contained in part 1 of article 3 of title 18, C.R.S., or that describes an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), C.R.S., not otherwise admissible by statute or court rule that provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, is admissible in evidence in any criminal, delinquency, or civil proceeding if the conditions of subsection (5) of this section are satisfied.

(5) The exceptions to the objection of hearsay described in subsections (1), (2), (3), and (4) of this section shall apply only if the court finds in a hearing conducted outside the presence of the jury that the time, content, and circumstances of the statement provide sufficient safeguards of reliability; and either:

(a) The statement is a nontestimonial statement; or

(b) (I) The declarant testifies at the proceedings; or

(II) If the declarant is unavailable to testify, the defendant has had an opportunity to cross-examine the declarant in a previous proceeding and there is corroborative evidence of the act which is the subject of the statement.

(6) If a statement is admitted pursuant to this section, the court shall instruct the jury in the final written instructions that during the proceeding the jury heard evidence repeating a person's out-of-court statement, that it is for the jury to determine the weight and credit to be given the statement, and that, in making the determination, the jury shall consider the nature of the statement, the circumstances under which the statement was made, and any other relevant factor.

(7) The proponent of the statement shall give the adverse party reasonable notice of his or her intention to offer the statement and the particulars of the statement.

13-25-130. Criminal actions - use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property.

(1) Photographs, video tapes, or films of property over which a person is alleged to have exerted unauthorized control or otherwise to have obtained unlawfully are competent evidence if the photographs, video tapes, or films are admissible into evidence under the rules of law governing the admissibility of photographs, video tapes, or films into evidence. Any photographic, video tape, or film record, when satisfactorily identified and authenticated, is as admissible in evidence as the property itself.

(2) (a) Any photograph may bear a written description of the property alleged to have been wrongfully taken, the name of the owner of the property taken, the name of the accused, the name of the arresting law enforcement officer, the date of the photograph, and the signature of the photographer.

(b) Any video tape or film may include, as a segment of the tape or film, a written description of the property alleged to have been wrongfully taken, the name of the owner of the property taken, the name of the accused, the name of the arresting law enforcement officer, the date the tape or film was produced, and a segment showing the signature of the photographer.

(3) A law enforcement agency which is holding property over which a person is alleged to have exerted unauthorized control or otherwise to have obtained unlawfully may return that property to its owner if:

(a) The appropriately identified photographs, video tapes, or films are filed and retained by the law enforcement agency;

(b) Satisfactory proof of ownership of the property is shown by the owner;

(c) A declaration of ownership is signed under penalty of perjury;

(d) The defendant, if a defendant has been filed upon, has been notified that such photographs, video tapes, or films have been taken, recorded, or produced; and

(e) A receipt for the property is obtained from the owner upon delivery by the law enforcement agency.

13-25-131. Civil actions - sexual assault - certain evidence presumed irrelevant.

(1) In any civil action for damages by an alleged victim which alleges damages resulting from a sexual assault on a client by any person who enters into a professional-client relationship that permits professional physical access to the client's person or the opportunity to affect or influence the thought processes or emotions of such client, including, but not limited to, actions for professional malpractice or assault and battery, evidence of specific instances of the victim's prior or subsequent sexual conduct, opinion evidence of the victim's sexual conduct, and reputation evidence of the victim's sexual conduct shall be presumed to be irrelevant, except as provided in subsections (2) and (4) of this section. The persons to whom this subsection (1) applies in a civil action against such persons shall include any psychotherapist as defined in section 18-3-405.5, C.R.S., any medical professional, any member of the clergy, or any person acting under the color of a religious organization. This subsection (1) shall also apply in a civil action against a parent or other person in a position of trust, power, or authority over any child or other person, in a civil action by or on behalf of such child or such other person.

(2) Subsection (1) of this section notwithstanding, in any of the civil actions described in such subsection (1), evidence of the following shall be presumed to be relevant:

(a) Evidence of the victim's prior or subsequent sexual conduct with the defendant in such civil action;

(b) Evidence of specific instances of sexual activity showing the source or origin of semen, pregnancy, disease, or any similar evidence of sexual intercourse, including, but not limited to, genetic testing pursuant to section 13-25-126, offered for the purpose of showing that the act or acts alleged were or were not committed by the defendant in such civil action.

(3) In any civil action described in subsection (1) of this section, evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's prior or subsequent sexual conduct is not subject to discovery.

(4) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (3) of this section, evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's prior or subsequent sexual conduct may be determined to be subject to discovery or offered as evidence, if the defendant or plaintiff requests a hearing prior to conducting discovery or attempting to admit such evidence and makes an offer of proof of the relevancy of such evidence and the court finds that the evidence is relevant and the probative value of such evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect. Such hearing shall be held no later than thirty days prior to trial. In making an order that such evidence is relevant, the court shall detail the information or conduct that is subject to discovery or which may be admitted into evidence.

13-25-132. Criminal actions - video tape depositions - use at trial. (1) (a) In any criminal action, if the court finds, upon application of the prosecution, that there is substantial risk of physical harm or intimidation of a witness, the court may enter an order that a deposition be taken of that witness' testimony and that the deposition be recorded and preserved on video tape.

(b) For the purposes of this section, "intimidation" means to, directly or indirectly, by oneself or through any other person in one's behalf, make use of any force, violence, restraint, abduction, duress, or forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance, or to inflict or threaten the infliction of any injury, damage, harm, or loss, or in any manner to practice intimidation upon or against any person in order to impede, prevent, or otherwise interfere with the testimony of the witness, or to compel, induce, or prevail upon any witness to give or refrain from giving testimony in any criminal action.

(2) The prosecution shall apply for the order specified in subsection (1) of this section in writing at least three days prior to the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall receive reasonable notice of the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall have a right to be present and represented by counsel at the deposition.

(3) Upon timely receipt of the application, the court shall make a preliminary finding regarding whether, at the time of trial, there is likely to be a substantial risk of physical harm or intimidation of a witness. If the court so finds, it shall order that the deposition be taken, pursuant to rule 15 (d) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure, and preserved on video tape. The prosecution shall transmit the video tape to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending.

(2) For the purposes of this section, “telecommunications device for the deaf or teletype” means any auxiliary aid or service consisting of listening or transcription systems that allow the reception or transmission of aurally delivered communication and materials for the benefit of individuals with hearing, speech, or physical impairments.

(3) The provisions of this section do not apply to any communication intercepted pursuant to a lawful court order.

13-25-135. Evidence of admissions - civil proceedings - unanticipated outcomes - medical care. (1) In any civil action brought by an alleged victim of an unanticipated outcome of medical care, or in any arbitration proceeding related to such civil action, any and all statements, affirmations, gestures, or conduct expressing apology, fault, sympathy, commiseration, condolence, compassion, or a general sense of benevolence which are made by a health care provider or an employee of a health care provider to the alleged victim, a relative of the alleged victim, or a representative of the alleged victim and which relate to the discomfort, pain, suffering, injury, or death of the alleged victim as the result of the unanticipated outcome of medical care shall be inadmissible as evidence of an admission of liability or as evidence of an admission against interest.

(2) For purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) “Health care provider” means any person licensed or certified by the state of Colorado to deliver health care and any clinic, health dispensary, or health facility licensed by the state of Colorado. The term includes any professional corporation or other professional entity comprised of such health care providers as permitted by the laws of this state.

(b) “Relative” means a victim’s spouse, parent, grandparent, stepfather, stepmother, child, grandchild, brother, sister, half brother, half sister, or spouse’s parents. The term includes said relationships that are created as a result of adoption. In addition, “relative” includes any person who has a family-type relationship with a victim.

(d) “Unanticipated outcome” means the outcome of a medical treatment or procedure that differs from an expected result.

13-25-136. Criminal actions - prenatal drug and alcohol screening - admissibility of evidence. A court shall not admit in a criminal proceeding information relating to substance use not otherwise required to be reported pursuant to section 19-3-304, C.R.S., obtained as part of a screening or test performed to determine pregnancy or to provide prenatal care for a pregnant woman. This section shall not be interpreted to prohibit prosecution of any claim or action related to such substance use based on evidence obtained through methods other than the screening or testing described in this section.

13-25-137. Admissibility of commercial packaging. (1) Labels or packages listing, indicating, or describing the contents or ingredients of any commercially packaged item are admissible in evidence to prove that the item contains the contents or ingredients listed on the label or package. A label or package listing that identifies the contents or ingredients of a container or package constitutes prima facie evidence that the items in the container or package were composed in whole or in part of the contents.

(2) Prior to the admission of evidence pursuant to this section, the court shall make a preliminary determination as to whether the item constitutes a commercially packaged item as described in subsection (1) of this section. This determination may include any evidence the court deems appropriate, including but not limited to evidence of where the item is available for purchase, whether the item is subject to state or federal regulation, or any other evidence observable on the package that indicates or constitutes indicia of the label’s or package’s reliability. Extrinsic evidence that an item is commercially packaged is not a prerequisite to the court’s determination.

(l) (I) Effective July 1, 1998, the annual salary of judges of the county court in each Class C or Class D county, as defined in section 13-6-201, and the annual salaries of all special associate, associate, and assistant county judges shall be determined annually by the chief justice and certified to the general assembly and the controller pursuant to procedures approved by the supreme court. The certification shall include the workload measures developed pursuant to subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (I). In determining the salaries to take effect on July 1 of each year, the chief justice shall use the average number of cases filed annually in each county court during the three-year period ending on the previous December 31.

(II) Procedures used to calculate incremental part-time county judge workload salary levels shall be based on the method used to determine the need for full-time county judges as established and approved by the supreme court and shall take into account case types, case processing requirements, support staff assistance, travel, and such other factors as are relevant to workload assessment. (IV) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (I), the salary of a county judge or special associate, associate, or assistant county judge serving in office as of June 30, 1998, may not be reduced while such judge remains in office. (1.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1999, and each fiscal year thereafter, the increase over and above the provisions set forth in this section and section 13-30-104, if any, in compensation of justices and judges shall be determined by the general assembly as set forth in the annual general appropriations bill. Any increase in judicial compensation set forth in an annual general appropriations bill shall be an increase only for the fiscal year of the annual general appropriations bill in which the amount is specified and shall not constitute an increase for any other fiscal year. It is the intent of the general assembly that an increase in judicial compensation specified in an annual general appropriations bill shall be added to the compensation set forth in this section and section 13-30-104 and shall not represent a statutory change.

13-32-105. Docket fees in criminal actions. (1) (a) At the time of the first appearance of the defendant in all criminal actions in all courts of record, except the county court, court of appeals, and the supreme court, there shall be charged against the defendant a total docket fee of thirty dollars, which shall be payable upon conviction of the defendant. ## ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Expediting Court Procedure", see 10 Dicta 113 (1933).

Right to require deposit. This section provides that clerks of courts may require a deposit in advance on account of fees. Drennen v. Johnson, 65 Colo. 381, 176 P. 479 (1918).

Deposit may be waived. If the right to require a deposit in advance on account of fees is not insisted upon at the proper time, the officer must be understood to have waived it, and to have consented that such fees shall abide the result of the suit. Cunningham v. Quinn, 12 Colo. 473, 21 P. 488 (1889).

Provision for deposit is permissive only and not mandatory. The language, "may require in advance, on account of their fees a deposit of five dollars", appearing in the last paragraph of the section, seems to be permissive only and not mandatory. Plainly the sum is not in payment of any specific fee, but is a deposit on account of all fees in the case. It is a general statute and applies to all cases alike, and to all fees in all courts of record. Wigton v. Wigton, 69 Colo. 19, 169 P. 133 (1917); Drennen v. Johnson, 65 Colo. 381, 176 P. 479 (1918).

Payment of the deposit is not jurisdictional but is to be treated as penal in its nature, and for such reason, it is held that while this deposit may be required as a condition precedent, yet such payment may be waived by express action of the clerk as in this case. Wigton v. Wigton, 69 Colo. 19, 169 P. 133 (1917).

Docketing the case without fee is immaterial. The fact that the clerk, in any particular case, chooses to docket the cause without collecting the docket fee in advance, is not material. Drennen v. Johnson, 65 Colo. 381, 176 P. 479 (1918).

And is no ground for remanding the case. The clerk of the district court could refuse to docket a case until the docket fee was paid, but having actually docketed the case without first obtaining the docket fee the result is the same, so far as the appellee in the district court is concerned, as if the docket fee had been paid; and the cause cannot be remanded simply on the ground that the fee had not been paid. Drennen v. Johnson, 65 Colo. 381, 176 P. 479 (1918).

An appeal may, so far as this section is concerned, be perfected without paying the docket fee. Provided the clerk actually docketed the case within the prescribed time, a rule of court cannot be so enforced or construed as to nullify the clerk's docketing of the case, simply because the clerk acted without collecting the docket fee. Drennen v. Johnson, 65 Colo. 381, 176 P. 479 (1918).

Mandamus lies after tender of fees. It being admitted that the clerk's legal fees for the services desired have been tendered him the rule that mandamus lies to compel the performance of purely ministerial duties is applicable. Cunningham v. Quinn, 12 Colo. 473, 21 P. 488 (1889).

Payment of docket fees does not violate principles of double jeopardy. Costs are not a form of punishment but are essentially civil and are not traditionally considered to be punishment, and the imposition of costs generally does not serve the goals of retribution and deterrence. People v. McQuarrie, 66 P.3d 181 (Colo. App. 2002).

13-32-105.5. Docket fees - reduction by rule. Notwithstanding the amount specified for any fee in this article, the chief justice of the supreme court by rule or as otherwise provided by law may reduce the amount of one or more of the fees if necessary pursuant to section 24-75-402 (3), C.R.S., to reduce the uncommitted reserves of the fund to which all or any portion of one or more of the fees is credited. After the uncommitted reserves of the fund are sufficiently reduced, the chief justice by rule or as otherwise provided by law may increase the amount of one or more of the fees as provided in section 24-75-402 (4), C.R.S.

13-32-106. Fee bill and application of fees. Any person in interest in any cause is entitled to a certified bill of costs or fees specifically itemized. All fees collected by any clerk or judge shall be paid over to the state treasurer as provided by law, except as provided in section 30-1-112, C.R.S. No clerk of any court of record shall certify a record to the supreme court or to any other court until he collects all clerk's costs and fees then due and payable from the person ordering the record, unless otherwise ordered by the court in which the record reposes or by the court to which the cause was transferred or appealed, or from which appellate review as provided by law and the Colorado appellate rules may issue.

13-32-108. Unclaimed funds - district court. All fees, court costs, trust funds, and other moneys paid to the clerks of the district courts or into the registry of said courts, which have been or shall be unclaimed, for a period of two years after the final determination of any case in which said fees were collected or money paid, may be disposed of as provided in section 13-32-109.

ANNOTATION

Continuing jurisdiction. Where money is deposited in the registry of the court pending determination of an action, the court retains jurisdiction notwithstanding dismissal of the action to dispose of the funds in its possession, and such jurisdiction continues until the funds are disposed of. Schwartz v. Stone, 135 Colo. 222, 310 P.2d 567 (1957).

13-32-109. Report of unclaimed funds - district court. (1) Within sixty days from January 1 in each year, the clerk of the district court of every judicial district shall report to the judge what sums of money are held unclaimed in the clerk's accounts or the registry of the court, for a period of more than two years after the final determination of the case in which said moneys have been paid or deposited, and, if it appears to the court sitting en banc that no claim for said moneys has been presented to the clerk of the court for more than two years, then the court may order that said moneys be paid by the clerk to the state treasurer for deposit in the state general fund; but, if it appears to the court by specific order made in any case, or from any other cause or circumstances, the court in its discretion may withhold making such order in any case.

ANNOTATION

Unless court taxes jury fees as costs, county is liable. The compensation of jurymen is fixed by this section and except where jury fees are taxed to parties litigant, the county must discharge that burden; but neither the service of the juror nor the obligation of the county, comes of appointment or contract. Bd. of County

Comm'rs v. Evans, 99 Colo. 83, 60 P.2d 225 (1936).

This section places jurors for coroners' inquests on an equality with other jurors, and they are to be compensated in the same manner; that is, by a per diem while serving as such. Ireland v. County Comm'rs, 6 Colo. 280 (1882).

13-33-102. Fees of witnesses.

(1) to (3) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2010, (HB 10-1291), ch. 325, p. 1505, § 1, effective July 1, 2010.)

(4) Witnesses in courts of record called to testify only to an opinion founded on special study or experience in any branch of science or to make scientific or professional examinations and state the result thereof shall receive compensation, to be fixed by the court, with reference to the value of the time employed and the degree of learning or skill required.

(5) Witness fees for attending criminal trials in any court of record, except a municipal court or the county court of the city and county of Denver, shall be paid as costs as provided in section 16-18-101, C.R.S.

(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (4) and (5) of this section, the witness fee specified in this section shall not be paid to any witness who at the time of testifying is in the legal custody of any state or federal agency or any local law enforcement agency and whose transportation to court is provided at government expense.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Expert Witnesses", see 24 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 418 (1952).

Application by defendant for procurement of witnesses should be made at earliest opportunity. Osborn v. People, 83 Colo. 4, 262 P. 892 (1927).

Expenses of obtaining testimony of witnesses for indigent defendant must be paid by state. People v. McCabe, 37 Colo. App. 181, 546 P.2d 1289 (1975).

State is liable for advancement of costs. Since the state will ultimately pay the costs of securing out-of-state witnesses for the defendant, there is no legal justification for holding that it is not liable for advancement of such costs as mileage and witness fees. People v. McCabe, 37 Colo. App. 181, 546 P.2d 1289 (1975).

This section allows experts extra compensation, and a landowner should be repaid all the necessary expenses incurred in fixing the value of his land, including the preparatory work, time and expenses of experts who testify for him, provided that the sum allowed must be reasonable and that it is within the sound discretion of the trial court as to the exact amount. Rullo v. Pub. Serv. Co., 163 Colo. 99, 428 P.2d 708 (1967).

Subsection (4) authorizes the court, in fixing an expert's fee, to consider time spent by the expert in preparation for trial as well as time spent in court. Yeager Garden Acres, Inc. v. Summit Constr. Co., 32 Colo. App. 242, 513 P.2d 458 (1973).

Subsection (4) permits additional compensation for expert witnesses, but no such exception exists for lay witnesses. Catlin v. Tormey Bewley Corp., 219 P.3d 407 (Colo. App. 2009).

In amounts deemed proper by the court. Under this section courts may allow witness fees to experts, testifying as such, in an amount which they may deem proper. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 105 Colo. 366, 98 P.2d 283 (1940); Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

The award of expert witness fees, and the amount thereof, is within the sound discretion of the court. Crawford v. French, 633 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1981).

Allowances may include. The allowances included travel, ordinary witness fees, food and lodging expenses, and preparation of an inventory by consultants, plus $100 per day as additional fees for each expert for every day of attendance at the trial, whether or not they testified. There is evidence in the record that $100 per day was a reasonable amount of compensation for services of the kind furnished in the eminent domain hearing. Leadville Water Co. v. Parkville Water Dist., 164 Colo. 362, 436 P.2d 659 (1967).

Allowances awarded may include travel, ordinary witness fees, food, and lodging expenses. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Witness's lost wages not a recoverable cost. A witness's lost wages are not necessarily incurred by reason of the litigation and for the proper preparation for trial so as to be an awardable cost. Catlin v. Tormey Bewley Corp., 219 P.3d 407 (Colo. App. 2009).

Amount of fee is circumscribed by rule of reason. While this section allows expert witness fees, the property owner in an eminent domain hearing will not be fully indemnified for any unusual compensation which he might choose to pay his expert witnesses. The awarding of expert witness fees is limited, being circumscribed by a rule of reason, viz., sound judicial discretion. Leadville Water Co. v. Parkville Water Dist., 164 Colo. 362, 436 P.2d 659 (1967); Denver Urban Renewal Auth. v. Hayutin, 40 Colo. App. 559, 583 P.2d 296 (1978).

In absence of stipulation, court must decide if witness is an expert. In the absence of a stipulation between the litigants as to whether a witness is an expert, the length of time and the value of time spent in attendance at trial, and the judicial determination of what is a reasonable fee to be awarded an expert witness in a given case, are all evidentiary questions. Slavsky v. Callaham, 162 Colo. 208, 425 P.2d 686 (1967).

Party must push motion for expert witness fees in trial court. The portion of plaintiffs' motion requesting expert witness fees was never called up for hearing or ruled upon by the trial court, although there was ample time for plaintiffs to have duly presented to the trial court their original motion to fix and award expert witness fees prior to the issuance of a writ of error and if disappointed in the trial court's ruling, they could have assigned cross-error on that question, as they had done successfully in their request for statutory interest. Failure to do so is dispositive. Slavsky v. Callaham, 162 Colo. 208, 425 P.2d 686 (1967).

This section does not require that the amounts actually paid to the expert be assessed as costs; assessment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Lamont v. Riverside Irrigation Dist., 179 Colo. 134, 498 P.2d 1150 (1972).

Award of costs for expert who did not testify. The winning party is entitled to an award of costs for its expert, even though the expert did not testify. Great W. Sugar Co. v. N. Natural Gas Co., 661 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1982).

If the expert was not listed on trial data certificate as scheduled to testify, such costs are not allowed. Schultz v. Linden-Alimak, Inc., 734 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1986).

This section controls costs which may be taxed in eminent domain proceedings. Denver Urban Renewal Auth. v. Hayutin, 40 Colo. App. 559, 583 P.2d 296 (1978); State Dept. of Hwys. v. Anvil Point Props., 722 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1986).

But this section does not specifically provide for assessment of costs generated by a cost hearing. State Dept. of Hwys. v. Anvil Point Props., 722 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1986).

In fixing an expert's fees, the court is authorized to consider the time spent by the expert in preparation for trial in addition to time spent in court. Am. Water Dev., Inc. v. City of Alamosa, 874 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1994).

Fees for an expert's assistant should not be allowed because they are not authorized by statute. Perkins v. Flatiron Structures Co., 849 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992); W. Fire Truck, Inc. v. Emergency One, Inc., 134 P.3d 570 (Colo. App. 2006).

Fees for pretrial preparation to render an opinion not admitted into evidence are not recoverable. Perkins v. Flatiron Structures Co., 849 P.2d 832 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Spensieri v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins., 804 P.2d 268 (Colo. App. 1990).

13-33-103. Mileage fees of jurors and witnesses. (1) All jurors entitled to compensation for mileage in accordance with the "Colorado Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act", article 71 of this title, and all witnesses shall receive, in counties of every class, the same base mileage allowance amount as provided for state officers and employees under section 24-9-104, C.R.S., for each mile actually and necessarily traveled in going from his or her place of residence to the place named in the summons or subpoena and in returning to such place of residence.

(2) No officer of the courts, in which the cause is pending and on which he is in actual attendance in his official capacity, including clerks, sheriffs, bailiffs, jurors, and police officers, shall be entitled to witnesses' fees or mileage as a witness in any criminal case.

(3) No witness before a coroner, commissioner, or magistrate shall be allowed fees unless such witness claims the same under oath before the adjournment of the court.

(4) No witness in any court of record shall be allowed fees unless such witness claims the same under oath, then only for the number of days such witness actually attended such court in the capacity of a witness.

(5) No witness testifying in more than one criminal case on the same day shall be entitled to receive fees as a witness for more than one day by reason thereof, nor more than one day's attendance on any day, though attending in several cases.

(6) The mileage fee shall not be paid to any witness who at the time of testifying is in the legal custody of any state or federal agency or any local law enforcement agency and whose transportation to court is provided at government expense.

ANNOTATION

Fees of witnesses either for attendance or mileage are purely statutory. Union Pac. R. R. v. Brower, 60 Colo. 579, 155 P. 312 (1916); Crawford v. French, 633 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1981).

There is no provision allowing a witness mileage from his residence outside of the state. Union Pac. R. R. v. Brower, 60 Colo. 579, 155 P. 312 (1916).

Witness cannot claim mileage unless he has been subpoenaed. It is clearly not the purpose of this section to compensate a witness for the expense of travel, unless incurred in obedience to the command of the court, and hence, it follows that a witness cannot claim mileage unless he has been subpoenaed. Union Pac. R. R. v. Brower, 60 Colo. 579, 155 P. 312 (1916); Welch v. George, 19 P.3d 675 (Colo. 2000).

Unsubpoenaed, out-of-state witness testifying at a deposition taken in the state is not entitled to any mileage fee. Crawford v. French, 633 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1981).

Mileage expense is determined by the number of miles necessarily traveled by the witness. It follows that the distance is to be measured, not in a direct line, but by the route that the witness is necessarily required to travel. Osborn v. People, 83 Colo. 4, 262 P. 892 (1927).

An expert witness is not entitled to a greater sum for mileage. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Lee, 3 Colo. App. 177, 32 P. 841 (1893); Osborn v. People, 83 Colo. 4, 262 P. 892 (1927).

Because appearance of incarcerated inmates to testify as witnesses at criminal trials was compelled by writs of habeas corpus ad testificandum rather than by subpoenas and since their transportation in response to the writs was furnished at state expense, trial court did not err in refusing to order payment of the statutory mileage allowance to them. Collins v. Bandy, 890 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applied in In re C.R.A.H., 647 P.2d 239 (Colo. App. 1981); Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

13-33-104. Witness fees paid into treasury - when. Any witness fee collected by a clerk of any district court or county court shall be paid to the person entitled to the witness fee, when claimed. Any witness fee collected and not paid to a witness claimant in the same month shall be paid by the clerk of the court to the state treasurer pursuant to section 30-1-112 (2), C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

It is the duty of the clerk to pay all witness fees into the treasury. The clerk of the district court was authorized by this section to collect and receive witness fees taxed as costs in actions tried in the district court, and it was made his duty to pay into the treasury of the county all jury fees when collected, and all witness fees that remained in his possession for a period of a month. Adams v. People, 25 Colo. 532, 55 P. 806 (1898).

Deposit of checks, etc., is equivalent to collection. Where the clerk of a district court received payment of jury and witness fees in checks and drafts which he deposited in bank to his credit, it was equivalent in law to the collection by him of money, and it was his duty to pay over to the county the money thus collected and for failure to do so he might be prosecuted under a charge of failure to pay over money collected. Adams v. People, 25 Colo. 532, 55 P. 806 (1898).

Clerk may be prosecuted upon failure to pay over such fees. The clerk of the district court is an officer in this state entrusted by law with the collection and receiving of jury and witness fees and as such is subject to prosecution under § 13-33-106. Adams v. People, 25 Colo. 532, 55 P. 806 (1898).

13-33-105. Witness fees - claim for. If any person entitled to a witness fee in any district court or county court makes an application to the clerk of such court for payment of the fee, the clerk, if the witness fee claimed was previously collected by him, shall pay the witness claimant the witness fee due. If the fee was not previously collected by the clerk, the state shall pay the witness claimant pursuant to section 13-3-104.

13-40-101. Forcible entry and detainer defined. (1) If any person enters upon or into any lands, tenements, mining claims, or other possessions with force or strong hand or multitude of people, whether any person is actually upon or in the same at the time of such entry, or if any person by threats of violence or injury to the party in possession or by such words or actions as have a natural tendency to excite fear or apprehension of danger gains possession of any lands, tenements, mining claims, or other possessions and detains and holds the same, such person so offending is guilty of a forcible entry and detainer within the meaning of this article.

(2) If any person enters peaceably upon any lands, tenements, mining claims, or other possessions, whether any person is actually in or upon the same at the time of such entry and by force turns the party in possession out or, by threats or by words or actions which have a natural tendency to excite fear or apprehension of danger, frightens the party out of possession and detains and holds the same, such person so offending is guilty of a forcible detainer within the meaning of this article.

Constitutionality. The forcible entry and detainer statute, as applied, neither deprives the tenant of property without due process of law nor violates his right to equal protection of the laws. Hurricane v. Kanover, Ltd., 651 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1982).

Doctrine of retaliatory eviction not applicable. Where a landlord sought to evict a tenant in retaliation for the tenant's claim of water damage to her apartment, the case did not involve retaliation for reporting a housing code violation to a governmental authority and does not create a case for applying the retaliatory eviction doctrine, if this doctrine is even available in Colorado. W.W.G. Corp. v. Hughes, 960 P.2d 720 (Colo. App. 1998).

The modern form of the common-law action of ejectment is forcible entry and detainer as provided in this article. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

Common-law principles govern it. The nature of the action as one in ejectment has not been changed by statutes abolishing fictions or regulating procedure, not even by those adopting a substitute form of action, and resort must still be had to the common law for the principles which govern it. Baumgartner v. Schey, 143 Colo. 373, 353 P.2d 375 (1960).

This section is "separate and apart" from the general provisions relating to procedure before justices of the peace. General Am. Indus., Inc. v. County Court, 136 Colo. 86, 316 P.2d 565 (1957).

It is sui generis. The forcible entry and unlawful detainer provision are sui generis. General Am. Indus., Inc. v. County Court, 136 Colo. 86, 316 P.2d 565 (1957).

When equitable defense is asserted the action acquires an equitable character. Where an equitable defense is interposed in an action in forcible entry and detainer, the action acquires an equitable character as to the plaintiff, who then becomes entitled to such equitable relief as the facts indicate. White v. Widger, 144 Colo. 566, 358 P.2d 592 (1960).

Delay in bringing the action may disqualify action. Where plaintiff had unreasonably delayed exerting his claim in a forcible entry and detainer action until defendant had changed his position, the legal consequence of such delay was disqualification to maintain the action. White v. Widger, 144 Colo. 566, 358 P.2d 592 (1960).

Trial by jury. Where the predominant issues to be tried in an action under this section are legal, the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury. Husar v. Larimer County Court, 629 P.2d 1104 (Colo. App. 1981).

Applied in People v. Bement, 193 Colo. 435, 567 P.2d 382 (1977); Francam Bldg. Corp. v. Fail, 646 P.2d 345 (Colo. 1982).

II. NECESSARY ELEMENTS.

The force contemplated by this section is actual force, and an entry made with no more force than such as is implied in an ordinary trespass is not within the meaning of the section. Goshen v. People, 22 Colo. 270, 44 P. 503 (1896).

Evidence of force or appearances tending to inspire just apprehension of violence is essential. To constitute a cause of action for forcible entry and detainer, it is necessary to keep that force or appearances tending to inspire a just apprehension of violence was used by defendant in obtaining possession. Such requirement is not satisfied by simply showing that the entry was against the will of the possessor. Goad v. Heckler, 19 Colo. App. 479, 76 P. 542 (1904).

Defendant's actions of building a fence to block property access without consulting plaintiffs, using guns in various ways, and posting signs were properly held to have a natural tendency to excite fear and apprehension of danger such that defendants forcibly entered and detained plaintiffs' property. Schuler v. Oldervik, 143 P.3d 1197 (Colo. App. 2006).

Action lies where possession is maintained with force. Whether the facts stated in the complaint constitute a forcible entry or not is immaterial, as the action lies where the possession is maintained with force and strong hand, although the entry may have been peaceable. Miller v. Sparks, 4 Colo. 303 (1878).

It is necessary to show in the complaint that the defendant entered upon the possession of the plaintiff. Miller v. Sparks, 4 Colo. 303 (1878).

This need not be expressly averred. But that which is apparent to the court and appears from a necessary implication out of the record is the same as if it were expressly averred. Miller v. Sparks, 4 Colo. 303 (1878).

That the complaint alleges a demand of possession, when no demand was necessary, does not affect its sufficiency, or render it obnoxious to the objection that two causes of action are stated in one and the same count. Miller v. Sparks, 4 Colo. 303 (1878).

Section gives no right to tenant forcibly evicted by one having better title. Our forcible entry statute is like that of Richard II, and not that of Henry VI, in that it gives no right of restitution to a tenant forcibly evicted by one having a better title. Rudolph v. Thompson, 66 Colo. 98, 179 P. 151 (1919).

Color of title is sufficient as against one having no title whatever. In an action of forcible entry and detainer, it appeared that plaintiff was in possession under a deed from a railroad company which had received a grant of the land; but the patent was withheld pending a question as to the rights of the company. Defendant applied for the land under the homestead act, and was refused, but went on a part of the land, and built a house, and both parties were living on the land when action was commenced. Held, that plaintiff's color of title entitled him to his action against one having no title whatever. Jenkins v. Tynon, 1 Colo. App. 133, 27 P. 893 (1891).

Owner of fee may be guilty of forcible entry. The owner of the fee, as well as a stranger to the title, may be guilty of an unlawful and forcible entry upon premises demised to his own tenant. Farncomb v. Stern, 18 Colo. 279, 32 P. 612 (1893).

Tenant may complain of entry which destroys his possession. Forcible entry which disturbs the possession of the tenant can be complained of by the tenant or by a lessee entitled to possession. Mageon v. Alkire, 41 Colo. 338, 92 P. 720 (1907).

Unless lease retains right of entry. This article takes away the right that existed at common law to make entry by force, although the right to possession may exist. Yet a license reserved in the lease to make such an entry does not contravene it, and, under such a provision, the landlord may enter and remove a tenant upon condition broken, if he uses no unnecessary force to accomplish his purpose. Goshen v. People, 22 Colo. 270, 44 P. 503 (1896).

One who is in the lawful possession of premises may defend such possession. Possessor will not be held liable criminally for the use of force in defending such possession unless the force used was excessive or unnecessary.

Goshen v. People, 22 Colo. 270, 44 P. 503
(1896).

For acts which constitute forcible entry, see
Potts v. Magnes, 17 Colo. 364, 30 P. 58 (1892).

13-40-102. Forcible entry prohibited. No person shall enter into or upon any real property, except in cases where entry is allowed by law, and in such cases not with strong hand or with a multitude of people, but only in a peaceable manner.

13-40-103. Forcible detention prohibited. No person, having peaceably entered into or upon any real property without right to the possession thereof, shall forcibly hold or detain the same as against the person who has a lawful right to such possession.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-104. Unlawful detention defined. (1) Any person is guilty of an unlawful detention of real property in the following cases:

(a) When entry is made, without right or title, into any vacant or unoccupied lands or tenements;

(b) When entry is made, wrongfully, into any public lands, tenements, mining claims, or other possessions which are claimed or held by a person who may have located, entered, or settled upon the same in conformity with the laws, rules, and regulations of the United States, or of this state, in relation thereto;

(c) When any lessee or tenant at will, or by sufferance, or for any part of a year, or for one or more years, of any real property, including a specific or undivided portion of a building or dwelling, holds over and continues in possession of the demised premises, or any portion thereof, after the expiration of the term for which the same were leased, or after such tenancy, at will or sufferance, has been terminated by either party;

(d) When such tenant or lessee holds over without permission of his landlord after any default in the payment of rent pursuant to the agreement under which he holds, and three days' notice in writing has been duly served upon the tenant or lessee holding over, requiring in the alternative the payment of the rent or the possession of the premises. No such agreement shall contain a waiver by the tenant of the three days' notice requirement of this paragraph (d). It shall not be necessary, in order to work a forfeiture of such agreement, for nonpayment of rent, to make a demand for such rent on the day on which the same becomes due; but a failure to pay such rent upon demand, when made, works a forfeiture.

(d.5) When such tenant or lessee holds over, without the permission of the landlord, contrary to any condition or covenant the violation of which is defined as a substantial violation in section 13-40-107.5, and notice in writing has been duly served upon such tenant or lessee in accordance with section 13-40-107.5;

(e) When such tenant or lessee holds over, without such permission, contrary to any other condition or covenant of the agreement under which such tenant or lessee holds, and three days' notice in writing has been duly served upon such tenant or lessee requiring in the alternative the compliance with such condition or covenant or the delivery of the possession of the premises so held;

(e.5) (I) When a tenant or lessee has previously been served with the notice described in paragraph (e) of this subsection (1) requiring compliance with a condition or covenant of the agreement, and subsequent to that notice holds over, without permission of the tenant or lessee's landlord, contrary to the same condition or covenant.

(II) A tenancy may be terminated at any time pursuant to this paragraph (e.5) on the basis of a subsequent violation. The termination shall be effective three days after service of written notice to quit.

(f) When the property has been duly sold under any power of sale, contained in any mortgage or trust deed that was executed by such person, or any person under whom such person claims by title subsequent to date of the recording of such mortgage or trust deed, and the title under such sale has been duly perfected and the purchaser at such sale, or his or her assigns, has duly demanded the possession thereof;

(g) When the property has been duly sold under the judgment or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction and the party or privies to such judgment or decree, after the expiration of the time of redemption when redemption is allowed by law, refuse or neglect to surrender possession thereof after demand therefor has been duly made by the purchaser at such sale, or his or her assigns;

(h) When an heir or devisee continues in possession of any premises sold and conveyed by any personal representative with authority to sell, after demand therefor is duly made;

(i) When a vendee having obtained possession under an agreement to purchase lands or tenements, and having failed to comply with his agreement, withholds possession thereof from his vendor, or assigns, after demand therefor is duly made.

(2) and (3) Repealed.

(4) (a) It shall not constitute an unlawful detention of real property as described in paragraph (d.5), (e), or (e.5) of subsection (1) of this section if the tenant or lessee is the victim of domestic violence, as that term is defined in section 18-6-800.3, C.R.S., or of domestic abuse, as that term is defined in section 13-14-101 (2), which domestic violence or domestic abuse was the cause of or resulted in the alleged unlawful detention and which domestic violence or domestic abuse has been documented by the following:

(I) A police report; or

(II) A valid civil or emergency protection order.

(b) A person is not guilty of an unlawful detention of real property pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) if the alleged violation of the rental or lease agreement is a result of domestic violence or domestic abuse against the tenant or lessee.

(c) A rental, lease, or other such agreement shall not contain a waiver by the tenant or lessee of the protections provided in this subsection (4).

(d) Nothing in this subsection (4) shall prevent the landlord from seeking judgment for possession against the tenant or lessee of the premises who perpetuated the violence or abuse that was the cause of or resulted in the alleged unlawful detention.

No force is necessary to complete a cause of action in unlawful detention. Northrup v. Nicklas, 115 Colo. 207, 171 P.2d 417 (1946).

The only question to be determined in an action for unlawful detainer is the right to possession of the premises, and no demand for damages or rent can be joined in such action. Tyler v. McKenzie, 43 Colo. 233, 95 P. 943 (1908); Beman v. Rocky Ford Nat'l Bank, 100 Colo. 64, 65 P.2d 708 (1937); Stone v. Lerner, 118 Colo. 455, 195 P.2d 964 (1948).

Title cannot be tried. In ordinary actions of forcible entry and detainer, title to the property is not involved and cannot be tried. Kelly v. E. F. Hallack Lumber & Mfg. Co., 22 Colo. 221, 43 P. 1003 (1896); Wise v. Schimmel, 76 Colo. 184, 230 P. 786 (1924).

Where a determination of the right of possession cannot be had without a trial of title, the plaintiff must fail. Hamill v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 22 Colo. 384, 45 P. 411 (1896).

Muniments of title may be put in evidence. In an action of forcible entry and detainer, title may not be tried, but muniments of plaintiff's title may be put in evidence to show the character of his possession. Jenkins v. Tynon, 1 Colo. App. 133, 27 P. 893 (1891).

As a bearing on right of possession, title may indirectly be a subject of inquiry. When the action is for unlawful detention, under subsection (1)(f), equitable defenses may be interposed, and indirectly, but only as bearing on the right of possession, title to the property may be a subject of inquiry. Hamill v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 22 Colo. 384, 45 P. 411 (1896).

Lessee cannot deny lessor's title. In an action of unlawful detainer, plaintiff having proved the execution of a lease and defendant's possession under it, defendant offered to show that his wife had erected buildings on the leased premises and claimed ownership. The court held that, as lessee of plaintiff, defendant could not deny his title, nor set up an outstanding title in another, and the evidence was properly rejected. Eckles v. Booco, 11 Colo. 522, 19 P. 465 (1898).

Specific performance of a verbal agreement to execute a lease of lands cannot be had in an action for the wrongful detainer of the lands. Adcock v. Lieber, 51 Colo. 373, 117 P. 993 (1911).

Court may sustain motion for judgment on the pleadings. Where, in an action in forcible entry and detainer, defendant raised no issue and none was shown by the pleadings, there was nothing left for a jury to determine, and regardless of any contention otherwise, the county court could, and did, properly sustain the motion for judgment on the pleadings. Jorden v. Ellis, 128 Colo. 350, 262 P.2d 275 (1953).

Contempt sanction available in forcible entry and detainer (FED) proceedings in appropriate circumstances. Nothing in C.R.C.P. 107 or the FED statute precludes the remedy of contempt in an FED action under appropriate circumstances. Hartsel Springs Ranch v. Cross Slash Ranch, 179 P.3d 237 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applied in Burrows v. Greene, 198 Colo. 167, 599 P.2d 258 (1979); Hoffman v. Brown, 42 Colo. App. 444, 599 P.2d 959 (1979); Maxwell v. District Court, 641 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

II. PARAGRAPH (b).

For evidence of title being admissible when possessor's title comes from the public domain, see Kelley v. Andrew, 3 Colo. App. 122, 32 P. 175 (1893).

III. PARAGRAPH (c).

Paragraph (c) provides that any tenant shall be deemed guilty of an unlawful detention who shall hold over, and continue in possession of, the demised premises, after the expiration of the term of occupancy. MacKenzie v. Porter, 40 Colo. 340, 91 P. 916 (1907).

The holding over itself constitutes an unlawful detention. This paragraph itself does not say that a holding, only after refusal to surrender on demand, or notice to quit, but that such a holding over itself, constitutes an unlawful detention. Dulmaine v. Reed Bldg. Co., 46 Colo. 469, 104 P. 1038 (1909).

It is inapplicable where tenancy fixed and certain. Where a lease is not from year to year or for an indefinite term, but is a lease where the tenancy is fixed and certain, the provisions of this section do not apply. Koch v. Monaghan, 119 Colo. 557, 205 P.2d 652 (1949), citing Millage v. Spahn, 115 Colo. 444, 175 P.2d 982 (1946).

Notice to quit not necessary when term ends at a certain time. The applicable rule would seem to be that notice to quit is not required where, by the express words of the contract, the term is to end at a certain time.

Dulmaine v. Reed Bldg. Co., 46 Colo. 469, 104 P. 1038 (1909); Swaim v. Swanson, 118 Colo. 509, 197 P.2d 624 (1948); July Bldg. Corp. v. Heathrow & Co., Ltd., 679 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1984).

Action under this paragraph does not bar action for rent. Although each party should bring forward all demands existing at the time of bringing an action in a justice court which can be consolidated, and, upon failure so to do, shall be debarred from afterwards suing for any such demand, a landlord is not barred from bringing an action for rent, which was due at the time of bringing an action of unlawful detainer for the premises under this paragraph (c). MacKenzie v. Porter, 40 Colo. 340, 91 P. 916 (1907).

Demand for rent cannot be joined in action for possession of premises. The action of unlawful detainer is not a common-law action, but is purely statutory, and, in the absence of statutory provisions therefore, a demand for damages or rent cannot be joined in an action for possession of the premises. MacKenzie v. Porter, 40 Colo. 340, 91 P. 916 (1907).

Nor is landlord's right to bring action of unlawful detention affected because tenant must bring action for forcible entry. The right to immediate possession being in the tenant, the action for forcible entry must be brought by her; but that by no means interferes with the right of the landlord to bring the action of unlawful detention upon the determination of the tenancy for any of the causes for which that action will lie under this section. Mageon v. Alkire, 41 Colo. 338, 92 P. 720 (1907).

Complainant alleging tenancy and holding over cannot recover on evidence showing occupation under agreement to purchase. In an action of unlawful detainer where the complainant alleges a tenancy and a holding over, and there is evidence tending to show that the defendant is in occupation under an agreement to purchase, it was not error to instruct the jury that, if they should find the defendant went in under an agreement to purchase, the plaintiff could not recover. Keller v. Klopfer, 3 Colo. 132 (1876).

For action not being commenced prematurely, see Beman v. Rocky Ford Nat'l Bank, 100 Colo. 64, 65 P.2d 708 (1937).

IV. PARAGRAPH (d).

Paragraph (d) relates only to cases of forfeiture by tenants for nonpayment of rent. Getty v. Miller, 10 Colo. App. 331, 51 P. 166 (1897).

Tender of rent renders attempt to terminate lease ineffectual. A tender of rent due under the terms of a lease, if properly made and kept good, renders an attempt to terminate it for nonpayment of rent ineffectual, the tender being equivalent to payment so far as the term of the lease is concerned. Barlow v. Hoffman, 103 Colo. 286, 86 P.2d 239 (1938).

Tender must be sufficient. A tender of rent due on leased premises is ineffectual where the amount of the tender is insufficient to cover the amount in default. Barlow v. Hoffman, 103 Colo. 286, 86 P.2d 239 (1938).

Landlord may forfeit lease even if he has a deposit. Deposit of funds to be applied to the payment of rent for the last eight months of a five-year lease does not deprive the landlord of his right to forfeit the lease if currently accruing rent becomes overdue. Barlow v. Hoffman, 103 Colo. 286, 86 P.2d 239 (1938).

Service of notice constituting election of remedies. Service of notice on a tenant in possession under lease to quit with a demand for possession, made for the express purpose of terminating the lease, constitutes an election of remedies and after such service the landlord has no right to ignore it or to bring an action based on any other theory than that the lease was terminated. Barlow v. Hoffman, 103 Colo. 286, 86 P.2d 239 (1938).

The general rule in Colorado is that a notice to pay or quit constitutes an election by the landlord to terminate the lease unless the notice is rendered ineffective by the tenant's payment of rent. Aigner v. Cowell Sales Co., 660 P.2d 907 (Colo. 1983).

Bringing of suit for rent is an irrevocable election to waive the forfeiture. Perry v. White, 69 Colo. 234, 193 P. 543 (1920).

A judgment in a forcible detainer suit cannot go beyond an adjudication of the right to possession as between the parties except when suit is brought under paragraph (d). Hendron v. Bolander, 101 Colo. 414, 74 P.2d 706 (1937).

A dismissed unlawful detainer case is not res judicata as to the defendant in a subsequent suit involving the same cause of action, and he is not bound by the position he took in the original case where the dismissal was without prejudice. Barlow v. Hoffman, 103 Colo. 286, 86 P.2d 239 (1938).

Complaint must show three days' notice in writing. A complaint under the forcible entry and detainer act, where the only breach is failure to pay rent, is deficient, if it does not show three days' notice in writing requiring in the alternative the payment of rent or possession of the premises. Perry v. White, 69 Colo. 234, 193 P. 543 (1920).

Alternative demands required. A notice sent for alleged default in rental payment, under subsection (1)(d), must include in the alternative a demand for payment within three days or possession of the premises. If it does not include the alternative demands it is insufficient to work a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent. Tumbarello v. Byers, 37 Colo. App. 61, 543 P.2d 1278 (1975).

Waiver of notice. The notice requirement of subsection (1)(d) may be waived by lease provisions. Francam Bldg. Corp. v. Fail, 646 P.2d 345 (Colo. 1982).

Sufficiency of service of notice. The posting of a notice pursuant to the provisions of § 13-40-108 was sufficient to satisfy the three-day notice requirement under paragraph (d) and provide jurisdiction for entry of the judgment for possession. Magliocco v. Olson, 762 P.2d 681 (Colo. App. 1987).

A failure to serve the demand three days before filing suit is not cured by the mere act of appending a copy of the demand to the complaint. Rocky Mtn. Props. v. Purified H2O, 3 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2000).

Statutory notice provision complied with where landlord did not file an unlawful detainer action until ten days after his demand notice was served upon lessee. W. Cities Broad. v. Schueller, 830 P.2d 1074 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 849 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1993).

An unlawful detention action sounds in tort. Federal court predicted that the Colorado supreme court would conclude that an unlawful detention action under subsection (1)(d) sounds in tort. Plaintiff's action for unlawful detention is thus subject to the Federal Tort Claims Act and its administrative remedies, which must be exhausted before an action in district court may be filed. Boehme v. United States Postal Serv., 343 F.3d 1260 (10th Cir. 2003).

V. PARAGRAPH (e).

Where the lessees failed to put the premises to the use required by the lease, the lessees were in breach of the lease and an unlawful detainer action was proper. Edlen Co. v. Nashville Mgmt., Inc., 680 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1984).

Return of rent matured and collected is not required. The landlord, declaring a forfeiture of the lease for the tenant's violation of its conditions, is not required to return any part of the rent matured and collected. The tenant violating the conditions of the lease loses both the term and the rent. Hepp Wall Paper & Mercantile Co. v. Deahl, 53 Colo. 274, 125 P. 491 (1912).

Landlord's acceptance of rent in ignorance of tenant's violation of conditions of lease is no waiver of the condition, or the breach of it. Hepp Wall Paper & Mercantile Co. v. Deahl, 53 Colo. 274, 125 P. 491 (1912).

Three-day notice required before commencement of unlawful detainer action. W. Cities Broad. v. Schueller, 830 P.2d 1074 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 849 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1993).

Statutory notice provision complied with where landlord did not file an unlawful detainer action until ten days after his demand notice was served upon lessee. W. Cities Broad. v. Schueller, 830 P.2d 1074 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 849 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1993).

VI. PARAGRAPH (f).

Where grantor in trust deed does not unlawfully detain mortgaged premises after trustee's sale, the purchaser has no occasion to resort to the provisions of the forcible entry and detainer statute. Lane v. Morris, 77 Colo. 343, 237 P. 154 (1925).

The recovery provided for in paragraph (f) was not intended as a penalty for the unlawful withholding of mortgaged premises by the owner after foreclosure sale, but as compensation for the use thereof. Lane v. Morris, 77 Colo. 343, 237 P. 154 (1925).

Deed of trust, trustee's deed, and demand for possession with officer's return make prima facie case. In an action for possession under a foreclosure sale, when the plaintiff had introduced in evidence the deed of trust, the trustee's deed, and demand for possession with the officer's return on the demand, he had proven a prima facie case, and upon defendant's failure to offer any evidence, plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899).

Foreclosure and sale in violation of contract is a defense. It is a defense to an action for unlawful detention brought under paragraph (f) against the grantor of a deed of trust that it was foreclosed and a sale made thereunder in violation of a contract between him and the beneficiary that a foreclosure should not take place until the happening of certain contingencies, and then only in a certain manner. Hamill v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 22 Colo. 384, 45 P. 411 (1896).

VII. PARAGRAPH (i).

For note, "Vendor's Remedies Under Colorado Executory Land Contracts", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 296 (1950). For note, "Relief upon Default Under a Contract for Purchase and Sale of Land", see 29 Dicta 7 (1952).

It is immaterial whether the contract to convey is designated a "contract to purchase" or a "contract of purchase". Schiffner v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 79 Colo. 249, 244 P. 1012 (1926).

Vendor may sue for unlawful detainer or in ejectment. Unlawful detainer will lie where a vendee in possession under a contract to purchase withholds possession from the vendor after default and demand. Schiffner v. Chicago

Title & Trust Co., 79 Colo. 249, 244 P. 1012 (1926).

Vendee cannot question vendor's title.

Where a vendee went into possession of real estate in pursuance of a contract of sale, he cannot be heard to question his vendor's title in an action by the vendor to recover the premises for a failure on the part of the vendee to comply with the contract, and a complaint that alleges such contract of sale and the failure of the vendee to comply therewith is sufficient as against a general demurrer without an allegation of ownership. Ruth v. Smith, 29 Colo. 154, 68 P. 278 (1901).

VIII. SUBSECTION (2).

The language of subsection (2)(a) refers to § 13-40-124 for the definition of a qualified farm owner-tenant and the circumstances under which the attendant rights can be exercised. Fed. Land Bank of Wichita v. Needham, 759 P.2d 799 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided prior to repeal of subsection (2)).

13-40-105. Crops of possessor. In all cases arising under section 13-40-104 (1) (c) to (1) (i), the person in possession is entitled to cultivate and gather the crops, if any, planted or sown by him previous to the service of the demand to deliver up possession, and then grown or growing on the premises, and shall have the right to enter such premises for the purpose of cultivating or removing such crops, first paying or tendering to the party entitled to the possession of said premises a reasonable compensation for the use of the land before removing such crops.

ANNOTATION

Where a tenancy is from year to year this section is applicable and under it the tenant has the right to "away-going" crops sown by him previous to the service of the demand to deliver up possession of the premises, unless there is a specific agreement providing otherwise. Millage v. Spahn, 115 Colo. 444, 175 P.2d 982 (1946).

But not where tenancy is for a fixed term. But where the tenancy is fixed certain, that is, where the tenant knows when he sows crops precisely when the lease will end, and it is plain he cannot reap before the lease terminates, he has no right to the crops remaining unharvested, or at lease not to those that do not mature until after the termination of the lease. Millage v. Spahn, 115 Colo. 444, 175 P.2d 982 (1946).

This section does not apply to a lease that is extinguished upon the foreclosure of a deed of trust. Rather, it applies only to forcible entry and detainer actions where a landlord has evicted a tenant after a crop has been planted, but before it has been harvested. Elrick v. Merrill, 10 P.3d 689 (Colo. App. 2000).

Lessee will not be entitled to crops after fixed term expires. Thus, where tenancy was for a five-year period, and lessee knew the date of termination of the lease at the time he planted his crop and was cautioned in regard thereto, the provisions of this section did not apply, and lessee was not entitled to the crops remaining unharvested at the termination of the lease. Koch v. Monaghan, 119 Colo. 557, 205 P.2d 652 (1949), citing Millage v. Spahn, 115 Colo. 444, 175 P.2d 982 (1946).

Where notice of termination is given after tilling, tenant may harvest. Where tenant summer-tilled some of the land before receiving notice of termination of the tenancy, he was entitled to his share of the crop on the acres tilled before receiving the notice. Hemberger v. Hagemann, 120 Colo. 431, 210 P.2d 995 (1949).

Right to crops is not a defense to forcible entry and detainer. The right of a tenant under certain circumstances to growing crops is not in and of itself a valid defense to a complaint in forcible entry and detainer. Orebaugh v. Dorskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

13-40-106. Written demand. The demand required by section 13-40-104 shall be made in writing, specifying the grounds of the demandant's right to the possession of such premises, describing the same, and the time when the same shall be delivered up, and shall be signed by the person claiming such possession, his agent, or his attorney.

ANNOTATION

The Colorado supreme court has recognized the rule requiring a demand for rent due prior to the exercise of the right of reentry. Lessor, before he exercises the right of reentry reserved for breach of covenant to pay rent, must make an actual demand of the amount of rent due, in strict compliance with the requirements of the common law. Whenever a forfeiture for the nonpayment of rent is to be established, it is necessary to prove such a demand. Audubon Commercial Area Co. v. Skelly Oil Co., 268 F. Supp. 883 (D. Colo. 1967).

Demand must be in writing and left with the party. A demand, formal according to all of the requirements of the law, and set out in writing, if read to the party, is not sufficient. It must be made in writing and left with the party or it is no demand. Doss v. Craig, 1 Colo. 177 (1869).

A party cannot be guilty of wrongful detainer until after this demand has been made upon him. Doss v. Craig, 1 Colo. 177 (1869).

A distinction in respect to necessity of demand exists between action for forcible entry, and action for unlawful detainer after a peaceable and lawful entry. Farncomb v. Stern, 18 Colo. 279, 32 P. 612 (1893).

No demand is necessary where entry was forcible. In an action of forcible entry and detainer, where the entry complained of was forcible and illegal, the plaintiff need not make a demand for the possession of the premises before commencing his action. Farncomb v. Stern, 18 Colo. 279, 32 P. 612 (1893).

Demand may be signed by an agent or attorney. This section expressly provides that the demand for possession may be signed by the agent or attorney of the person claiming such possession. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899).

Sufficiency of notice cannot be questioned in appellate court when due service was conceded. Where, in wrongful detainer by landlord against tenant, the latter concedes, in the court below, due service of notice to quit, he will not be heard to question the sufficiency of the notice upon error. Hepp Wall Paper & Mercantile Co. v. Deahl, 53 Colo. 274, 125 P. 491 (1912).

Omission to make demand is not cured by plea of title in defendant or by verdict. In an action for unlawful detainer under this section the plaintiff must aver and prove a demand in writing for possession of the premises which he seeks to recover, and the omission to make such demand is not cured by plea of title in defendant nor by verdict. Doss v. Craig, 1 Colo. 177 (1869).

The common-law necessity for a demand of rent may be obviated by a provision in the lease or by the acts of the parties. Audubon Com. Area Co. v. Skelly Oil Co., 268 F. Supp. 883 (D. Colo. 1967).

13-40-107. Notice to quit. (1) A tenancy may be terminated by notice in writing, served not less than the respective period fixed before the end of the applicable tenancy, as follows:

- (a) A tenancy for one year or longer, ninety-one days;
- (b) A tenancy of six months or longer but less than a year, twenty-eight days;
- (c) A tenancy of one month or longer but less than six months, seven days;
- (d) A tenancy of one week or longer but less than one month, or a tenancy at will, three days;
- (e) A tenancy for less than one week, one day.

(2) Such notice shall describe the property and the particular time when the tenancy will terminate and shall be signed by the landlord or tenant, the party giving such notice or his agent or attorney.

(3) Any person in possession of real property with the assent of the owner is presumed to be a tenant at will until the contrary is shown.

(4) No notice to quit shall be necessary from or to a tenant whose term is, by agreement, to end at a time certain.

(5) Except as otherwise provided in section 38-33-112, C.R.S., the provisions of subsections (1) and (4) of this section shall not apply to the termination of a residential tenancy during the ninety-day period provided for in said section.

Law reviews. For note, "Holdover Tenants in Colorado", see 34 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 320 (1962). For article, "The Effect of Zoning Violations on the Enforceability of Leases", see 19 Colo. Law. 2077 (1990).

Constitutionality. The forcible entry and detainer statute, as applied, neither deprives the tenant of property without due process of law nor violates his right to equal protection of the laws. Hurricane v. Kanover, Ltd., 651 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1982).

Notice to quit purporting to be by landlord's attorney is good. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899).

It is not essential that the landlord's notice to quit should be upon a single piece of paper. Two papers, relating to the same matter, and served at the same time, are necessarily construed as one document. Hepp Wall Paper & Mercantile Co. v. Deahl, 53 Colo. 274, 125 P. 491 (1912).

Provision for notice to tenant has no application where tenant voluntarily vacates. This section, which provides that a tenant from month to month is entitled to 10 days notice to quit to terminate the tenancy, has no application to an action to recover rent for premises occupied without a lease from month to month, or other definite period, brought after the premises had been voluntarily vacated by the tenant. Salomon v. O'Donnell, 5 Colo. App. 35, 36 P. 893 (1894).

Notice to quit is not required where, by the express words of the lease, the term ends at a day certain. Dulmaine v. Reed Bldg. Co., 46 Colo. 469, 104 P. 1038 (1909); Hancock v. Central Shoe & Clothing Co., 53 Colo. 190, 125 P. 123 (1912); Swaim v. Swanson, 118 Colo. 509, 197 P.2d 624 (1948); Mahaney v. Field, 120 Colo. 518, 211 P.2d 827 (1949).

Notice to quit not required. Defendants were tenants at sufferance with a possessory interest pursuant to an agreement which expired at a time certain. Therefore, a notice to quit was not a condition precedent to maintaining an action for unlawful detention. July Bldg. Corp. v. Heathrow & Co., Ltd., 679 P.2d 1120 (Colo. App. 1984).

Payment of rent at stated periods is a criterion as to duration of term. The reservation of rent and its payment at stated periods, as for a year or month, is, in the absence of express agreement as to length of the lease, one of the principal criterions to determine the duration of the term. Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 77 (1878).

Month to month tenant entitled to ten days notice from landlord who was purchaser of premises at federal tax sale. Danyew v. Phelps, 676 P.2d 707 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section recognizes a monthly tenancy as distinct from one from year to year. Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 77 (1878).

Holding merely at will of landlord deemed tenancy from year to year. A holding merely at the will of the landlord, according to the ancient meaning of the term "tenancy at will", is an estate unknown in modern times, unless where created by express agreement between the parties, or by clear implication. All such tenancies are, for the purpose of a notice to quit, deemed to be tenancies from year to year. Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 77 (1878).

Where term is for less than year holding over is implied to be for like term. Where a tenant for a year or for years holds over after the expiration of his term, with the assent of his landlord, the holding is implied to be from year to year. But where the term is for a shorter period than a year, according to the current of authorities, both English and American, the holding over is implied to be for a like term, and the notice to quit is determined thereby, and is sufficient if it equals the length of the term or the interval between the times of payment of rent. Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 77 (1878).

Where there was a holding over by a tenant from month to month, after conveyance by the original lessor, with the assent of both the landlord and tenant, it was held that such holding over was upon the same terms as the prior letting, and, in the absence of a new lease, the character of the tenancy continued the same. Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 77 (1878).

Where a tenant occupied premises for several years, and then entered into a lease for one year certain, it was held that his former occupancy did not inure to his benefit and constitute him a tenant from year to year and so entitle him to three months notice to quit under this section. Brandenburg v. Reithman, 7 Colo. 323, 3 P. 577 (1884).

Applied in Maxwell v. District Court, 641 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-107.5. Termination of tenancy for substantial violation - definition - legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:

(a) Violent and antisocial criminal acts are increasingly committed by persons who base their operations in rented homes, apartments, and commercial properties;

(b) Such persons often lease such property from owners who are unaware of the dangerous nature of such persons until after the persons have taken possession of the property;

(c) Under traditional landlord and tenant law, such persons may have established the technical, legal right to occupy the premises for a fixed term which continues long after they have demonstrated themselves unfit to coexist with their neighbors and co-tenants; furthermore, such persons often resist eviction as long as possible;

(d) In certain cases it is necessary to curtail the technical, legal right of occupancy of such persons in order to protect the equal or greater rights of neighbors and co-tenants, the interests of property owners, the values of trust and community within neighborhoods, and the health, safety, and welfare of all the people of this state.

(2) It is declared to be an implied term of every lease of real property in this state that the tenant shall not commit a substantial violation while in possession of the premises.

(3) As used in this section, "substantial violation" means any act or series of acts by the tenant or any guest or invitee of the tenant that, when considered together:

(a) Occurs on or near the premises and endangers the person or willfully and substantially endangers the property of the landlord, any co-tenant, or any person living on or near the premises; or

(b) Occurs on or near the premises and constitutes a violent or drug-related felony prohibited under article 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 12, or 18 of title 18, C.R.S.; or

(c) Occurs on the tenant's leased premises or the common areas, hallway, grounds, parking lot, or other area located in the same building or complex in which the tenant's leased premises are located and constitutes a criminal act in violation of federal or state law or local ordinance that:

(I) Carries a potential sentence of incarceration of one hundred eighty days or more; and

(II) Has been declared to be a public nuisance under state law or local ordinance based on a state statute.

(4) (a) A tenancy may be terminated at any time on the basis of a substantial violation. The termination shall be effective three days after service of written notice to quit.

(b) The notice to quit shall describe the property, the particular time when the tenancy will terminate, and the grounds for termination. The notice shall be signed by the landlord or by the landlord's agent or attorney.

(5) (a) In any action for possession under this section, the landlord has the burden of proving the occurrence of a substantial violation by a preponderance of the evidence.

(b) In any action for possession under this section, it shall be a defense that:

(I) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2005, p. 402, § 2, effective July 1, 2005.)

(II) The tenant did not know of, and could not reasonably have known of or prevented, the commission of a substantial violation by a guest or invitee but immediately notified a law enforcement officer of his or her knowledge of the substantial violation.

(c) (I) The landlord shall not have a basis for possession under this section if the tenant or lessee is the victim of domestic violence, as that term is defined in section 18-6-800.3, C.R.S., or of domestic abuse, as that term is defined in section 13-14-101 (2), which domestic violence or domestic abuse was the cause of or resulted in the alleged substantial violation and which domestic violence or domestic abuse has been documented pursuant to the provisions set forth in section 13-40-104 (4).

(II) Nothing in this paragraph (c) shall prevent the landlord from seeking possession against a tenant or lessee of the premises who perpetuated the violence or abuse that was the cause of or resulted in the alleged substantial violation.

ANNOTATION

Section does not conflict with city ordinances that impose strict liability for over-occupancy. To the contrary, the section and the ordinances appear to be complimentary in that they provide mechanisms to deal with lease violations. Boulder County Apt. Ass'n v. City of Boulder, 97 P.3d 332 (Colo. App. 2004).

Lessee committed no substantial breach that would allow landowners to defeat the lease pursuant to this section. Whether a breach of a contract is material, and therefore excuses further performance by a party, is a question of fact. Because the trial court's findings that no breach of a lease to remove sand, gravel, and rock from a landowner's property are supported by the record, lessee committed no substantial breach. Carder, Inc. v. Cash, 97 P.3d 174 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court erred in granting restitution of the premises where owner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that tenant violated lease covenant by committing criminal activity. Unlawful detention for violation of a lease covenant requires proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the covenant was actually violated, not merely that the owner had reasonable grounds to believe that it was violated. Miles v. Fleming, 214 P.3d 1054 (Colo. 2009).

13-40-108. Service of notice to quit. A notice to quit or demand for possession of real property may be served by delivering a copy thereof to the tenant or other person occupying such premises, or by leaving such copy with some person, a member of the tenant's family above the age of fifteen years, residing on or in charge of the premises, or, in case no one is on the premises at the time service is attempted, by posting such copy in some conspicuous place on the premises.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on Hemberger v. Hagemann, appearing below, see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 196 (1950).

Acknowledgment of receipt of notice is equivalent to any statutory method of service so long as the notice reaches the hands of the person sought to be notified in sufficient time.

Sufficiency of the notice or the manner of service thereof cannot be questioned where notice was conceded to have been received. Hemberger v. Hagemann, 120 Colo. 431, 210 P.2d 995 (1949).

Applied in Hurricane v. Kanover, Ltd., 651 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-109. Jurisdiction of courts. The district courts in their respective districts and county courts in their respective counties have jurisdiction of all cases of forcible entry, forcible detainer, or unlawful detainer arising under this article, and the person entitled to the possession of any premises may recover possession thereof by action brought in any of said courts in the manner provided in this article. On and after January 1, 1991, in all actions brought before county courts under section 13-40-104 (1) (f) to (1) (i), where the allegations of the complaint are put in issue by a verified answer and in actions in which the verified answer alleges a monthly rental value of the property in excess of fifteen thousand dollars, the county court, upon the filing of said answer, shall suspend all proceedings therein and certify said cause and transmit the papers therein to the district court of the same county. Causes so certified by the county court shall be proceeded within the courts to which they have been so certified in all respects as if originally begun in the court to which they have been certified. On and after January 1, 1991, the jurisdiction of the county court to enter judgment for rent, or damages, or both and to render judgment on a counterclaim in forcible entry and detainer shall be limited to a total of fifteen thousand dollars in favor of either party, exclusive of costs and attorney fees.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado's New Court System", see 41 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1964).

In forcible entry and detainer suit court may give judgment on pleadings. Where, in an action in forcible entry and detainer, defendant raised no issue and none was shown by the pleadings, there was nothing left for a jury to determine, and, regardless of any contention otherwise, the county court could, and did, properly sustain the motion for judgment on the pleadings. Jorden v. Ellis, 128 Colo. 350, 262 P.2d 275 (1953).

Forcible entry and detainer action in county court is limited to question of posses- sion, and title to the land involved may not be an issue for resolution there. Aasgaard v. Spar Consol. Mining & Dev. Co., 185 Colo. 157, 522 P.2d 726 (1974).

When a party validly raises the issue of ownership in a district court forcible entry and detainer action that directly affects the party's right to possession, the district court must determine ownership prior to ruling on possession. A forcible entry and detainer proceeding in district court is not rendered inappropriate simply because the issue of ownership arises. Schuler v. Oldervik, 143 P.3d 1197 (Colo. App. 2006).

13-40-110. Action - how commenced. (1) An action under this article is commenced by filing with the court a complaint in writing describing the property with reasonable certainty, the grounds for the recovery thereof, the name of the person in possession or occupancy, and a prayer for recovery of possession. The complaint may also set forth the amount of rent due, the rate at which it is accruing, the amount of damages due, and the rate at which they are accruing and may include a prayer for rent due or to become due, present and future damages, costs, and any other relief to which plaintiff is entitled.

(2) In an action for termination of a tenancy in a mobile home park, the complaint, in addition to the requirements of subsection (1) of this section, shall specify the particular reasons for termination as such reasons are stated in section 38-12-203, C.R.S. Such complaint shall specify the approximate time, place, and manner in which the tenant allegedly committed the acts giving rise to the complaint. If the action is based on the mobile home or mobile home lot being out of compliance with the rules and regulations adopted pursuant to section 38-12-203 (1) (c), C.R.S., the complaint shall specify that the home owner was given thirty days from the date of service or posting of the notice to quit to cure the noncompliance and that thirty days have passed and the noncompliance has not been cured.

Substantial facts must be set out in complaint. This section requires that the substantial facts, upon which the plaintiff relies, shall be set out in the complaint. Klopfer v. Keller, 1 Colo. 410 (1871).

Fact of written demand for the premises. It is the duty of the plaintiff, if demand in writing for the premises was made, to set it out in his petition as a substantial fact, as required in this section. Doss v. Craig, 1 Colo. 177 (1869).

Allegation held one of material facts and not of mere evidence. An allegation that defendant by “beating plaintiff, and by superior strength and numbers, with threats of violence, did forcibly eject plaintiff”, is an allegation not of mere evidence, but of material facts. Kenny v. Daugherty, 67 Colo. 56, 185 P. 471 (1919).

This and § 13-40-113 are the only sections of the act in any way relating to the pleadings required of the parties, where the action is commenced in a justice court and by implication exclude necessity for further written pleadings. Joss v. Hallett, 39 Colo. 392, 89 P. 809 (1907).

Verification permitted at close of case. In a forcible entry and detainer action brought under this article in the district court, plaintiffs were properly permitted at the close of their case to verify their complaint. Franklin v. Macedonia Baptist Church, 123 Colo. 432, 231 P. 2d 793 (1951).

13-40-111. Issuance and return of summons. (1) Upon filing the complaint as provided in section 13-40-110, the clerk of the court or the attorney for the plaintiff shall issue a summons. The summons shall command the defendant to appear before the court at a place named in such summons and at a time and on a day which shall be not less than seven days nor more than fourteen days from the day of issuing the same to answer the complaint of plaintiff. The summons shall also contain a statement addressed to the defendant stating: “If you fail to file with the court, at or before the time for appearance specified in the summons, an answer to the complaint setting forth the grounds upon which you base your claim for possession and denying or admitting all of the material allegations of the complaint, judgment by default may be taken against you for the possession of the property described in the complaint, for the rent, if any, due or to become due, for present and future damages and costs, and for any other relief to which the plaintiff is entitled. If you are claiming that the landlord’s failure to repair the residential premises is a defense to the landlord’s allegation of nonpayment of rent, the court will require you to pay into the registry of the court, at the time of filing your answer, the rent due less any expenses you have incurred based upon the landlord’s failure to repair the residential premises.”

(2) Repealed.

(3) For actions commenced pursuant to section 13-40-104 (1) (f) and (1) (g) only, if no answer to the complaint is filed as provided in subsection (1) of this section, the court shall examine the complaint, and, if satisfied that venue is proper and the plaintiff is entitled to possession of the premises, the court shall dispense with appearances by the plaintiff or a hearing and shall forthwith enter a judgment for possession, present or future damages, and costs.

ANNOTATION

Unsuccessful party by appeal waives irregularities in the summons. The unsuccessful party, by taking an appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace, waives all irregularities in the summons and service thereof. Fort v. Demmer, 91 Colo. 285, 14 P.2d 489 (1932).

Applied in Maxwell v. District Court, 641 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-112. Service. (1) Such summons may be served by personal service as in any civil action. A copy of the complaint must be served with the summons.

(2) If personal service cannot be had upon the defendant by a person qualified under the Colorado rules of civil procedure to serve process, after having made diligent effort to make such personal service, such person may make service by posting a copy of the summons and the complaint in some conspicuous place upon the premises. In addition thereto, the plaintiff shall mail, no later than the next business day following the day on which he or she files the complaint, a copy of the summons, or, in the event that an alias summons is issued, a copy of the alias summons, and a copy of the complaint to the defendant at the premises by postage prepaid, first-class mail.

(3) Personal service or service by posting shall be made at least seven days before the day for appearance specified in such summons, and the time and manner of such service shall be endorsed upon such summons by the person making service thereof.

(4) For purposes of this section, "business days" means any calendar day excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays.

An actual appearance always cures a defective service of a summons, when, except for such defect, the court would have jurisdiction of the person and the subject matter of the suit. Tyler v. McKenzie, 43 Colo. 233, 95 P. 943 (1908).

13-40-113. Answer of defendant - additional and amended pleadings. (1) The defendant shall file with the court, at or before the time specified for his appearance in the summons, an answer in writing setting forth the grounds on which he bases his claim for possession and admitting or denying all of the material allegations of the complaint and presenting every defense which then exists and upon which he intends to rely, either by including the same in his answer or by filing simultaneously therewith motions setting forth every such defense.

(2) The court for good cause may permit the filing of additional and amended pleadings where such will not result in delay prejudicial to the defendant.

ANNOTATION

Structure of F.E.D. statute evinces a legislative intent to accelerate trial settings in order to provide expeditious remedy. Butler v. Farner, 704 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1985).

Due process is satisfied so long as F.E.D. statute permits continuances in cases requiring intensive trial preparation. Butler v. Farner, 704 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1985).

Defendant failing to file answer admits allegations of complaint. A defendant, by failing to file an answer to the complaint in an unlawful detainer action, admits the allegations therein contained. Feste v. People, 93 Colo. 206, 25 P.2d 177 (1933).

A defendant in an unlawful detainer action who fails to answer within the required time thereby admits the allegations set forth in the complaint. Spar Consol. Mining & Dev. Co. v. Aasgaard, 33 Colo. App. 35, 516 P.2d 127 (1973), aff'd, 185 Colo. 157, 522 P.2d 726 (1974).

Failure to answer results in default judgment. Failure of defendant in a county court proceeding for forcible entry and detainer to file a timely answer in writing properly results in a default judgment against him. Spar Consol. Mining & Dev. Co. v. Aasgaard, 33 Colo. App. 35, 516 P.2d 127 (1973), aff'd, 185 Colo. 157, 522 P.2d 726 (1974).

If no answer is filed, there is no issue to be tried. In an unlawful detainer action where a written complaint is filed in compliance with § 13-40-110, if defendant fails to file a written answer, there is no issue to be tried, and defendant is in default in both original and appellate courts, if an appeal be taken from a judgment against him. Fort v. Demmer, 91 Colo. 285, 14 P.2d 489 (1932).

Where defendant's answer admits possession, plaintiff need not prove it. In an action of forcible entry and detainer, where the defendant in her answer admits possession, it is not necessary for plaintiff to prove possession. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899).

Answers held insufficient. An answer denying that plaintiff gave defendant an option to purchase the premises and that defendant was to pay a specified sum, and denying that defendant had forfeited any rights to the property by virtue of an option to purchase the same, or otherwise, allegations of such facts appearing in the complaint, was held insufficient. Bonnell v. Gill, 41 Colo. 59, 92 P. 13 (1907).

Answer in a forcible entry and detainer action stating mere conclusions is insufficient under this section. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899); McCrimmon v. Raymond, 77 Colo. 81, 234 P. 1058 (1925).

An answer merely denying that defendants took possession by force was held not compliance with this section. Kenney v. Daugherty, 67 Colo. 56, 185 P. 471 (1919).

Motion for bill of particulars is not provided for in this section, and it does not constitute an answer because it fails to admit or deny the material allegations. Spar Consol. Mining & Dev. Co. v. Aasgaard, 33 Colo. App. 35, 516 P.2d 127 (1973), aff'd, 185 Colo. 157, 522 P.2d 726 (1974).

13-40-114. Delay in trial - undertaking. If either party requests a delay in trial longer than five days, the court in its discretion may, upon good cause shown, require either of the parties to give bond or other security approved and fixed by the court in an amount for the payment to the opposite party of such sum as he may be damaged due to the delay.

A defendant as such is not barred from denying a plaintiff's title, but it is a tenant who is not allowed to deny the landlord's title. The latter relation must exist to apply the rule. The plaintiff may allege that the defendant is a tenant and introduce evidence to prove it, but that is not conclusive upon the defendant. The latter may go forward and prove that he never was a tenant, but a purchaser or mortgagor in possession, for instance, and, for that reason, entitled to remain. Reitze v. Humphreys, 53 Colo. 171, 125 P. 522 (1912).

Defendant may set up defense that he is a mortgagor. In an action of wrongful detainer by landlord against tenant, the defendant may set up as a defense that he is the owner in equity of the premises, and the plaintiff, though invested with the title, a mere mortgagee. And he may prove such relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, thus disproving the relation of landlord and tenant, averred in the complaint. The rule that the tenant may not deny the landlord's title has no application. Reitze v. Humphreys, 53 Colo. 171, 125 P. 522 (1912).

Equitable defenses may be interposed in actions of forcible entry and detainer. Adcock v. Lieber, 51 Colo. 373, 117 P. 993 (1911); McCrimmon v. Raymond, 77 Colo. 81, 234 P. 1058 (1925).

Defendant may offer all facts entitling him to possession at law or equity. All the substantial facts upon which a defendant relies, entitling him to the possession of the property, include such facts as will entitle him to the possession at law or in equity. Adcock v. Lieber, 51 Colo. 373, 117 P. 993 (1911).

Fact that possessor did not know plaintiff's residence is no defense. The allegation in the answer that defendant was not able to surrender and deliver up to plaintiff possession of the premises described in the demand, because she was not acquainted with him, and did not know his place of residence, constitutes no defense at all. No livery of seisin was necessary, and all that was necessary for defendant to have done in order to have complied with the demand was to have vacated the premises. Ensley v. Page, 13 Colo. App. 452, 59 P. 225 (1899).

Section does not require pleading of evidence. The provision of this section that the answer shall set forth "all the substantial facts", does not require the pleading of evidence. W.H. Swanson Theater Co. v. Pueblo Opera Block Inv. Co., 70 Colo. 83, 197 P. 762 (1921).

ANNOTATION

This section does not authorize the trial court to issue a default judgment for failure to comply with the court's order requiring the posting of bond. Rather, the remedy for failure to post the bond required by the court is immediate trial. Beeghly v. Mack, 20 P.3d 610 (Colo. App. 2001).

This section is applicable when a forcible entry and detainer action is brought, regardless of whether other issues regarding ownership may be raised and resolved during the pendency of such action. Beeghly v. Mack, 20 P.3d 610 (Colo. App. 2001).

13-40-115. Judgment - writ of restitution. (1) Upon the trial of any action under this article if service was had only by posting in accordance with section 13-40-112 (2) and if the court finds that the defendant has committed an unlawful detainer, the court shall enter judgment for the plaintiff to have restitution of the premises and shall issue a writ of restitution. The court may also continue the case for further hearing from time to time and may issue alias and pluries summonses until personal service upon the defendant is had.

(2) Upon such trial or further hearing under this article after personal service is had upon the defendant in accordance with section 13-40-112 (1), if the court or jury has not already tried the issue of unlawful detainer, it may do so, and, if it finds that the defendant has committed an unlawful detainer, the court shall enter judgment for the plaintiff to have restitution of the premises and shall issue a writ of restitution. In addition to such judgment for restitution, the court or jury shall further find the amount of rent, if any, due to the plaintiff from the defendant at the time of trial, the amount of damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff to the time of the trial on account of the unlawful detention of the property by the defendant, and damages sustained by the plaintiff to the time of trial on account of injuries to the property, and judgment shall enter for such amounts, together with reasonable attorney's fees and costs, upon which judgment execution shall issue as in other civil actions. Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the entry of judgment in excess of the jurisdictional limit of the court.

(3) A writ of restitution that is issued by the court pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) of this section shall remain in effect for forty-nine days after issuance and shall automatically expire thereafter.

Res judicata of judgment. The entry of a default judgment on the issue of possession properly entered pursuant to this section is a final order and is res judicata on the issue. Magliocco v. Olson, 762 P.2d 681 (Colo. App. 1987).

Statute allows a plaintiff in an FED action to recover damages for past due rent in addition to restitution of the premises. Plaintiff's damages are not limited to the reasonable rental value of the use of the premises during the period of the unlawful detainer. Renco Assocs. v. D'Lance, Inc., 214 P.3d 1069 (Colo. App. 2009).

When this section is read with § 13-40-123, it is clear that the award of attorney fees in a forcible entry and detainer action is in the nature of compensatory damages. Thus, any prevailing party in a forcible entry and detainer action is entitled to attorney fees, and the trial court erred in refusing to award them. Wilcox v. Clark, 42 P.3d 29 (Colo. App. 2001).

Contempt sanction available in forcible entry and detainer (FED) proceedings in appropriate circumstances. Nothing in C.R.C.P. 107 or the FED statute precludes the remedy of contempt in an FED action under appropriate circumstances. Hartsel Springs Ranch v. Cross Slash Ranch, 179 P.3d 237 (Colo. App. 2007).

Court erred in granting restitution of the premises where owner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that tenant violated lease covenant by committing criminal activity. Unlawful detention for violation of a lease covenant requires proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the covenant was actually violated, not merely that the owner had reasonable grounds to believe that it was violated. Miles v. Fleming, 214 P.3d 1054 (Colo. 2009).

Applied in Maxwell v. District Court, 641 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-116. Dismissal. If the plaintiff's action brought for any of the causes mentioned in this article, upon the trial thereon, is dismissed or the action fails to prove the plaintiff's right to the possession of the premises described in the complaint, the defendant shall have judgment and execution for his costs.

13-40-117. Appeals. (1) If either party feels aggrieved by the judgment rendered in such action before the county court, he may appeal to the district court, as in other cases tried before the county court, with the additional requirements provided in this article.

(2) Upon the court's taking such appeal, all further proceedings in the case shall be stayed, and the appellate court shall thereafter issue all needful writs and process to carry out any judgment which may be rendered thereon in the appellate court.

(3) If the appellee believes that he may suffer serious economic harm during the pendency of the appeal, he may petition the court taking the appeal to order that an additional undertaking be required of the appellant to cover the anticipated harm. The court shall order such undertaking only after a hearing and upon a finding that the appellee has shown a substantial likelihood of suffering such economic harm during the pendency of the appeal and that he will not adequately be protected under the appeals bond and the other requirements for appeal pursuant to sections 13-40-118, 13-40-120, and 13-40-123.

Judgment for immediate possession is proper. In an action by a landlord against a tenant, judgment for immediate possession is proper. The only effect of this section is to stay enforcement of the judgment for 48 hours, in order that an appeal may in the meantime be perfected. Dulmaine v. Reed Bldg. Co., 46 Colo. 469, 104 P. 1038 (1909).

13-40-118. Deposit of rent. In all appeals from the judgment of a county court, in an action founded upon section 13-40-104 (1) (d), the defendant, at the time of the filing thereof, shall deposit with the court the amount of rent found due and specified in such judgment. Unless such deposit is made, the appeal is not perfected, and proceedings upon such judgment shall thereupon be had accordingly. If the appeal is perfected, the court shall transmit such deposit to the clerk of the appellate court, with the papers in such case; and the appellant thereafter, at the time when the rents become due as specified in the judgment appealed from and as often as the same become due, shall deposit the amount thereof with the clerk of such appellate court. In case the appellant, at any time during the pendency of such appeal and before final judgment therein, neglects or fails to make any deposit of rent, falling due at the time specified in the judgment appealed from, the court in which such appeal is pending, upon such fact being made to appear and upon motion of the appellee, shall affirm the judgment appealed from with costs; and proceedings thereupon shall be had as in like cases determined upon the merits.

ANNOTATION

This section, which relates to appeals of judgments for possession in cases involving the nonpayment of rent, states that an appeal shall not be deemed taken and perfected unless a deposit of rentals be made in the justice of the peace court. It further provides that during the pendency of the action in the county court on appeal, further deposits of rent be made in the county court. General Am. Indus., Inc. v. County Court, 136 Colo. 86, 316 P.2d 565 (1957).

Rent owed is not included in general damages under § 13-40-117. Since this section requires a deposit of rent in nonpayment of rent cases, rentals were excluded as items of damage recoverable under the provision requiring an undertaking to cover damages which had accrued or would accrue. General Am. Indus., Inc.

v. County Court, 136 Colo. 86, 316 P.2d 565 (1957).

Appeals must be perfected in strict compliance with statutes. Appeals are creatures of statute, and a party desiring to avail himself of the right must comply with its terms, and unless he does so, and the appeal is perfected in strict compliance therewith, the appellate court has no power to make any order other than the order of dismissal. Erbaugh v. Fields, 77 Colo. 254, 235 P. 568 (1925).

This provision does not apply where land is rented for share of products from livestock. Routen v. J. & O. Ranch Co., 91 Colo. 53, 11 P.2d 566 (1932).

Applied in Francam Bldg. Corp. v. Fail, 687 P.2d 991 (Colo. App. 1984).

13-40-119. Rules of practice. In all actions brought under any provision of this article in any court, the proceedings shall be governed by the rules of practice and the provisions of law concerning civil actions in such court, except as may be otherwise provided in this article.

ANNOTATION

Allegations must be supported by proof. The rule which requires that the proof shall support the allegation is as applicable to the action of unlawful detainer as to any other. Klopfert v. Keller, 1 Colo. 410 (1871).

Misjoinder of causes of action must be demurred to in trial court. Objections on the ground that several causes of action have been improperly united, as well as on the ground of misjoinder of parties, must be taken by demurrer or otherwise in the trial court, or they are to be deemed waived. This rule is as applicable to actions for forcible entry and detainer as to other civil actions. Farncomb v. Stern, 18 Colo. 279, 32 P. 612 (1893).

Evidence tending to disprove the facts stated in the complaint is admissible on the part of the defendant, although such evidence might also tend to prove another case upon which the plaintiff might, if he had so declared, maintain his action. Klopfert v. Keller, 1 Colo. 410 (1871).

Defendant may show he entered premises as purchaser and not as tenant. In an action of unlawful detainer against a tenant holding over, for the purpose of disproving the tenancy, the defendant may show that he entered as a purchaser and not as a tenant, and this whether the agreement to purchase was good or bad. Klopfert v. Keller, 1 Colo. 410 (1871).

A directed verdict may be given. Where, in an action for unlawful detainer, there was no evidence which should have gone to the jury, nor any matter presented for the jury's determination which would deprive the landlord of his right of reentry and possession under the terms of a written lease, the court properly directed a verdict for plaintiff. Mageon v. Alkire, 41 Colo. 338, 92 P. 720 (1907).

13-40-120. Appellate review. Appellate review of the judgment of the district courts of this state, in proceedings under this article, is allowed as provided by law and the Colorado appellate rules. In cases of appeal from judgments founded upon causes of action embraced in section 13-40-104 (1) (d), the deposit of rent money during pendency of appeal shall be made, or judgment of affirmance shall be entered, in the manner provided in section 13-40-118.

ANNOTATION

Under this section the unsuccessful party may come to the supreme court on appeal or by writ of error. Kilker v. Herrington, 77 Colo. 581, 238 P. 41 (1925).

Right of appeal is subject to general law regulating appeals. The right of appeal under this statute was held subject to the conditions prescribed by the code of civil procedure, or other general law regulating appeals to the supreme court, and other additional conditions, as provided in this section. Crane v. Farmer, 14 Colo. 294, 23 P. 455 (1900); Brennan Mercantile Co. v. Vickers, 31 Colo. 323, 73 P. 45 (1903).

Strict compliance with the statutory requirements is mandated. Morgan v. District Court, 192 Colo. 418, 559 P.2d 712 (1977).

Act abolishing appeals does not apply to unlawful detainer proceedings. The act "in relation to appeals and writs of error" found in the former code of civil procedure, abolishing appeals, did not apply to, amend, or repeal the detainer act, or other statutes creating special proceedings. Hewitt v. Landis, 75 Colo. 277, 225 P. 842 (1924).

Applied in Maxwell v. District Court, 641 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); Francam Bldg. Corp. v. Fail, 687 P.2d 991 (Colo. App. 1984).

13-40-121. When deposit of rent is paid. The rent money deposited, as provided for in this article, shall be paid to the landlord entitled thereto, upon the order of the court wherein the same is deposited and at such time and in such manner as the court determines necessary to protect the rights of the parties.

13-40-122. Writ of restitution after judgment. (1) No writ of restitution shall issue upon any judgment entered in any action under the provisions of this article out of any court until after the expiration of forty-eight hours from the time of the entry of such judgment; and such writs shall be executed by the officer having the same only in the daytime and between sunrise and sunset. Any writ of restitution governed by this section may be executed by the county sheriff's office in which the property is located by a sheriff, undersheriff, or deputy sheriff, as described in section 16-2.5-103 (1) or (2), C.R.S., while off duty or on duty at rates charged by the employing sheriff's office in accordance with section 30-1-104 (1) (gg), C.R.S.

(2) The officer that executes a writ of restitution under subsection (1) of this section and the law enforcement agency that employs such officer shall be immune from civil liability for any damage to a tenant's personal property that was removed from the premises during the execution of the writ. A landlord who complies with the lawful directions of the officer executing a writ of restitution shall be immune from civil and criminal liability for any act or omission related to a tenant's personal property that was removed from the premises during or after the execution of a writ of restitution.

(3) A landlord has no duty to store or maintain a tenant's personal property that is removed from the premises during or after the execution of a writ of restitution. Regardless of whether a landlord elects to store or maintain the personal property so removed, the landlord shall have no duty to inventory the personal property or to determine ownership of or the condition of the personal property. Such storage shall not create either an implied or express bailment of the personal property, and the landlord shall be immune from liability for any loss or damage to the personal property.

(4) A landlord who elects to store a tenant's personal property that was removed from the premises during or after the execution of a writ of restitution may charge the tenant the reasonable costs of storing the personal property. To recover such costs, the landlord may either dispose of the personal property under any lien rights the landlord has under part 1 of article 20 of title 38, C.R.S., or the landlord may allow the tenant to recover the personal property after paying the reasonable storage charges incurred by the landlord.

ANNOTATION

Section limits time of enforcement of judgment, not judgment itself. The provision of this section that upon judgment for the plaintiff in wrongful detainer no writ of restitution shall issue until the expiration of 48 hours from its entry does not import that judgment may not be given for immediate possession. Its only effect is to stay the enforcement of the judgment for the period specified. Dulmaine v. Reed Bldg. Co., 46 Colo. 469, 104 P. 1038 (1909).

Sheriff subject to minimum standard of care. In carrying out his statutory duties, an officer or sheriff is subject to a minimum standard of care. Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

Duty to remove tenant and property. It is the officer's duty not only to remove the tenant, but also to remove the tenant's personal property and effects from the premises. Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

No duty to safeguard property following eviction. The sheriff has no duty to safeguard the tenant's possessions after a lawful eviction has occurred, even though he knows the tenant's belongings might be taken if they are left unattended. Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

For landlord's liability for damage to tenant's property during removal from premises, see Christensen v. Hoover, 643 P.2d 525 (Colo. 1982).

13-40-123. Damages. The prevailing party in any action brought under the provisions of this article is entitled to recover damages, reasonable attorney fees, and costs of suit; except that a residential landlord or tenant who is a prevailing party shall not be entitled to recover reasonable attorney fees unless the residential rental agreement between the parties contains a provision for either party to obtain attorney fees. Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the entry of judgments in any single proceeding in excess of the jurisdictional limit of said court.

ANNOTATION

Former provisions violated constitutional rights. Provisions of this section prior to the 1984 amendment, by imposing a pecuniary penalty on defendants for the benefit of prevailing plaintiffs without granting defendants a corresponding right, violated the defendants' fourteenth amendment right to the equal protection of law and was contrary to art. II, § 6, Colo. Const. More v. Johnson, 193 Colo. 489, 568 P.2d 437 (1977).

In a case involving multiple issues, the prevailing party for purposes of this section is the party adjudged to have the right to possession. Integra Fin. Inc. v. Grynberg Petroleum Co., 74 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2002).

The definition of "action" for purposes of this section excludes claims and counterclaims relating to nonpossessory issues. Integra Fin. Inc. v. Grynberg Petroleum Co., 74 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2002).

Damages are recoverable where lessee retains land after termination of the lease. Where possession of leased property is wrongfully retained by the lessee after termination of the lease, damages are recoverable against him. Strauss v. Boatright, 160 Colo. 581, 418 P.2d 878 (1966).

It seems to be well settled that the measure of such damages is the reasonable rental value for the time that possession was wrongfully withheld. Strauss v. Boatright, 160 Colo. 581, 418 P.2d 878 (1966).

Allowance of attorney's fees as part of judgment where not pursuant to contract expressed or implied. Gulf, Colo. and Santa Fe v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150, 17 S. Ct. 255, 41 L. Ed. 666 (1897); Los Angeles Gold Mining Co. v. Campbell, 13 Colo. App. 1, 56 P. 246 (1899); Davidson v. Jennings, 27 Colo. 187, 60 P. 354 (1900); Pacific Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Van Fleet, 47 Colo. 401, 107 P.1087 (1909); Commodore Mining Co. v. People, 82 Colo. 77, 257 P. 259 (1927); Denver Bldg. and Construction Trade Council v. Henry Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

This section provides for an award of attorney fees as damages for injury sustained during time landlord is deprived of possession of property. Allmer v. Andrews, 153 Colo. 487, 386 P.2d 705 (1963).

In a separate or supplemental proceeding. This section provides for such an award of attorney fees to be determined either in a separate action or in supplemental proceedings in the principal action and are in the nature of damages for injury sustained during the time he shall have been deprived of possession of the premises. Allmer v. Andrews, 153 Colo. 487, 386 P.2d 705 (1963).

Claims that do not bear on the right to possession are not part of a forcible entry and detainer action for purposes of awarding attorney fees. Schuler v. Oldervik, 143 P.3d 1197 (Colo. App. 2006).

It is proper, however, to award attorney fees concerning an ownership claim if it is necessary for the court to determine ownership of the property prior to making a determination regarding possession. Schuler v. Oldervik, 143 P.3d 1197 (Colo. App. 2006).

The amount of damages a prevailing plaintiff may recover in an F.E.D. action is the reasonable rental value of the premises during the time the other party continued an unlawful detainer. Behr v. Burge, 940 P.2d 1084 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where property was sold at a tax sale, the court erroneously awarded damages to plaintiffs for the rental value of property from the time the tax lien was recorded until dispossession of defendants since those damages could not begin to accrue at least until the execution and delivery of the director's deed. Behr v. Burge, 940 P.2d 1084 (Colo. App. 1996).

When this section is read with § 13-40-115, it is clear that the award of attorney fees in a forcible entry and detainer action is in the nature of compensatory damages. Thus, any prevailing party in a forcible entry and detainer action is entitled to attorney fees, and the trial court erred in refusing to award them. Wilcox v. Clark, 42 P.3d 29 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Torres v. Portillos, 638 P.2d 274 (Colo. 1981).

A. In General.

corpus, see 15 Colo. Law. 1618 (1986). For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with habeas corpus, see 64 Den. U. L. Rev. 225 (1987). For article, "Criminal Procedure", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with habeas corpus, see 65 Den. U. L. Rev. 553 (1988).

Habeas corpus has been designated the greatest of all writs, and the precious safeguard of personal liberty, concerning which courts are admonished that there is no higher duty than to maintain it unimpaired. Its ascendancy among the writs should be ever sustained. Geer v. Alaniz, 138 Colo. 177, 331 P.2d 260 (1958).

A complaint in the nature of mandamus may be treated as a habeas corpus proceeding. A complaint labeled for relief in the nature of mandamus, filed as an original proceeding in the supreme court seeking release of persons allegedly illegally confined, is essentially a proceeding in habeas corpus rather than mandamus. Riley v. City & County of Denver, 137 Colo. 312, 324 P.2d 790 (1958).

The purpose of proceedings in habeas corpus is to determine whether or not the person instituting them is illegally restrained of his liberty. Ex parte Casper, 26 Colo. App. 344, 144 P. 1137 (1914); Riley v. City & County of Denver, 137 Colo. 312, 324 P.2d 790 (1958); Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596

(1970); Eathorne v. Nelson, 180 Colo. 288, 505 P.2d 1 (1973); Collins v. Gunter, 834 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1992).

The essential purpose to be served with a writ of habeas corpus is to resolve the issue of whether a person is unlawfully detained. Ryan v. Cronin, 191 Colo. 487, 553 P.2d 754 (1976); Mulkey v. Sullivan, 753 P.2d 1226 (Colo. 1988); Johnson v. Gunter, 852 P.2d 1263 (Colo. 1993).

Therefore, because the issues involved in habeas corpus proceedings are very narrow, Crim. P. 54(b)(2) provides that the rules of criminal procedure are not applicable to habeas corpus proceedings, and a court may only authorize discovery under said rules if an appellant clearly shows the information sought will be relevant to the very narrow issues of the habeas corpus hearing. Temen v. Barry, 695 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1984).

Where imprisonment is without warrant or authority, the prisoner is entitled to discharge. Harper v. Montez, 149 Colo. 569, 370 P.2d 154 (1962).

It is incumbent upon a defendant to exhaust his legal remedies before asking the indulgence of the court in the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Garrett v. Knight, 173 Colo. 419, 480 P.2d 569 (1971).

A writ of habeas corpus cannot be substituted for a writ of error. Where the trial judge and defendant's counsel misconceived the law and permitted defendant to be subjected to a penitentiary sentence when the court was limited in its judgment to imposing a sentence for a term in the county jail, the judgment of the trial court could and should have been corrected by a writ of error issued out of the supreme court. A habeas corpus writ is an extraordinary writ which may be procured, not as a matter of right, but in the discretion of the court, when the defendant has exhausted his legal remedies. Hart v. Best, 119 Colo. 569, 205 P.2d 787 (1949); People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 121 Colo. 141, 215 P.2d 327 (1949); Farrell v. District Court, 135 Colo. 329, 311 P.2d 410 (1957); Zimmerman v. Angele, 137 Colo. 129, 321 P.2d 1105 (1958); Lewis v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 117, 330 P.2d 532 (1958); Mendez v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 127, 336 P.2d 706 (1959); Gallegos v. Tinsley, 139 Colo. 157, 337 P.2d 386 (1959); Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959); McKenna v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 516, 351 P.2d 456 (1960); Valentine v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 19, 351 P.2d 825 (1960); Bates v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 390, 353 P.2d 76 (1960); Nickle v. Reeder, 144 Colo. 593, 357 P.2d 921 (1960); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Specht v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 235, 385

P.2d 423 (1963); Smith v. Tinsley, 223 F. Supp. 68 (D. Colo. 1963); Saxton v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 112 (10th Cir. 1966); Martinez v. Patterson, 382 F.2d 1002 (10th Cir. 1967); McGill v. Leach, 180 Colo. 331, 505 P.2d 374 (1973).

The writ of habeas corpus may not be used as a substitute for an appeal and a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus may not be used as a basis for reviewing issues resolved by another court. Ryan v. Cronin, 191 Colo. 487, 553 P.2d 754 (1976).

Erroneous judgments are not subject to attack by use of the writ of habeas corpus. It is to be used only where the judgment is void. Ryan v. Cronin, 191 Colo. 487, 553 P.2d 754 (1976); Mulkey v. Sullivan, 753 P.2d 1226 (Colo. 1988).

It may not be used to consider sufficiency of evidence. Sufficiency of evidence may not be raised in a habeas corpus proceeding for it is not a substitute for a writ of error. Johnson v. Tinsley, 155 Colo. 346, 394 P.2d 842 (1964).

Prisoner may not attack validity of foreign detainer through habeas corpus petition. It is improper for a prisoner serving a sentence in Colorado to attack the validity of a foreign detainer through a habeas corpus petition. The proper procedure was to obtain disposition of the charges in the state where they were pending. Russell v. Cooper, 724 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1986); Butler v. Zavaras, 924 P.2d 1060 (Colo. 1996).

A writ of habeas corpus does not run against the people of the state of Colorado. Oates v. People, 136 Colo. 208, 315 P.2d 196 (1957); Olson v. People, 138 Colo. 310, 332 P.2d 486 (1958); Lowe v. People, 139 Colo. 578, 342 P.2d 631 (1959); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963); Petition of Gallegos v. Schooley, 155 Colo. 215, 393 P.2d 573 (1964); People v. Calyer, 736 P.2d 1204 (Colo. 1987).

The only parties before a trial court in a habeas corpus proceeding are the petitioner and the person having him in custody, and the only question properly before the trial court is the authority of the respondent to restrain petitioner of his liberty. *Stilley v.
